BATTLE IN PRISON, CONVICTS ESCAPE

ARMED CITIZENS GUARD TOWN

GOVERNOR MAY SEND TROOPS

Special to The New York Times.

RAWLINS, Wyo., Oct. 13.—With a fight proceeding between guards and hundreds of mutinous convicts locked within the State Penitentiary here, with a strong posse of armed citizens waiting outside to drive back the prisoners if they should overcome the guards; with another posse in the hills to the south of the city attacking convicts who escaped yesterday and to-day, and with the streets patrolled by armed men looking for some of the escaped fugitives and ready to cope with any rush from the prison the situation here is critical to-night.

Gov. Carey has been bombarded with telegrams demanding that the militia be called out to take charge of the situation and thoroughly subdue the convicts. He has cut short a campaign trip, and is hurrying to Cheyenne to learn the extent of the trouble and decide what shall be done. Meanwhile every able-bodied man who could get arms is on guard duty.

Conditions at the penitentiary have been alarming since the convicts on Oct. 2 learned their ability to master the guards. That day they lynched Frank Wigfall, a negro, who had boasted at breakfast of his assault on an aged woman who had befriended some of the prisoners. Attempts of the prison authorities to learn the identity of the leaders in the lynching united the convicts in such fashion that they found they could rely on concerted action in a mutiny.

Twenty in the First Break.

Just what has happened in the prison in the last two days is not known, as the guards have locked themselves and the convicts in and are too busy to communicate in detail with citizens.

Twenty convicts, led by the notorious "Butch" Dalton, serving a life term for murder, dashed out of the prison stockade yesterday and into the rough hills back of it. Of these only eight have been captured. Seven of these were found hiding in outbuildings and cellars in town and the other was run down on the prairie. The twelve who are still at large are believed to have taken refuge at a big sheep camp and firing could be heard in that direction to-night, indicating that a posse had surrounded them.

At 2:30 this afternoon a party of desperate life-termers led by Antone Pasquale, a Mexican, overpowered the cell house keeper, took his keys and released their comrades. Every prisoner willing to risk a battle with the guards made a rush for the gates. Then the citizens of the town heard a fusillade of shots inside the walls. A bedlam of shouts and yells echoed from the prison. A few minutes later more than a dozen men dashed down the main street, armed with guns and knives. Holding a few citizens at bay with revolvers, they charged into a livery barn, held up the proprietor and hastily threw saddles and bridles on the horses.

Two Killed in Fight in Town.

A huge negro armed with a revolver was left as guard on the outside. Charles Stressner, a barber, had heard the commotion, and came down the street with a shotgun. The negro shot him through the head, killing him.

At the sound of the shot the convicts swarmed from the barn, some with stolen horses and some afoot. Pasquale wantonly stabbed the proprietor in the face, severely wounding him, and a few seconds later paid for the deed with his life.

Reaching the railroad yards, the convicts took refuge behind box cars, but were soon dislodged by penitentiary guards and armed citizens who came up. Pasquale was killed on the first volley by Hugh Rogner, a Deputy Sheriff. Other convicts were wounded, but they continued their flight, two being captured in the yards.

The flight led to the rocky hills south of the town, with the guards in close pursuit. Before the bewildered citizens had time to act, pursuers and fugitives had disappeared. In a short time posses had been formed, and one of the most desperate man hunts in the history of the West was on. The convicts scattered, all striving to escape in the almost impassable stretch of rocky country between here and the Colorado line. Until nightfall a running battle was kept up, and late to-night occasional volleys of shots in the distance told of the progress of the man hunt.

Six Convicts Caught in a Trap.

Just before nightfall six convicts were located in a canyon about a mile south of Rawlins. Twenty deputies, each armed with two revolvers and a repeating rifle, were sent to capture or kill them. The deputies reached the spot and found the convicts barricaded and ready for battle.

AUTO BANDITS IN BLACK FACE.

Ignored Gutstein's Money, but Shot Him and Fled—Woman in the Case.

When Israel Gutstein, a young butcher of 745 East 176th Street, was taken to Fordham Hospital early yesterday morning dying from a bullet wound in the abdomen, it was supposed that the ebony-faced men who had gone into his shop, demanded his money, shot him and escaped in a waiting limousine, were negro holdup men. But the detectives who have been working on the case are of the opinion that they are neither holdup men nor negroes. It is now believed that the young butcher was shot in revenge by men who had blacked their faces and donned automobile caps for disguise. Last evening the police were questioning a woman, who, it is understood, had once been very close to Gutstein, but from whom he had been separated of late.

Gutsein and his partner, Abraham Maxon, were closing up their butcher shop at 1:30 yesterday morning, when a tall man and a short man, with their faces as black as coal, came in with drawn guns. Maxon took to the back room and hid behind the ice box, while Gutstein hastily dragged forth $45 and proffered it. Then the tall man fired, and the two left without touching the money that dropped from the butcher's hands as he fell to the floor.

Neighbors, aroused by the shot, hung out of their windows in time to see the short man running for a big black limousine a few steps down the curb. Repeatedly he urged his taller companion to hurry, always addressing him as "Dave," and finally both drove off down the street. Witnesses insist that no number plate was displayed on the auto.

KEEPS HER THREAT TO DIE.

Mrs. Christman, Saved from Wheels of Elevated Train, Kills Herself Later.

Mrs. Annie Christman, of 1528 Hoe Avenue, the Bronx, after a dispute with her brother, Jacob Eigesger, on the platform of the 129th Street Station of the Third Avenue Elevated Railroad late Saturday night, attempted suicide by jumping in front of a passing train. The train was going so slowly that the motorman, Edward Murray, was able to stop it before it reached the woman. Thwarted in this attempt to die, she tried to step on the third rail. This was prevented by her brother and a station guard who jumped to the track and seized her.

At the East 126th Street Station, where she was taken, Mrs. Christman declared that, having no home, she would kill herself before the night was over. She was put in a cell for the night and the police matron, Mrs. Bridget Marron, was put on guard outside to prevent her from harming herself. Early yesterday morning, when the prisoner seemed to have fallen asleep, the police matron left her to attend to some other prisoners.

Returning a few minutes later, she found Mrs. Christman hanging from a cross bar of her cell by a halter made of her skirt and shoe strings. She was quickly cut down and Dr. Summerville of the Harlem Hospital was called, but she died before the arrival of the surgeon.

SAYS DR. CLAPP TRESPASSED.

Boston Dentist Has Senator's Nephew Arrested for Crossing Estate.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 13.—Dr. Edwin J. Clapp, nephew of Senator Moses E. Clapp of Minnesota, traffic expert of the port of Boston, and former Professor of Trade and Transportation in the New York University of Commerce, trespassed, so it is alleged, on the estate of a Boston dentist at Wellesley while taking a morning constitutional a week ago and will fight the charge in the Dedham District Court to-morrow.

Dr. Clapp denied that he trespassed. The dentist, Dr. M. J. Fenton, said that Dr. Clapp disregarded signs warning persons against crossing his estate. Dr. Clapp, it is said, contends that the land is within the confines of the Metropolitan Water Commission's property and that the public cannot be excluded.

Dr. Clapp, who went to Wellesley to live after becoming the Port Director's traffic expert, left his home near the Fenton estate early last Sunday morning for a stroll about the aqueduct. After crossing the boundary of the dentist's estate, he was accosted by the policeman on duty. He admitted observing the printed warnings but said he had a right to walk along the aqueduct, because it was State property. A warrant was then issued for his arrest.

DUCK HUNTER KILLS FRIEND.

R. A. F. Godigkeit Exonerated by Justice Who Investigates

MERRICK, L. I., Oct. 13.—Justice of the Peace Norton of Wantagh, after an investigation of the death of John Baptiste Alter, 23 years old, who was shot by his friend Rhinehardt A. F. Godigkeit, decided that the shooting was accidental. He paroled Godigkeit on his own recognizance to appear for a hearing when wanted.

Alter was killed yesterday afternoon. Godigkeit shot at a wild duck and hit Alter in the head with the full charge of his gun.

They had erected a "blind" of poultry wire, and Alter sat within this while Godigkeit threw himself down seven or eight feet away.

Two birds flew by and Alter and Godigkeit saw them simultaneously. Godigkeit jumped to his feet and fired at them. He saw Alter spring up at the same time and fire and then drop from view. Both shots missed, but Godigkiet suspected nothing from Alter's action. He thought he had dropped down again to wait for the birds. After waiting some time Godigkiet decided to start for home. As he pushed his way toward the "blind" he almost stumbled over his friend's body. He went to a telephone station and called the Coroner.

MANY "DYNAMITE LETTERS."

Prosecution Has Enough to Keep Witnesses Busy for a Week.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 13.—Enough letters will be on hand before the jury in the "dynamite conspiracy" trial to-morrow to keep witnesses busy for a week identifying them.

The letters are said by the Government to have been written by the defendants in arranging for explosions for six years. They were taken from the files of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers. Upon their contents, and upon extracts from the union's monthly magazine, and Ortie McManigal's confession, District Attorney Charles W. Miller has announced that the prosecution will base its charge that a conspiracy for the illegal inter-State shipment of explosives on passenger trains was knowingly entered into.

McManigal will not be reached as a witness until after some 700 exhibits have been identified. His confession implicating others also deals with the blowing up by him personally of twenty-one open shop plants scattered from Boston to Los Angeles.

Six hundred more witnesses have already been subpoenaed by the prosecution. Counsel for the defense, headed by Senator John W. Kern, say that a great number of witnesses will testify as to the character of the labor union men on trial.

BALKAN STATES GIVE SULTAN ULTIMATUM

POWERS ALSO REBUFFED

Reply to Them Milder Than Expected, but Servia Rejects Proposals—Montenegrins Capture Town.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Oct. 14.—Bulgaria presented a note to Turkey last night and a separate note to Austria and Russia in behalf of the Balkan States.

While the declaration is described in some quarters as an ultimatum, no time limit is imposed for the reply from Turkey, and in some quarters there is a disposition to think this not only leaves the door still open for peace but also that it is an indication that the Balkan league is far from being so ready to proceed to the last extremity of war as has been generally supposed.

An eminent financier expressed the opinion yesterday that Bulgaria had been bluffing, but at the same time it was stated that the bluff had been carried so far that it would be difficult to close the game without bloodshed.

According to a dispatch to The Times from Sofia the note presented to Turkey says that notwithstanding the promise of the great powers to take in hand the realization of reforms in European Turkey the Governments of the allied States feel bound to address themselves directly to the Sublime Porte and declare that only radical reforms, sincerely and integrally applied, can improve the miserable condition of the Christian population of European Turkey, guarantee order and tranquillity in that country, and assure durable peace between Turkey and the Balkan States.

The three States, regretting that Montenegro cannot join them owing to recent events, invite Turkey to apply the reforms indicated in Article XXIII. of the Berlin treaty, on the basis of the principle of nationality, with administrative autonomy of the provinces, Belgian or Swiss Governors, elective Assemblies, their own gendarmerie and militia, and free education, the reforms to be applied by a council composed of an equal number of Christians and Moslems, under the superintendency of the Ambassadors of the powers and the Ministers of the four States in Constantinople.

The note finally demands an undertaking on the part of the Porte to execute the reforms within six months and to recall the order for mobilization.

With reference to Bulgaria's answer to Austria and Russia, who acted for the powers, the Sofia correspondent says:

"In it the three Governments express their gratitude at the interest shown by the great powers in the condition of the populations of European Turkey and takes cognizance of their promise to undertake the realization of the reforms in administration on the basis of Article XXIII. of the Berlin treaty.

"After so many promises made by Turkey and recorded in international documents, it would be cruel to these populations not to endeavor to obtain more radical and definite reforms in order to ameliorate their condition.

"Three States, therefore, have addressed themselves directly to Turkey, indicating the general nature of these reforms and the necessary guarantees for their application. Should the Turkish Government act as proposed, order and tranquillity will be established in the Ottoman dominions and durable peace will be assured between Turkey and the Balkan States, toward which Turkey has too often assumed an arbitrary and provocative attitude."

The Times, commenting on these notes, takes a pessimistic view of the situation and declares there is no chance that the Porte will grant these concessions, and war may be expected at any moment.

A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Podgoritza, Montenegro, says:

"No permits have been issued to leave Podgoritza for the front, the order of the Minister of War being that until the revolutionary fighting is over and the regular plan of campaign is entered upon, no war correspondents or military attachés may witness the operations.

"The Minister of the Interior kindly received me and explained the general outline of this plan.

"'The Montenegrin forces are split up into three armies,' he said—'one, consisting of three columns, which is now surrounding seventeen battalions of Turks at Tushi; another army is moving on Scutari, on the west side of Lake Scutari, and a third is lying near by. The three columns will move on Scutari, on the east side of the lake, supported in the rear by some of the troops from Berane.'"

Trying to Halt Panic.

A Paris dispatch to the Times says:

"Strenuous efforts, which are vigorously seconded by the well informed press, are being directed to calming the excited state of European feeling and the alarm, which was reflected at the close of the week on the European Bourses.

SIX HURT, TWO BADLY, IN RUNAWAY AUTO

YOUNG CHAUFFEUR VANISHES

He Was the Only One Unhurt, the Others Being Caught Beneath the Wreck of the Car.

Six persons were injured, two probably mortally, yesterday afternoon when a seven-passenger auto, becoming unmanagable, skidded and raced down the steep Abbey Hill on Fort Washington Avenue, struck the curb, where the Avenue meets Broadway at the foot of the hill, and overturned. The auto, after striking the curb, made a complete somersault, burying its passengers beneath it. The injured were removed to Washington Heights Hospital. They were:

HAYDEN, Mrs. JOSEPH J., 26; lacerations and contusions and shock.

LANE, GEORGE, 44, hotel keeper, 3,612 Tilden Avenue, Brooklyn; fracture of left leg and multiple cuts and bruises.

LANE, Mrs. GEORGE, 25; cuts and bruises of body.

REGAN, WILLIAM, 38, a manufacturer of granite monuments, 264 East Thirty-fourth Street, Brooklyn; fractured nose and skull, and multiple contusions and shock. His condition is critical.

REGAN, Mrs. WILLIAM, 33; concussion of the brain, internal injuries, and shock. She was taken to the hospital unconscious. Her condition is critical.

The three men hired the auto yesterday afternoon from Charles Hohorst of 348 Thirteenth Street, Brooklyn, and the party started for Manhattan on a pleasure trip to witness the review of battleships in the Hudson. Harry Miller, 23 years old, a chauffeur for the Hohorst garage, was driving the car. The party spent some time riding up and down the Drive, viewing the warships in the Hudson, and then it was decided to take a run to Yonkers.

Miller took the car along Riverside Drive, and at 181st Street turned north into Fort Washington Avenue. He circled the Abbey Inn, and then started down the steep incline to Broadway.

This hill is not only steep, but has many crooked turns. It has long been regarded by automobilists as treacherous. It had recently been oiled, and yesterday autoists exercised great care in descending it.

Miller was half way down the hill when, according to his story to the police, the brakes of the machine failed to work, and the wheels began to skid recklessly on the winding road. He narrowly missed striking the curbing several times as the car plunged down the hill. At the bottom of the hill the off side of the curb juts out, and the machine was heading directly for the curb, when Miller attempted to avoid it by turning into Broadway, but the speed of the car was too great. Just before the machine struck it the occupants of the car started to their feet, as though they intended to leap. The car narrowly missed a lamppost, and then turned over. Miller was thrown out uninjured.

A few minutes after the accident Broadway was filled with automobiles. Mounted Patrolman Gorman sent in a call for ambulances, and three of them were sent from the hospital when it was known that six persons were injured. In the meantime, however, the injured were taken in three autos to the hospital. The autoists met the ambulances on the way, and called to them that they had the injured.

Mrs. Regan was removed unconscious from beneath the wrecked machine. She did not regain consciousness until four hours after the accident. At the hospital the last rites were administered to Mr. Regan by Father Dwyer, of St. Rose of Lima Catholic Church.

After the accident Miller, the chauffeur, disappeared. His employer said last night the chauffeur was at home.

AGED WOMAN KILLED.

Two Others in Auto Badly Hurt When Ohio Car Hits Machine.

LANCASTER, Ohio, Oct. 13.—Mrs. Margaret Clouse, aged 77, was instantly killed and her daughter, Josephine Clouse, and Harry Green, all of Somerset, Ohio, were dangerously injured this evening when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a traction car at Carroll, a village near here.

The machine was driven by Dr. Michael Clouse, who was prevented from seeing the approaching car by a sharp turn in the road. He escaped without injuries. Miss Clouse and Green were hurled 150 feet by the force of the collision. They are suffering from fractured skulls.

BLICKENSDERFER HURTS TWO.

Boy and Chauffeur in Car He Ran Down Not Expected to Live.

HARRISON, N. Y., Oct. 13.—George C. Blickensderfer, the typewriter manufacturer of Stamford, Conn., was driving his motor car along Westchester Avenue in Porchase, near here, late this afternoon when he ran into a car just turning in from Purchase Street. In this second car, which belonged to R. J. Bucholz, a chauffeur was bringing Mr. Bucholz's two sons home from a spin around the town.

The younger boy, 6-year-old Charles Bucholz, was pinned beneath his father's overturned machine while the other three were thrown to the street. Mr. Blickensderfer and the older Bucholz boy escaped with slight injury, but William St. John, the chauffeur, and Charles Bucholz are in the United Hospital at Port Chester, and small hope is felt for their recovery. The boy's left leg has been amputated at the hip.

BOY KILLED BY AUTO.

Hartnay Burns, 8 years old, of Riverside Road and Dyckman Street, was run over and instantly killed yesterday morning by an automobile owned and driven by William F. Uhler, 228 South Second Street, Mount Vernon. The boy was crossing the Riverside Road, and Uhler was driving slowly when the boy stepped in front of it.

ARCHBOLD YACHT RAN FLEET GUESTS DOWN

SMALL CRAFT DASHED ABOUT

Archbold Seamen and U. S. Sailors Save Those Swamped by Standard Oil Man's Boat.

Marked by the death of an Ensign and a sailor and by the greatest throng of visitors that ever descended upon an American fleet, yesterday will long dwell in the memories of the seamen on the warships now anchored in the Hudson. In addition to the death of the officer and bluejacket, a boat loaded with civilians was cut in two by John D. Archbold's yacht, the Vixon II., late in the afternoon, and hundreds of persons going in small craft to and from the warships were imperilled throughout the day by the wash from the excursion steamers which steamed around the fleet.

The officer who lost his life was Ensign William Joseph Butler of the battleship Nebraska. He graduated from Annapolis a year ago and would have been 25 years old next month. The accident which cost him his life occurred at 5:30 o'clock yesterday morning, when the launches of the warships were practically the only craft moving in the river. The Nebraska lies opposite West 142d Street, where the water is nearly always rough. At the turn of the tide the river at this point is particularly dangerous for small boats.

Officer Drowned from Launch.

Ensign Butler had hired a small launch at the foot of West 158th Street to put him on board the Nebraska. The launch came alongside the battleship in good shape and Butler stood up in the stern, ready to jump for the accommodation ladder. Suddenly the boat gave a heavy lurch, and the young officer losing his balance fell overboard between the boat and the battleship.

Several sailors who were on the deck of the Nebraska and who saw the accident jumped overboard in an effort to save the officer, who was believed to have been swept under the Nebraska by the heavy tide that was running at the time. Butler disappeared immediately beneath the water and was not seen again.

All the available launches of the Nebraska were quickly launched, life belts were thrown into the water, and every effort was made to save the officer. For several hours the launches cruised about trying to recover the body, but when darkness came on last night no trace of it had been found. Ensign Butler was born in Massachusetts, and he was appointed to Annapolis from that State in 1907. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1911, and his entire active service had been aboard the Nebraska, which is one of the five ships of the Third Division of the Atlantic Fleet.

The name of the sailor who was drowned had not been determined last night. His death was reported to the police by William Keating, the owner of a launch plying between the 158th Street landing and the vessels anchored to the north of West 136th Street. Keating said the sailor had hired his boat at 5 o'clock to get aboard the Rhode Island before the morning roll call. There were several persons in his boat, Keating declared, and the man who was drowned sat in the stern. When he was half way to the Rhode Island, which is anchored off 146th Street, Keating said a swell caught his boat and the sailor fell overboard. Several of those in the boat, he said, jumped in after the bluejacket, who had disappeared.

Archbold Yacht Cuts Boat in Two.

The other accident of the day happened when the motor boat Mastick was cut in two by the Vixen II., owned by John D. Archbold. There were eleven persons in the motor boat, of whom five were women and two were children. The owner of the Mastick, Bernard Bauer of 1,333 Bristow Street, the Bronx, was at the wheel, and those in the boat with him were the members of his family and several friends. The collision occurred off West Thirty-eighth Street at 3 o'clock in the afternoon when the motorboat which was proceeding down stream, was abreast of the armored cruiser division of the fleet.

The Vixen II., 182 feet long, was going up stream and had on board Mr. Archbold and a party of his friends. Mr. Bauer, the owner of the motor boat, decided to get nearer the Manhattan shore on the other side of the Vixen. He sounded two whistles, indicating that he was going to port, and the Vixen II. replied. A moment later, according to Bauer, the yacht made a turn to starboard. It was quickly seen that collision was inevitable, and Mr. Archbold shouted to his skipper to make every possible effort to get around the motor boat, and in the event of his failure to have the sailors and the Vixen's lifeboats ready to go to the rescue.

On the armored cruisers and the battleship Maine the officers and bluejackets saw what was about to happen, and two steam launches from the Maine and the armored cruiser North Carolina headed full speed for the Mastick. A minute later the big Archbold yacht crashed into the Mastic, striking it a terrific blow amidships, and the knife-like prow of the yacht cut the Mastick in two as if it had been made of tissue paper. Every person on the motor launch except Mrs. Bauer, the aged mother of the owner, was thrown into the water. Seaman Kearney, coxswain of the Maine launch, headed for her, and pulled her into his boat. She was cut about the head and arms, and later was taken to the J. Hood Wright Hospital.

Mr. Archbold directed the work of rescue from his yacht, and ordered those saved brought on board the Vixen. All but three were taken to the yacht and the Vixen speeded to West 129th Street, where she landed the passengers of the Mastick. In addition to Mrs. Baur, the two Heap children and Miss Gasser were found to be suffering from immersion and they were taken to the J. Hood Wright Hospital.

Those in the Mastick, when she was rammed, were Charles Bauer, 70 years old, 1,333 Bristow Street, the Bronx; Victoria Bauer, 60 years old, same address; Charles Heap, 4 years old, same address; William Heap, 5 years old, same address; Henry Hessig, 37 years old, 500 West 150th Street; Dora Gasser, 30 years old, 855 Home Street, the Bronx; John C. Gasser, 40 years old, same address; Addie Drews, 42 years old, 500 West 150th

SEARCH LINER FOR COUPE.

But Neither He Nor De Ford Is Discovered on the Mauretania.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

QUEENSTOWN, Oct. 13.—A thorough search of the Cunard liner Mauretania when she put in here to-day on her way to New York failed to discover Thomas Coupe, the witness wanted to testify against Lieut. Becker, or Assistant District Attorney De Ford, who was supposed to be accompanying Coupe back to New York.

If they are aboard they are under assumed names, De Ford probably a saloon passenger and Coupe in the second cabin. Passengers said that a man resembling Coupe was in the second cabin, but all the officers denied that either was aboard. Possibly Coupe is traveling disguised as a woman or a foreigner.

Special Cables to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The Daily Mirror's Liverpool correspondent asserts positively that Coupe and De Ford are aboard the Mauretania, both taking the greatest pains to remain unobserved. Mr. De Ford, the correspondent says, occupies cabin E3.

MAKES HOT SPRINGS SIT UP.

Special to The New York Times.

HOT SPRINGS, Va., Oct. 13.—Mrs. Alexander Brown, prominent in Baltimore society, this afternoon set a stiff pace for women cigarette smokers here to follow. While the lounge of the fashionable Homestead Hotel was crowded during a rainstorm, she walked up and down for a half hour, stopping here and there to converse with acquaintances, meantime smoking incessantly. She used an ivory cigarette holder bound with gold, a pretty little trinket that she waved around with the smoking weed inserted, by way of emphasizing her remarks.

The ultra-fashionables here in the height of the season have smoked a good deal in times past, but this is the first occasion when a woman of social prominence has been quite so public about it.

FERRYBOATS IN COLLISION.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, Oct. 13.—As the ferryboats Rockland and Flushing were leaving their slips on the 3 o'clock trip this afternoon they collided, and the Flushing was driven on a sand bar for half an hour.

Both boats carried automobile parties, and for a time there was considerable excitement. Neither boat was put out of commission by the accident.

WED IN SMALL HOURS.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 13.—Robert M. Simons, aged 47, of 43 East Twenty-ninth Street, New York, a cigar manufacturer, and Miss Dora E. Nelson, aged 37, of 41 East Twenty-ninth Street, New York, were married here early this morning after considerable trouble.

On arriving from New York at 1 o'clock they first aroused Magistrate Lewis and obtained a marriage license. An hour later they routed the Rev. George L. Wolfe from his bed, and he at once married them at his home.

The excuse they made to the clergyman for their haste was that they missed an earlier train from New York and wanted to catch the next. They returned to that city soon after the ceremony.

Mr. Simons said he had never been married before.

There is a boarding house at 41-43 East Twenty-ninth Street. It was denied last night that Mr. Simons and his bride were known there.

CLEVELAND EGG BOYCOTT ON.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 13.—Starting on Monday 40,000 people living in Cleveland and Northern Ohio will abstain from eating eggs for three weeks. President Frank S. Krause of the Thirty-Cent Egg Club issued the boycott on eggs Saturday to become effective Monday. For the last two years the Thirty-Cent Egg Club has fought the storage men, and each time, according to Krause, has succeeded in forcing the price down to thirty cents. "Strictly fresh" eggs sold on Saturday for forty three cents a dozen, and retailers say prices will go still higher.

"We have about 20,000 members of the Thirty-Cent Egg Club whom we can surely depend upon, and about twice that number who sympathize with the movement, and who will support it," said Krause, "and we plan to make the fight national."

NEWARK POLICEMAN SLAIN.

Had a Prisoner in Custody When Shot by Two Men, Who Got Away.

Policeman John J. McGovern of the Second Precinct was shot to death by two Italians on Crane Street, near High Street, Newark, late last night. McGovern at the time was taking a prisoner to a call box. The Italians approached from behind and got into an argument with him.

The street was deserted, but John McConnell, opposite whose house the murder was committed, said that he was at a window, and a moment after the argument began four shots rang out, and the policeman fell to the sidewalk. At the same time his prisoner and the other two men fled to High Street, where they separated and disappeared in the darkness.

The shooting brought scores of people from their homes. They found the policeman in a pool of blood and unconscious. He had a bullet wound in his heart and another in his abdomen. His own revolver was missing, and it was believed that one of the Italians wrenched it from his grasp and shot him with it, or else that he was drawing it when killed and the murderers stole it. It has not been learned who the prisoner was McGovern had or where he got him.

McIntyre Calls Whitman's Conduct Amazing, and Says State's Witnesses Were Rehearsed.

In order to drive home the impressive testimony of "Billiard Ball" Jack Rose, the first witness to be called against Lieut. Becker when his trial for the murder of Herman Rosenthal is resumed to-day, will be "Bridgey" Webber, whose story of Becker's insistence on the death of the "squealing" gambler will corroborate that of Rose in all its essential points. Harry Vallon and Sam Schepps, according to the plans of District Attorney Whitman last night, will follow Webber to the stand.

Next to the testimony of Rose, which covered every detail of the murder conspiracy, the prosecution relies on the story which Webber will tell to convict the former leader of the Strong Arm Squad.

Unless Webber is discredited, his story will add great strength to the case for the prosecution. He will be a more damaging witness against Becker than Schepps or Vallon, because he will tell of taking directions from Becker in person for the killing of Rosenthal. He will tell how he demurred when Becker sent for him in the first place. He will tell how he objected that he did not want to lay himself liable to the charge of murder. Then, it is understood, he will describe how Becker promised that he would protect everybody concerned in slaying Rosenthal. He will bear out Rose's account of the conversation, in which he quoted Becker as having said:

"There is nothing to happen to anybody that has any hand in the croaking of Rosenthal. I don't know whether Rose is stalling, or weakening, or whatever it is, or whether these fellows won't take Jack's word for it. Now, you step into this thing, Bridgey. Take charge of things and see that this is done for me, won't you?"

Webber, it is understood, will describe how he went swiftly to work after he had yielded to Becker's arguments. A few nights after the conversation with Lieut. Becker, Webber, with the help of Vallon and Rose, organized the party which went in a taxicab to the Garden Restaurant, at Fiftieth Street and Seventh Avenue, where the murder of Rosenthal was first planned to take place. Webber will tell how the word that a Burns detective was guarding Rosenthal frightened them out on this occasion, and then describe how "Lefty Louie," "Gyp the Blood," and "Dago Frank" were picked up again late on the night of July 15; how "Whitey Lewis" was added to the party, and how the murder was finally committed after word was received that Rosenthal was at the Metropole.

Schepps's story will be next in importance to that of Webber. He carried messages back and forth between Becker and Rose during the three days following the murder, and his testimony regarding these messages is expected to be of great value to the prosecution.

As in the case of Rose and Webber, the counsel for the defense will endeavor in cross-examination to show that Schepps and Vallon are capable of perjury and any other crime, rather than to catch them in conflicting statements.

Mrs. Rosenthal to Tell of Threats.

District Attorney Whitman expects that it will be possible to get through with these witnesses to-day. Their stories will be brief, compared to the lengthy recital of Rose. It had not been decided last night at what period in the trial Mrs. Rosenthal would be placed on the stand. She may be called after Webber, Vallon, and Schepps, but it is probable that she will be one of the last witnesses.

Mrs. Rosenthal's testimony is expected to be damaging to Becker, as her story will cover in detail all the relations between Becker and her husband. She has declared that Becker personally threatened her husband with death if he did not give up his intention of "squealing," and has described the fear that Becker would cause him to be assassinated which haunted the last days of the gambler's life.

John F. McIntyre, leading counsel for the defense, said yesterday that he considered the case of the prosecution so far so extremely weak that he had about decided not to put in any defense and to rely on the State's case to acquit his client. Mr. McIntyre had said repeatedly that he intended to put Becker on the stand, but yesterday he was so satisfied that no man would believe Rose or his accomplices that he declared there would be no necessity to subject the accused Lieutenant to the ordeal of testifying. Although he was anxiously inquiring as to the impression which Rose's testimony had made on others, Mr. McIntyre professed to be positive that the jurymen gave it no credit whatever.

Mr. McIntyre said, also, that he would ask for the indictment for murder of Rose, Vallon, Schepps, and Webber on their own confessions, and at the close of the trial would ask Justice Goff to turn the court records over to the Grand Jury for action.

On this point District Attorney Whitman said last night:

"Mr. McIntyre is in a position to ask such a thing if he wants to. The matter of granting it, however, rests with the Justice. You must remember also that their testimony has already been heard by one Grand Jury."

McIntyre and Whitman Threatened.

District Attorney Whitman yesterday got the usual installment of threatening letters. In addition, he got a letter from a friend, advising him that he was in danger, and naming the man to be feared. Mr. McIntyre had a large mail of the same character, some of the letters promising sudden death for him if he were successful in acquitting Becker.

Mr. McIntyre has the unenviable distinction of being the first man in the case to be threatened personally. This is his story of the incident:

"I had just finished gathering up my papers and was starting to leave the courtroom, after adjournment on Saturday night. All the other lawyers had gone, and the police who had been guarding the courtroom had left. When I swung open the gate of the counsel's inclosure I found myself face to face with a man who had a murderous look in his eyes. He thrust his head forward till his face was within a few inches of mine, and said:

"'If you drag Mrs. Rose's name into this case I'll blow the top of your head off.'"

Mr. McIntyre, who was exhausted after the long session in the courtroom and was carrying a strong recollection of the numerous letters threatening his life, admits that he was startled. Regaining his self-possession, he threatened the man with immediate arrest. When, however, the threat was repeated the lawyer called to a man who was standing near the outside door of the courtroom, asking:

"Did you hear what this fellow said?"

The third man pushed over to Mr. McIntyre's side and said he had heard. Two or three others, attracted from the corridors by the loud talking, entered into the courtroom, and the man who had threatened Mr. McIntyre turned and walked out.

"He was a big man, weighing about 190 pounds and of a dark complexion," said Mr. McIntyre. "If there was ever murder in a man's eyes, there surely was in his. I think that two or three of the others in the courtroom at the time were friends of his, and were there to back him up if he started trouble."

Fearing that his assailant would wait for him on the outside, Mr. McIntyre waited for an escort before leaving the courtroom. Jackson Becker, a brother of Lieut. Becker, came to speak to him a few minutes later, and Mr. McIntyre got him to accompany him to his office. According to Mr. McIntyre, several men followed them as they left the building together and walked to Broadway, where Mr. McIntyre took a car.

The line of questioning which the lawyer thinks the threat was intended to stop was that by which he had attempted to show that Herman Rosenthal had spoken ill of Rose's wife and Rose had a personal grudge to revenge.

Witnesses Rehearsed, McIntyre Says.

While Mr. McIntyre admitted that he had not been able to trip Rose or to break down his story in any particular, he said that his cross-examination had served its purpose in showing that Rose was a man utterly without conscience or scruple and quite capable of deliberately swearing away a man's life. His cross-examination of Webber, Vallon, and Schepps will be directed to establish the same character for each of them. He said that their stories had been so thoroughly studied and rehearsed that it was unlikely that they could be caught off their guard.

"I couldn't hope to break down Rose's testimony," said Mr. McIntyre yesterday. "There had been so many full dress rehearsals of his day on the stand that it was to be expected that he would be letter perfect. I could only hope to disturb him when he lost his cues. But whenever he stumbled for a moment he returned to his rôle like a veteran actor. I think that under the circumstances I scored pretty heavily on him. He admitted that he was without conscience, never did have one, and hasn't one now. He showed the jury that he felt no repentance, no remorse, and that he was quite as ready to commit the crime of perjury as he was to commit the crime of murder.

"Here is one thing that the jury will consider. According to Rose's testimony there were ten bottles of champagne drunk at Dora Gilbert's. After that the party went to Tom Sharkey's for several more drinks, and then had still more at 'Bridgey' Webber's.

"There must have been a thoroughly drunken party at Webber's, and when word was brought that Rosenthal was at the Metropole they all ran out, and the murder was committed a few minutes later. It seems that the murder was committed in an excess of liquor.

"That, however, will only be a small part of the defense. That will be something for the jury to think of, together with the fact that all the gamblers and those mixed up with them had a strong reason to wish Rosenthal dead, because his squealing would put an end to their living. Rose, in particular, had a strong additional motive, because Rosenthal had slandered his wife.

"The treatment that Rose has received from the District Attorney has been amazing. He has practically made Rose a Deputy District Attorney. Rose has done much of the heavy work for him in the Rosenthal case.

"When Morris Luban was arrested, Rose was left alone with him for more than an hour, and at the end of that time Luban was ready to tell the story which he later gave on the stand."

Calls Luban a Convicted Forger.

Mr. McIntyre added that his associate, George C. Whiteside, had made a thorough investigation of Luban, who testified that he had overheard Becker urging Rose on to the murder of Rosenthal. Mr. Whiteside gave the following account of Luban:

"This man is under three separate indictments for forgery. He was convicted of forgery before Judge Dike of Brooklyn last December and sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary. He is now out on bail on appeal. In most of the cases he appears under the alias of Louis J. Limoni, working with his brother Jake and a woman. The three of them would rob the mails of letters addressed to business houses. Luban would erase with acid the name of the payee and make it out in the name of the woman. She would deposit several of the checks at a time in a bank, and in a few days she would withdraw the money.

"The District Attorney of Kings County has a stack of Luban's doctored checks this high,'" said Mr. Whiteside, holding his hand about a foot above a table. They are dated from 1908 to 1910, and the acid has eaten all the way through the older ones. Luban was formerly a photo engraver and learned his tricks in that business. So, you see, this places Luban on a level in character with most of the other witnesses against Becker."

Fears Illness May Cause a Mistrial.

Mr. McIntyre said he wished to have it understood that he had the highest respect for Justice Goff and that he had been misunderstood by those who thought he had been intentionally disrespectful. He hinted, however, that to rush the case at the pace maintained for the last few days might be disastrous for both sides.

"I don't know if the danger of proceeding too rapidly is realized," he said. "Something may snap. I am on the verge of illness because of the strain, heat, and rush of the last few days. If I should get too sick to proceed, it would result in a mistrial. Becker could not be expected to proceed with the case under the circumstances."

The number of threats against his life sent to him through the mails have much disturbed Mr. McIntyre. He has turned over to the police and the postal authorities some of the twenty letters of this character. One, mailed in New York and dated Oct. 8, which he turned over to the police, read:

> You had better get out of New York as quickly as you can. You are going to be killed sure. You will never live to enjoy that money you get out of the Becker case. Becker is just as good as a dead one. If he ever gets out we will get him. Our Dago friends are going to put you out of the way. You may think this is an idle threat, but when you wake up it will be in hell. This is the only warning you will get.

Lawyers were discussing yesterday the question whether ground for reversal had been laid by Justice Goff in admitting the testimony of Rose in regard to conversations held at times when the defendant was not present. While it is expected that much will be made of this point by the defense, District Attorney Whitman was not disturbed about it. He said that the rule applying to murder trials, where the case is one of conspiracy, allows such testimony and makes the contention of the defense invalid.

Jurors Taken to View the Fleet.

The Becker jury spent a quiet day yesterday, the only excitement being an automobile ride in the afternoon which took them up Fifth Avenue, across to Riverside Drive and up the river, where they got a good look at the warships and the great crowds which swarmed along the shores.

The drive was taken in one of the Green sight-seeing automobiles driven by Frank Cafferty. The absence of an announcer with his trumpet was the only difference the car presented to the other rubberneck wagons along the Drive and the automobile attracted practically no attention.

The automobile left the Murray Hill Hotel, where the jury is quartered at [illegible] o'clock in the afternoon, returning in time for dinner. The jurors spent the evening smoking and chatting among themselves in their quarters, the majority of them retiring early.

Street; May Drews, her daughter, 21 years old, same address; Bernard Bauer and Mrs. Mary Heap of 1,333 Bristow Street, and John C. Stewart of 502 West 141st Street. All of these persons except Bernard Bauer, Mrs. Heap, and Stewart, were rescued by the Vixen and taken to the naval landing at West 129th Street. Bernard Bauer, Mrs. Heap, and Stewart were rescued by the North Carolina's launch and transferred to a tug on which they were taken to the shore.

That there were not more accidents in the course of the day was considered remarkable by the sailors of the fleet. From early morning until sundown launches, rowboats, and every other kind of small craft dotted the Hudson like flies. Then there scores of excursion craft sailing around the fleet all the time in addition to many private yachts and tugs.

The crowd that journeyed about in these small boats, not counting the thousands who took passage on the excursion steamboats and tugs, was estimated last night to have numbered from 150,000 to 200,000 persons, of whom at least one-half were women and children. It was this crowd that scrambled for a chance to get on board the naval vessels, and it was said on the flagship Connecticut last night that most of this great host did in fact board the various vessels of the fleet at some time or other in the day.

At times the navigation of some of these launches terrified the sailors looking on from the warships. Every few minutes one of the big Hudson River steamboats would pass up or down the column of naval vessels, each of them leaving swells in which the launches would plunge about like corks while the women and children in them screamed in terror.

There was not a ship in the column that was not visited by hundreds of launches, while the number that forced a way through the jam to the sides of the great super-dreadnoughts Arkansas and Wyoming, the dreadnoughts Utah, Florida, Delaware, North Dakota, Michigan, and South Carolina were beyond estimate. There was not a moment of the day when these mighty fighting ships were not the centre of a circle of shoving launches. Along the starboard gangways of the Wyoming and Arkansas rafts were moored to protect the visitors. The launches were compelled to come alongside these rafts, and the visitors would walk across them to the accommodation ladders.

It was an afternoon to try the patience of the officers and sailors, but the seamen rose to the occasion, and there was not a question they did not try to answer, and, when it was necessary to keep the too curious from trying to unlock the breech of a twelve-inch gun or from peering into the private quarters of the commanding officers, they admonished not in anger, but always courteously and with good humor.

While these two ships entertained the biggest crowds, this does not mean that the other ships did not have all the visitors they could take care of. There was not a ship that did not have throngs of men, women, and children on board all the afternoon.

Sailors Man the Gangways.

On every ship there were always a score or more sailors lined up near the gangways ready at a moment's notice to go to the aid of any person who might fall overboard from the launches that came up to the ships loaded to their fullest capacity. Several times in the afternoon when the launches were caught in the swell of passing excursion craft, it looked as if an accident could not be avoided. But the police reported last night that so far as their reports showed not a single person other than those on the Mastick had fallen overboard from any of the fleet of launches in the afternoon.

The regulation of the launches was in the hands of Inspectors of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service, and of the Dock Department, and these men had their hands full. Every launch displayed in big letters its license number, and under this number in bigger letters was the maximum number of passengers each launch was permitted to carry.

The transportation of a single additional passenger beyond the number permitted would have meant the instant revocation of the owner's license, as well as his arrest. No round-trip tickets were permitted to be sold, and the launches were compelled to keep going back to the ships until every visitor had returned to the shore.

Crowds Well Behaved.

It was a well-behaved crowd that journeyed to the ships of the fleet. The visitors were permitted to stroll below decks and see how the sailors lived. They were permitted to go inside the great twelve-inch turrets and see at close range the big guns on which the safety of the Nation would depend in an emergency, and the beautiful silver services, the gifts to the ships of the persons of the States for which the ships were named, were on view. So were the great trophies that have been won by the sailors in international and home athletic events. Thousands of cap ribbons were given to the young women by the officers and bluejackets, and all the visitors carried away picture card souvenirs of the ships.

On the five flagships, the visitors were anxious to see the Admirals, and these officers good-naturedly showed themselves on the after gun decks at intervals in the afternoon. The skippers of the dreadnoughts also came in for much attention. Then the mascots must not be forgotten. The Utah's goat was the centre of an admiring throng all the afternoon. This particular William is considered to have brains beyond the ordinary and the sailors declared he appreciated the attention he attracted. The Virginia's goat, the only one in the navy that eats the waste mail, also was much admired. On the Delaware visitors wanted to know what the red pennant with the black ball in the centre meant. They looked at the emblem twice when told that it indicated that in battle efficiency the Delaware was the champion ship of the entire navy.

In the general visiting, the battleships Massachusetts, Indiana, and Iowa, the only battleships that fought in the Spanish war, were not forgotten. The Iowa was "Bob" Evans's ship at Santiago, and that interested visitors. It was pointed out that the new Wyoming was equal in battle efficiency to a squadron of ships of the Iowa's type.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon the ships were closed to visitors, and then began the rush for home of the greatest crowd that ever visited ships of war in the history of this Nation.

Great as was the crowd that visited on board the ships of the mobilized fleet yesterday, it was small compared with the one that viewed the fleet by day and the illuminations by night from Riverside Drive, the Viaduct, and other vantage points along the Hudson water front north of Thirtieth Street. From morning until 11 o'clock last night, when the illuminations were turned off, the waterfront was jammed with people. Around Grant's Tomb and the Soldiers and Sailors' Monument and on the Viaduct, the crowds were so great that it was hard to move in either direction. Estimates of the numebr of people who journeyed to the waterfront to see the ships during the day and night placed the total as high as 1,000,000, making it easily the largest throng that ever gathered to witness any single event in the history of the city.

Thousands of automobiles and carriages coursed up and down Riverside Drive all day and last night. Never before has the navy attracted such a throng at home or abroad. The weather was perfect, and it seemed as if all New York wanted to see the mighty armada that the Government has mobilized in the Hudson.

In Riverside Park the crowd was dense from early morning until the last electric light went out on the illuminated battleships. From every part of the city the crowds came, and there was not a subway nor an elevated train nor a trolley car that runs up the west side which was not jammed with people on their way to view the ships. Extra trains were run for their accommodation and at every station there was always a big crowd coming out or going in.

Every street that led to the Hudson from the elevated or Subway stations had its all-day crowd of westbound sightseers. All nationalities and all ages were represented. Opposite the dreadnought anchorages, between Eightieth and 115th Streets, Riverside Drive was blocked by immense throngs all day, and in Riverside Park, from which was to be had the best views of the new super-dreadnoughts Wyoming and Arkansas, there was never a moment when standing room was not hard to get.

A large force of police was on duty, and splendid order was maintained. The police said that in all the thousands there were very few who did not take the day simply for the purpose of learning more about the greatest of American fleets.

At the naval landings the crowds were always big, and around those places the flag dealers, the button men, and the frankfurter vendors did a rushing trade that will keep the wolf away from their doors for some time to come. So great was the demand for flags that the price of the little ones rose during the afternoon from the morning price of 5 cents to 25 cents each.

Hundreds of men and boys rode on the top of slow-moving freight trains along the river front from Seventieth Street to Fort Washington Point. Those who took the chance of riding on these trains were not molested by the police or train hands.

At Seventy-ninth Street an accident was narrowly averted when one of the freight trains, on which was a crowd of men and boys, parted, throwing several of the riders to the ground alongside the tracks. The train was moving north slowly when some one pulled the coupling between the fourth and fifth cars or it broke, and the forward cars drew away from those in the rear.

Several men and boys, standing on the roofs of the cars at the point where the break occurred, were thrown, but it was found that none was injured.

One of the interesting incidents of the day was the presentation of the three trophies won on Saturday by the Naval Militia of South Carolina in the inter-State races. The presentations took place on the Granite State, the quarters of the New York Naval Militia, at the fot of West Ninety-sixth Street.

The trophies were the Challenge Cup for annual competition, the Duncan Trophy, and the Whaleboat Trophy. The sturdy amateur tars from South Carolina took all three events in the races on Saturday from the New York Naval Militia and crews from several other States. The prizes were presented by Lieut. Josephthal of the New York Naval Militia before a large crowd of visitors.

Last night the crowd seemed even bigger than it was in the day, the attraction being the illumination of the fleet and Riverside Drive and the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument. The night was a better one than was Saturday for viewing the beautiful golden picture that stretched for nine miles from Thirtieth Street to Fort Washington Heights in that the fog that prevailed on Saturday was missing. There will be another illumination of the fleet to-night, lasting from 7 P. M. until 11 P. M.

Only three arrests were reported by the police during the day. Two of those arrested were charged with being pickpockets, and the third with disorderly conduct. The men charged with picking pockets were George Jacobs, who said he was from Liberty, N. Y., and Morris Brackman, who said his home was at 148 West 143d Street.

OFFICERS AND TARS AT CHURCH.

Father Chidwick, Maine Survivor, Preaches at St. Patrick's.

Special services for the officers and bluejackets of the Atlantic Fleet were held in many of the churches yesterday. The largest were in St. Patrick's Cathedral and in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

At the Cathedral service Father John P. Chidwick, who was chaplain of the battleship Maine when that vessel was blown up in Havana harbor, preached the sermon, paying a tribute to the service with which he was so long connected.

Father Chidwick's text was Maccabees III., 59, which reads: "For it is better for us to die in battle than to have the invader in our Nation."

"Our soldiers and sailors," said Father Chidwick, "will never be called upon to carry on a war of pillage and plunder or a war of conquest. The American flag will never be stained with the blood of the innocent. If the necessities of nations ever demand it, we will defend our Nation and the liberties of our people, or it may be for the cause of suffering humanity, but for such cause alone would our men be called to fight.

"We are fortunate in living in such a land as enables us to stand among the nations of the world, asking assistance from none but ready to assist the weak for the cause of humanity. The lust of conquest is not in our blood. Ever since the foundation of our Nation its gates have been open for the admission of the oppressed of the world, and they have come into our cities and spread throughout our country.

"They are connected with all of the peoples of the world and over the face of the earth. Can you tell me that the lust for war and conquest can find a place in such a cosmopolitan people. In no other people is there such an abhorrence of war. The men who wear our uniforms know they will never be called upon to kill except in the preservation of the Nation or to protect some weaker nation which is looking to us to preserve its liberties. I am aware there may be some facts that might be brought forward to dispute this, but day after day the feeling against the further acquisition of territory is increasing. What we have done in the way of adding to our territory was only what we felt ourselves compelled to do for the good of humanity."

Never an Unjust War.

Father Chidwick spoke of the work that had been done to help Cuba in her desire for independence, and of the intervention to preserve its government when it tottered. He expressed the belief that at the proper time the people of the Philippines would receive the freedom and independence they so desired. Continuing, he said:

"Our soldiers and sailors know that no ruler will ever force them into an unjust war, for there is no avarice or greed that will force us into the slaughter of an innocent people.

"There are some people who say we should disband our armies and disarm our battleships. There are others who so strongly hate war that they would tear down the monuments to the memory of those heroes who have preserved the Nation. They would take the battle flags made sacred by the blood of heroes and tear them into shreds.

"Far be it from us in this sacred place to speak a word in favor of war—still we must ask shall vice reign, shall injustice stalk boldly and imperiously across the stage of the world's proceedings, and justice be so weak as not to offer a protest? If iniquity is to carry a sword shall virtue carry no sword with which it can defend itself? I believe it is our duty to teach the children to honor the uniform. It is false and felonious to our people to imagine the men who wear the uniform are not brave and loyal and true. We hear much about the ambition of our naval men for war. Those of us who know these naval men know that no set of men desire war less than the men who know the destructive power of our modern engines of war."

At the Cathedral of St. John the Divine the Rev. Dr. J. Howard Melish, rector of Holy Trinity Church, Brooklyn, preached the sermon. He, too, paid a tribute to the navy.

A Sermon on Efficiency.

Chaplain Cassard of the battleship Kansas spoke at the services last evening in the Washington Heights Methodist Episcopal Church. For sixteen years a navy Chaplain, and one of those present at the battle of Santiago, his discourse was all of navy matters. He spoke of the great development of latter years, and claimed for the Kansas an efficiency equal to the combined efficiency of the five ships that fought at Santiago. But he deplored the failure to increase the number of Chaplains, which, he said, had been only twenty-four for the last seventy years.

Several other navy notables were at the church. After the services were over attention was diverted to the presence of Herzog and Snodgrass of the Giants in the congregation, and the questions leveled at them as the church was emptying brought only expressions of confidence that the Giants would win to-day.

The Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner, of Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, in West 104th Street, who had sent 8,000 personal invitations to sailors of the fleet to attend last night's service preached on "Obeying Orders." There were about fifty sailors in uniform in the congregation, and many officers in citizens' garb. A feature of the evening was music by the Utah's Band, in leadership of Carl A. Stehle. After one of the selections played by the band Dr. Reisner said:

"I'd like to let you cheer them in the regular way if I dared—yes, I guess I will," and immediately the congregation of nearly 1,000 broke into deafening handclapping.

TAFT TO REVIEW FLEET TO-DAY.

Secretary Meyer Joins the Armada on the Dolphin.

The dispatch cruiser Dolphin, with Secretary of the Navy George Von L. Meyer and his aids on board, arrived in the North River yesterday morning and anchored off Thirtieth Street. This morning the Dolphin will steam to an anchorage opposite the flagship Connecticut, where the Secretary will receive the flag officers of the fleet, after which he will review the armada at anchor.

President Taft will arrive on the Mayflower to-day soon after noon and he too will review the fleet at anchor during the afternoon. The Presidential review will begin at 2:30 P. M., and should last about one hour and a half. Secretary Meyer will accompany the President during the review.

To-night President Taft, Secretary Meyer and the flag officers will be guests of honor at a dinner at the Hotel Astor. The dinner is given by Mayor Gaynor's Committee of 300, and the Mayor will be the toastmaster.

You Have a Right to Object

If a railroad charged you a higher rate than it charged your competitor—

Or if an electric company charged you more for your light than your neighbor pays—

You would be the first to protest to the Interstate Commerce or the Public Service Commission, wouldn't you?

In all probability, your competitors in Bush Terminal are paying less for insurance, less for light, less for power, less for cartage, less for service than you are. Some of them are likely paying less rent, too.

This being so, you are discriminating against your own business every day in the year.

Put On Your Dinner Clothes

¶ No longer merely a prerogative, dress clothes for dinner have become a necessity.

¶ Considered as essential at a banquet, they are now equally essential at home.

¶ Aired at the theatre for people who do not care a hang how we look, it is now the proper thing to wear them at home for the benefit of people who do.

¶ Worn out of respect for terrapin and cold bottles, they may now shed lustre on the domestic stew.

¶ That respect which we show the world at large we can well afford to show at home.

¶ If a man needs dress clothes to look his best on the occasion of an event, how much more does he need to look his best at home where people have him as a steady diet?

¶ All of which is by way of emphasizing why all men should wear dress clothes for dinner, both at home and abroad.

¶ And to emphasize the importance of wearing evening clothes that satisfy as to fabric, fit, finish and price is to emphasize the importance of wearing Saks evening clothes, which best satisfy the four considerations aforementioned.

FULLERTON EXPECTS FINAL GAME TO-DAY

BOSTON A TRIFLE STRONGER

BASEBALL WEATHER.

Forecast for to-day's game—Generally fair; moderate variable winds.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Red Sox and Giants drew a long breath yesterday preparing for what promises to be the final struggle of the greatest world's series ever played. The Giants, at bay, are desperate, and late last night the Boston team, flushed with victory, slipped quietly into New York, confident that they will finish it up to-day. With the Giants' pitching staff all shot to pieces, with McGraw compelled to choose from either a sore-armed left-hander or the second string and Boston intact and with the added confidence of victory, it looks as if another trip to Boston will not be necessary.

The prospect of rain falling and preventing the game to-day gives New York a little more hope. After a clear, sunshiny morning the skies became overcast and the outlook for rain and delay, which will help New York, is good. Were the decision in the control of the home team, four or five splashes of water would cause a postponement, to give the worn-out Giants' pitchers a chance to recuperate.

Marquard Complains of Arm.

Even McGraw admits that the Giants are in a bad fix, and it appears as if Marquard is his forlorn hope. Marquard is complaining of a sore arm, but, sore arm or not, the Boston crowd does not fear him. Last night they were willing to lay odds that he would never beat them another ball game. They declare that they ought to have beaten him in the game that the Giants won, and that he will not last five innings another time. They are very chesty just now, but not boastful about it except among themselves, nor are they making any claims.

Stahl is not officially announcing who will pitch, but the chances are that he will send Ray Collins at them to-day, or, if the day happens to be a bit gloomy, he will use O'Brien and let him cut loose his spitball again, reserving Wood for a later effort, should one be necessary. Stahl is being advised in this series by Jimmy McAleer, and they will have to see how the pitchers look to-day.

The Giants reached home about midnight Saturday, and they were a sore and disappointed crowd. Worse than that, the players who are writing for the papers here are tearing each other to pieces with criticism, and McGraw tore loose with a vitriolic article attacking his men. A week ago, because I dared hint at some of the weaknesses he accuses them of, they wanted to lynch me, and probably would have, had the attack been as bitter as that made by McGraw.

Poor Snodgrass was the goat this time. They blamed him for not cutting off a Yerkes hit that settled Saturday's game, a hit that no outfielder in the country could have reached except by sheer luck. He swung wide and lost ground in chasing it, and possibly might have held Yerkes at second.

Replies to Giant Criticisms.

They overlooked the fact of Devore's great stop in the outfield that saved runs, of Herzog's semi-miraculous stab that deprived Boston of two runs, and several other things, and blamed the players viciously for things of minor importance. McGraw also overlooked the twin facts that while criticising his players he coached Meyers into a double play on a fly ball, and sent Fletcher home from third to certain death as Yerkes was picking up a ball.

The Boston Club remained at home over night, and, leaving Boston at 5:30, arrived in New York shortly before 11, hurrying to their hotel. They were quietly confident, and eager to finish it up.

I think that any Boston pitcher who gets to pitch the game to-day will be lucky, as it ought to be an easy game. In all contests it is an axiom that the more one tries to do things, and the more depending upon it, the less likely he is to accomplish his ends. I believe the Giants will be so eager and so desperate that they will break. On the other hand, Boston's confidence means a lot.

Thus far the series has decided little except that Boston's team is a trifle the better. The Giants have put up a brilliant defense, a desperate one all the way through, and they have been lucky in making their best plays just when they had to make them. Their weakness at bat has been shown by the fact that the Boston pitching, except that of Bedient, has not been up to the average of the work of the same men in their own season. Bedient is the only one who seemed to pitch well to the weaknesses of the batters, perhaps because he had better control than the others have shown. Boston has hit the ball much harder, but with less luck in driving it to safe ground. I looked for an avalanche Saturday at any moment from the way they were landing upon Matty's offerings.

Sad Finish of Mathewson.

In a way the finish of Mathewson Saturday was a sad one. He confessed yesterday that, as a world's series pitcher, his great career is ended; that he threw his arm out Saturday, and that he is done.

The work of Yerkes on the infield has been one of the great surprises of the series to me. He has played the steadiest game of any of them, less brilliant of course than that of Herzog and Wagner, but he has been there on every chance and played the game to the limit. The other surprise to me is Herzog. I always have rated him a very classy third baseman and one of the luckiest in the world, but his work this last week showed more class than ever. He is fighting all the time and performing miracles. Almost everything hit toward him sticks in his hands. He saved one game by a magnificent bit of work and came near saving another.

The saddest part of the whole story is that if Devore hadn't made that startling catch of Cady's fly we'd all be home now.

GIANTS ARE STILL HOPEFUL.

Marquard and Collins Likely to be the Pitchers To-day.

Chagrined over their failure to win more than one game of the first five, but full of confidence that to-day's game would tell another story, the Giants rested quietly at their Harlem homes yesterday after five days of the most nerve-racking baseball that a world's series has yet produced. To a man they pointed to the record of the Boston Americans against Pittsburgh in 1903, when "Jimmy" Collins's great team lost three of the first four games and then won three in a row on the enemy's battleground, finally taking the series. This performance has been of wonderful assistance in keeping the Giants' confidence up, and, despite the odds against them, they refuse to concede defeat.

The Red Sox arrived in New York close to midnight Saturday. They, too, spent the day in resting up after the big strain of five hard games and left Boston late yesterday afternoon for this city. They all feel that the series is next to over, and that when they take off their uniforms at the Polo Grounds this afternoon their 1912 season will be at an end. All the athletes of both teams are in good physical condition, and with desperation to win on both sides to-day [illegible] Grounds should furnish as much high-class baseball as the other games of the series.

"Wait until I look the pitchers over," was the answer of each manager. But there is a strong suspicion prevailing among close followers of the series that to-day's game will be a battle of south-paws, with "Rube" Marquard trying to repeat for the Giants and Ray Collins endeavoring to get at least one victory for the Sox. Marquard will have had about four days rest since he won at Boston. As he did very little work during the last two weeks of the season he should be in fine shape to go in again to-day, and with such pitching as he showed in Boston last Thursday no team would have a chance to win unless the men behind tossed the game away. If Marquard is not picked to-day the choice will fall on "Jeff" Tesreau, who has had all the rest he needs since he pitched seven innings Friday.

It had been generally understood that "Joe" Wood would work for the Red Sox every third day as long as the series lasted and this impression gained strength from the fact that he started the series and was sent back Friday for the fourth game. The Boston star would be due to work again to-day, but it was stated last night that such a move was uncertain. The other two games have been of the nerve straining order and Wood has never shown ability to travel at the pace of a Johnson or a Walsh. He is a great pitcher but needs a fair amount of rest between games and another start to-day would mean three games within seven days. He could hardly be expected to show any such form as he did in the opening game. As for the second game that Wood pitched, he was hit hard and often and plainly weakened toward the close.

Those who have followed the teams in their great struggle from one city to the other do not have the same ideas of the series ending to-day as one would figure casually from the record of three Red Sox victories against one for the Giants. The games have failed to show as yet that either team excels the other to any great degree. Three games have been decided by a single run, another by two runs, and the other resulted in an eleven-inning tie. In other words, forty-seven innings of baseball have produced sixteen Boston runs against thirteen for New York. True, the Red Sox have the edge in games won, and are the logical choice for the series, but they have had to fight at top speed all the way, and have not shown that they outclass the Giants by any 3 to 1 ratio, as the record of victories would indicate. The Giants have now reached the position of the man backed into a corner who is compelled to fight his way out, and they can be expected to put up the proverbial fight.

In one respect the Red Sox have shown above the Giants in the five games already played, and that is in fielding. They have made but four errors against nine for the Giants, and this steadiness has played a most important part in the results. The Giants have been unfortunate in making misplays at critical times, and have tossed away two games by falling down on the easiest kind of chances. With anything like steady fielding and the same kind of pitching that the other games have shown, the Giants have an even chance of forcing the Red Sox down to the odd game.

In hitting, the Sox have failed to show their much-vaunted superiority, the records showing thirty-seven safe hits for the Boston team and thirty-eight for the Giants. The Red Sox have hit a bit harder than the New Yorkers, having eight doubles and six triples, against eight doubles and three triples. As the hitting of the opposition is the basis on which pitchers must be judged, Boston has no edge on New York in the pitching. In fact, the New York pitchers have the better record, as their work has been marred only by eight passes and a wild pitch, against thirteen passes and three hit batsmen for the Red Sox slab artists.

If the Giants should be victorious in this afternoon's game at the Polo Grounds the National Commission will hold a meeting either to-night or to-morrow morning and decide by the toss of a coin where the deciding game will be played, if the series goes to the seventh decisive game for settlement. The rules of the series call for a decision in this matter before the sixth game is played.

STATE'S HOME FOR EDUCATION

Ambassador Reid to Preside at Dedication of $3,500,000 Structure.

ALBANY, Oct. 13.—New York's new $3,500,000 State Education Building will be formally dedicated this week. Prominent educators from all parts of this country and some from abroad will take part in the ceremonies, which will be conducted in the new structure on Tuesday and Thursday.

Whitelaw Reid, United States Ambassador to Great Britain and Chancellor of the University of the State of New York, who returned to this country expressly for the occasion, will preside at all of the sessions. Senator Elihu Root was expected to be one of the speakers, but his illness may prevent his attendance.

Every phase of the State's educational work will receive comment from men who are National authorities in their fields, and in addition the dedicatory plans include a reception to the distinguished guests by Gov. John A. Dix, the Regents of the University and State officials.

Beside Ambassador Reid and the members of the State Board of Regents, the list of educators of National reputation who will be present and take in the exercises include Dr. John Christopher Schwab, librarian of Yale University; Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn, President of the American Museum of Natural History; Dr. William H. Maxwell, Superintendent of Schools, New York City; Dr. Charles Richard Van Hise, President of the University of Wisconsin; Dr. William Starr Myers, Assistant Professor of History and Politics of Princeton University; Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University; Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, President of the Carnegie Foundation of New York, and Canon H. Hensley Henson of Westminster Abbey, London.

After an informal gathering of the delegates from the various educational institutions throughout the country for registration on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, Ambassador Reid will formally open the ceremonies at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Tuesday's programme will be devoted to "Libraries and Museums" and "Elementary and Secondary Schools," and Wednesday's to "Educational Extension and Private Schools," "Universities and Professional Schools," and an address by Canon Henson on "The Value of Historical Studies in the Higher Learning." The reception by Gov. Dix, the Regents and State officials, will be held in the evening.

On Thursday there will be a formal presentation of the delegates in the morning, when brief remarks will be expected on behalf of each institution represented. The dedicatory exercises will take place in the afternoon. These will be prefaced by a short address by Ambassador Reid, after which Gov. Dix, for the State, will formally present the building to the State Board of Regents. It will be accepted on behalf of the board by Vice Chancellor St. Clair McKelway. The dedicatory address will be delivered by Dr. Andrew S. Draper, State Commissioner of Education, and there will be brief congratulatory addresses by former Governors Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., and Horace White.

The dedication of the State Education Building will mark the practical completion of the first building erected by any American State or foreign country for the exclusive use of educational activities.

The Legislature of 1906 authorized the selection of a site, and two years later the Trustees of public buildings were empowered to erect a structure "at a total cost of not more than $3,500,000." Although the building will not be completed for several weeks, the total cost is expected to be within the original appropriation.

L. W. HILL BOOMS ORCHESTRA

Will Give Personal Attention to St. Paul Symphony Organization.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 13.—Louis W. Hill, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Great Northern Railway, has declared his intention of giving the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra his personal management, in addition to that of the regular management, during the coming season, and striving to make the organization one of the most successful in the country.

Mr. Hill, since his election to the Presidency of the orchestra, has given it a great deal of time, and the successful trip through the Northwest last year was due largely to his management. But he wishes to devote more time to the organization. Already he is considering a Spring tour for the orchestra. Cities which heard it last year are asking for return dates, and Mr. Hill is being requested to use his influence toward having the organization make a tour of the Pacific Coast.

BETTING UPHELD BY COURT DECISION

RULING IN THE SHANE CASE

Racing Devotees Jubilant, Believing a Way Is Thus Opened for Resumption of the Sport.

Through the decision of Supreme Court Justice Townsend Scudder, of Nassau County, in relation to the long-delayed case of Paul Shane, who was arrested for bookmaking at the Union Hunts meeting last spring at Belmont Park Terminal, racing devotees fancy that the way has been made clear for a revival of the sport of kings in this State, which they say has been made impossible by the directors' liability law.

As to the personal liability of the directors of a racing association the Court agreed with the District Attorney that the directors' liability law requires knowledge of the acts constituting the crime on the part of the persons accused, and concludes: "The law will not permit the conviction of the owner of a race track who has no knowledge of the fact that bookmaking (not ordinary betting) is going on upon his premises."

Shane, who had been in the custody of his counsel almost continuously since the time he was haled before Justice of the Peace Charles F. Gittens of Hempstead, was, by Justice Scudder's orders, released, and the gist of the opinion in connection with the decision is that all of the Directors of the United Hunts who were involved are absolved, as are the Directors of the Belmont Park Racing Association, the owners and lessees of the property at the Belmont Park Terminal.

That the precedent established is of paramount importance to racing interests, since it maintains the right of individuals to wager privately on a race track where betting is not carried on with paraphernalia and as a business, is conceded by all who have been close followers of the decline of the sport due to the law, which was sweeping in its premises

The court stated that the information lodged against Shane before the Justice of the Peace insufficiently charged the commission of the crime of bookmaking, or "with or without writing under Section 986 of the penal law, as amended by L., 1910, c. 488, which in substance alleges that the defendant unlawfully, willfully and privately made several bets orally and without writing, but that a memorandum of each of the bets was prepared by the opposite party thereto and shown to the defendant.

Such an information fails to set forth the chief elements of the crime of bookmaking as defined by the courts in that among other things it fails to charge the defendant with the public quoting and offering of odds; with the soliciting of bets; with inducing the public to take chances with him in any scheme of odds, and with effecting through his methods any passing of money or property.

Shane had paid the usual admission fee and was present at the races as a spectator. He was accused by a Deputy Sheriff of walking around the grounds and making oral bets with various persons, who handed him a memorandum with each wager.

The decision of Justice Scudder cites an opinion of the Court of Appeals in the Litchenstein case before the words "with or without writing" were read into the present statute, and which case was decided in favor of the defendant.

Justice Scudder states that the Constitution of the State forbids bookmaking, but does not define the term. Neither does the amended statute define it.

In his attempt to get at the intent of the Legislature, Justice Scudder quoted the Lambrick case, in which Justice Cullen interprets Section 986, before its amendment, as being aimed at public gambling, professional gamblers, and the maintenance of gambling houses, which alone have been subject to the penalties of the criminal law.

Shane was not charged with public gambling, the allegation being that he "did privately make several bets." The information also fails to allege that Shane was one "who engages" in making bets—the words used in the statute, which implies a continuity of the practice.

The court holds that engaging in bookmaking is betting, but that ordinary betting on a horse race is not a crime. It was also held that "the Legislature has not made it a crime to bet on horse races, and the court is powerless to do so."

The court mildly rebukes the Society for the Prevention of Crime, whose brief expressed grave doubt that the whole case against Shane was not collusive.

The principal excerpt of Justice Scudder's brief follows:

"As bookmaking has been defined by the courts its chief elements seem to be lacking in the acts committed by the relator as set forth in the information.

"As said by Chief Judge Cullen referring to Section 986 of the penal law in People vs. Langan, supra:

"'While in reality the statute is directed against gambling, not against its incidents, the law has laid hold of certain incidents on the theory that those being prohibited the evil itself will be suppressed because of the impracticablity of carrying on gambling on a large scale without some of the accessories denounced by the statute.'

"Whether this plan is the best plan is for the Legislature, not for the courts, to determine. The court is powerless to hold that a given act, or a series of acts, constitute a crime, unless they fall within the prohibition of the statute. The remedy for the evil complained of here must come from the Legislature. The Legislature has made it a crime to bet on prizefights. It can make it a crime to bet on horse races. It has not done so, and the court is powerless to do so. I hold that the Legislature, in inserting in 1910, in Section 986 of the penal law after the words "bookmaking" the words, "with or without writing," did not intend to make betting a crime, but did intend to deal with that form of professional gambling known as bookmaking.

"It was contended on the argument that if the acts alleged in this information constitute a crime, then the Directors and persons in charge of the racing association are likewise guilty of a crime, without any intent whatever to violate the law. I agree with the learned District Attorney that the answer to this is, that the law requires knowledge of the acts constituting the crime on the part of the persons accused; and the law will not permit the conviction of the owner of a race track who has no knowledge of the fact that bookmaking (not ordinary betting) is going on upon his premises. It is erroneous to say that any Director could be held liable under these conditions under the present law. Section 973 of the Penal Law of the State of New York, as a penal statute must be strictly construed. True, there need be no proof of actual knowledge where a thing is clearly and expressly prohibited, for in such a case knowledge is always presumed; but here the thing prohibited is the keeping of a race track used for gambling, and no Director could be convicted of keeping a race track used for gambling unless it was proven he had guilty knowledge that the place was, not once or twice, but continually used for gambling in the form of bookmaking, (not of private betting,) and had taken no effective means to stop it."

WORK IS FOR WILSON.

California Senator Condemns Roosevelt Action on Electors.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Senator John D. Work of California, a Progressive Republican, announced to-night that, on account of what he characterized as a fraudulent proceeding on the part of the Roosevelt leaders in California in preventing the Republicans of that State from having an opportunity of voting for Taft and Sherman Electors, he would refuse to support the Progressive Party and would vote for Woodrow Wilson.

"No kind of sophistry or evasion can conceal the fact that this whole proceeding is fraudulent," declared Senator Work in a statement explaining his course. "It is pitiful that a great movement for reform in politics should have been brought to this sorry pass. All good men in California should unite in the effort to rebuke the men who have resorted to this scheme of dishonest politics. With the scheme defeated the Republican Party can be united as a progressive party, as it was before some of its members were led away from it into a sham progressive party by men who assumed to be its leaders and who care more for political success than for the honor of any party."

BOATSWAIN HELD AS SLAYER.

Accused of Shooting Two Spaniards Aboard on Envoy's Complaint.

TAMPA, Fla., Oct. 13.—Claude Pritchard, boatswain of the steamer Brunswick, is under arrest here to-day accused of murder in connection with the killing of two Spaniards aboard his boat, Federal officials having acted on the complaint, it is reported, of the Spanish Ambassador at Washington.

Affidavits from passengers and crew alleging that Pritchard shot the men without provocation are said to have been obtained. The killing of the two Spaniards had been attributed to their alleged mutiny.

LONG JOURNEY FOR FOXES.

EDMONTON, Alberta, Sept. 12.—A remarkable trip has been taken by two foxes which are now at the farm of Alfred Hare of Tees. They are fine specimens of the black and red species, and together are valued at about $1,000. They were brought from the region of Lake Athabasca, about 1,000 miles north of this place, by Mr. Hare, Prof. Burwash of the University of Chicago, and A. W. Haigh, a guide, who spent four months at the lake while Prof. Burwash was making scientific studies.

While the party was at Great Bear Lake, on the return journey, Indian trappers caught the red fox, and, as it was not injured, Mr. Hare bought it and decided to bring it back. One hundred miles nearer home, in the Fond du Lac region, the black fox was also picked up from Indians. Mr. Hare paid $350 for the two, and decided it would be worth while to bring them back to see if black foxes could be bred for the fur market.

More than 900 miles through the northwest wilderness were covered by canoe and packing before the railroad was reached. The foxes proved to be a heavy burden and care to the party, but they were brought to Athabasca, a railroad station ninety-eight miles north of this place, in good condition. They are now thriving in their quarters on Mr. Hare's farm.

FINDS BOTH PARENTS KILLED.

Six-Year-Old Discovers Father Shot by Crazed Mother.

Special to The New York Times.

ADEL, Ga., Oct. 13.—The bodies of M. A. Crosby, cashier of the Bank of Adel, and his wife were found in their bedroom about 8 o'clock this morning by their six-year-old son. The woman was lying on the floor with a revolver clasped in her fingers and a bullet thrugh her brain. Crosby was in the bed with the cover still drawn over him, and had met his death by a shot in the right eye. The little boy had gone into the room to tell his parents that breakfast was ready. When he saw the bodies he ran screaming to neighbors.

At the inquest it was decided that Mrs. Crosby had killed her husband as he slept and then killed herself. The murder and suicide must have occurred about 11 o'clock last night. Mrs. Crosby had evidently waited until her husband went to sleep and shot him, afterward turning the weapon on herself. Sudden insanity on the part of the woman is the only solution that intimate friends can offer. She had been somewhat despondent for some time because of ill-health. The couple lived happily, as far as is known. The will of the dead man was found in a bureau drawer. It left everything to his wife and children. Crosby was the wealthiest man in this part of Georgia, and Mrs. Crosby was prominent in society.

and Berlin in the same directions show that grave as the situation and its prospective consequences must appear, there has undoubtedly been some exaggeration with regard to the danger of immediate dissensions among certain great powers.

"As one of the ablest and best informed of the French writers points out to-night, the real dinger from the point of view of European peace in the larger sense will arise, not during the impending Balkan war, but at the conclusion of peace when the war is over."

The Daily Telegraph's iVenna correspondent reports that the Queen of Roumania ("Carmen Sylva") has sent this telegram to Baron Destournelles de Constant, who in a vehement letter attacked King Nicholas of Montenegro:

"The entire moral and fair-minded world will envy you the virile courage, of which you have given such a brilliant example in your admirably written letter. I congratulate you on this proof of loftiness of soul."

LONDON, Monday, Oct. 14.--Imminence of war in the Balkans is increasingly indicated by all the advices from the Near East capitals

In accordance with agreement, Servia, Bulgaria, and Greece have drafted replies to the powers' note. Bulgaria's reply, handed to the diplomatic representatives in Sofia last night, is said to be moderate in tone, and asks an explanation of a certain clause in the communication.

Servia's reply, however, which will be delivered at the various capitals to-day with that of her allies, is a refusal to accept the powers' suggestions or intervention, while simultaneously a demand for Macedonian autonomy will be presented to Turkey.

The latter demand will be made the ultimatum of the Balkan league. According to a dispatch from Rome, the States will make such a demand as it will be impossible for the Porte to accept, namely, that the reforms in Macedonia be executed under the supervision of the European powers and the Balkan States, and that the Porte as a pledge of good faith assent to the immediate demobilization of the Turkish forces.

It is understood that the Porte will have only until Tuesday to make answer to this demand, and there is every expectation that it will be followed by immediate hostilities.

The movement of the Bulgarian army began yesterday, according to a Sofia dispatch to The Daily Telegraph, trains proceeding toward the frontier every two hours.

It is reported that Christian soldiers have deserted the Turkish army in a body and that large numbers are arriving at Sofia. The Servian troops, says the same dispatch, are now in position and will move next week.

The hitch in the negotiations between Italy and Turkey, the Constantinople correspondent of The Telegraph asserts, is not serious, and a peace settlement is believed to be imminent.

The noted Macedonian leader, Todor Lazaroff, committed suicide Friday, says a Sofia dispatch to the Chronicle, because the military doctors refused to enroll him in the army because he had tuberculosis. He left a letter, saying that he could not remain behind to die in bed, while his brothers were fighting for liberty. The incident has acted as a spur to patriotism.

An official account of the operations on the Montenegrin frontier, reaching The Daily Telegraph by way of Constantinople, says the Montenegrins massacred every man, woman and child in the villages around Akova. After severe fighting the Turks recaptured Akova and drove the enemy back in disorder. They also captured Mojkovac, a village on the border.

The Montenegrin offensive campaign, says the dispatch, may already be considered at an end.

MONTENEGRINS CAPTURE TOWN.

PODGORITZA, Montenegro, Oct. 13.—The Northern Montenegrin Army, under Gen. Vukotitch, which recently crossed the border into the sanjak of Novibazar, gained a firm foothold last night by capturing Byelopolye, one of the chief towns of the province.

Byelopolye fell after prolonged fighting, but no information has been received regarding the losses.

The Serb inhabitants of the town welcomed the Montenegrins as liberators from the Turkish yoke. A church service was held and prayers were offered for the Montenegrin King.

The Montenegrins have set up a provisional Government there.

CONSTANTIOPLE, Oct. 13.—Late advices say that fighting continues around Berana. The Montenegrins, advancing toward Gusinje, Plava, and Arona, on the southeastern frontier, are encountering much resistance and losing heavily.

Severe fighting has occurred at Tushi, where the Turks are displaying great bravery.

It is further reported that the Turkish forces in the country between Lake Scutari and the sea have stopped the advance of the Montenegrins.

LONDON, Monday, Oct. 14.—According to a Constantinople dispatch to The Standard, Essad Pasha arrived at Scutari to-day with reinforcements, raising the garrison from 12,000 to 20,000 men. If this report is true, the Montenegrins will have a difficult task in capturing Scutari.

TURKEY IS NOW AGGRESSIVE.

Greek and Bulgarian Residents Forced to Pay Taxes on Leaving.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 13.—Whether for the purpose of provoking war or showing the Balkan allies that Turkey cannot be intimidated, the Government is acting with an aggressiveness calculated to bring hostilities.

The embargo on Greek ships, the detention of Servian ammunition, and the seizure of Bulgarian railway cars, all constitute belligerent acts.

Greek and Bulgarian Nationals in Constantinople, numbering a thousand or more, have been subjected to treatment designed to irritate those nations. Financial considerations figure largely in the attitude of the Turkish Government, and practically all of the hundreds of Greeks, who are returning to Athens, are compelled to pay full taxes to the end of the year before they are permitted to embark. Even the crews of Greek ships, which have been seized, have been haled before the prefects and made to pay a year's taxes, as if they were Turkish subjects. Many Greeks have been arrested on the charge of being deserting reservists, and they can obtain their release only by paying the military exemption tax.

Turkey's action, however, is less arbitrary than would seem, because many of the Greeks hold both Hellenic and Turkish passports to obtain the advantages of both nationalities; and they now have to shoulder the responsibilities of both.

The Government is determined to expel all Bulgarian and Greek subjects as soon as war is declared, and these will be transported by some of the steamers which have been detained for that purpose. Trouble was expected over the seizures, as most of the cargoes are foreign owned, but it is announced that the Porte intends to buy the cargoes.

The Government is requisitioning the horses owned by all foreign residents except the diplomatic representatives. The various Embassies have protested, and have notified the Porte that compensation will be claimed.

Several Turkish women are going to the front to attend the wounded. Thus this will be the beginning of a new era for the sex.

The Porte will reply to the collective note of the powers to-morrow.

A consular telegram reports the killing of twelve Bulgarians at Kuprili, Macedonia, by Turkish soldiers. Massacres in Macedonia will be an inevitable feature of the war, but it is asserted here that Turks will not begin them.

SERVIA'S "NO" TO POWERS.

While Bulgaria, Playing for Delay, Wants Note Explained.

BELGRADE, Oct. 13.—The Cabinet Council has drafted the reply to the powers' note, and it will be delivered to-morrow.

The reply expresses regret at Servia's inability to comply with the terms of the note, because the proposals of the powers fail to provide guarantees for the execution of the proposed reforms.

Simultaneously with the delivery of this reply, a memorandum will be presented to Turkey, demanding autonomy for certain provinces under control of the Balkan States.

SOFIA, Oct. 13.—Bulgaria's reply to the Russo-Austrian note was presented to the diplomatic representives to-night. This note and one addressed to Turkey are couched in moderate terms. The Bulgarian Government says that it is most anxious to do nothing which will aggravate the precarious situation, and is desirous of leaving open every avenue for the maintenance of peace until the last possible moment.

The reply points out that the wording of one of the most important clauses of the powers' note is not clear, and, as Bulgaria is anxious to avoid all misunderstanding, asks the powers to state precisely what the doubtful clause really means.

In conclusion the note declares that the delay has been due to the fact that the note of the powers was addressed to all the Balkan States, and that, therefore, time was necessary for a discussion of its contents by the States.

Most of the Bulgarian towns have a deserted appearance. Only old men, boys, and women are to be seen. Practically all business has been suspended.

ATHENS, Oct. 13.—The Greek note to Turkey was handed to the Turkish legation to-night.

The mobilization of the Greek Army is proceeding rapidly. Already 125,000 men are under arms, with Greeks arriving daily from abroad. A large contingent has already reached here from America. With the recruits it is estimated that 170,000 soldiers can be placed in the field.

As a result of the reorganization of the past few years the whole army has been clothed, equipped, and armed with modern rifles. All the infantry regiments have machine gun sections. The transportation by land and sea has been prompt and the efficiency of the mobilization has greatly raised the morale of the troops.

IMPORTANCE OF NOVI BAZAR.

Recently Occupied by Austria, Which Is Jealously Watching Invasion.

The Sanjak or District of Novi-Bazar, obscure as it has been hitherto, has a political importance far beyond its meager size or economic value. A strip of land about a hundred miles long and from thirty to forty miles wide, it is a part of ancient Bosnia, which at one time was entirely a Turkish possession. The Sanjak divides the sister States of Servia and Montenegro, and is the only portion of Turkey that borders on Austria. But for this door Austrian and Ottoman territory would be separated by a fence of Slavonic kingdoms; with it the Austrians are in a more advantageous position than the Russians, who have no direct access to European Turkey, and Vienna can still indulge in the old dream of sometime extending its sway southward, as the Turk retires, and gaining possession of Salonika.

In part this explains the jealousy with which Austria is watching the invasion of the Sanjak by the Montenegrins. Moreover, it is only four years since Austria gave up her right to occupy the Sanjak with a military force in accordance with the treaty of Berlin and the subsequent Austro-Turkish convention of 1879.

Deciding that an attack in the dark was too dangerous they surrounded the stronghold and will wait for daylight before closing in.

In the meantime a search of the town was made. One convict was found hiding in a caboose in the railroad yards. Citizens overpowered the guards who were taking him heavily ironed back to the penitentiary, but the arrival of more guards prevented a lynching. The man was hustled into the prison. Some time later John Childs captured another convict in his cellar.

Fighting in the Prison.

While most of the penitentiary force was out pursuing the convicts who fled to the hills, the small body left in the prison faced a still more desperate situation. When the doors of the cells were unlocked a large number of convicts who did not join in the break for liberty were set free inside the walls. Many of them were armed. Soon a riot was in progress, the guards battling desperately to save their own lives and prevent the escape of every convict in the institution. The gates remained locked, and no definite word came out early to-night regarding events within. Early reports that several men had been killed had not been confirmed several hours later.

Persons coming into town from the south bring stories of a reign of terror in the country districts. Riders have been sent to the ranches within a radius of several miles, warning the owners to be prepared to defend their property. Several parties who went south to-day on horseback or in carriages returned to-night afoot, their horses having been stolen by the convicts.

The escapes of yesterday and to-day appear to be the result of a general plot inside the prison. It is not known how the prisoners who made their break for liberty this afternoon got the guns with which they were well supplied when they dashed from the gates. The local officers believe that they killed a number of guards after overpowering the cellhouse keeper, and took their weapons. Another theory is that the guns were smuggled into the prison by friends of the men who escaped yesterday.

Warden Alston has been in the hills since last night and has not been located, although couriers were sent out to-night to tell him of the events of the day. A Deputy Warden said to-night he did not know the exact number of men who had escaped.

Several weeks ago several of the most desperate characters in the prison had their sentences cut down for aiding in putting out a fire in one of the buildings, thereby saving the penitentiary from probable destruction.

Officials Minimize Trouble.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Oct. 13.—An official statement of the prison break at Rawlins was issued from the Governor's office to-night. The statement minimizes the danger of the situation and varies in some particulars from the accounts sent direct from the scene of the outbreak. It follows:

"Eight convicts escaped from the Rawlins Penitentiary this afternoon. In a running battle one convict was killed. The convicts rushed some citizens who carried guns bound for trap shooting and killed one citizen and took four guns. They have scattered, going south.

"Warden Alston was not at the penitentiary when this delivery occurred, being out with posses hunting the convicts who escaped yesterday. The Mayor of Rawlins asked permission from the Governor's office to surround the walls of the penitentiary with a cordon of armed citizens.

"The Governor being out of town, was reached by telephone one hour and a half after the reports reached the Governor's office. He at once authorized the Mayor of Rawlins to surround the prison with citizens if necessary. He also wired the Deputy Warden at the penitentiary to lock all the convicts in their cells and keep them there until the return of Alston.

"The first reports that reached the Governor's office made it appear that many more convicts had escaped than the actual number. It was at first thought the militia, therefore, would be necessary. Company K, at Laramie, was therefore ordered by Col. V. K. Hart, commanding the National Guard, to be ready to go to Rawlins on notice. The company was assembled and in waiting. Later reports, showing that conditions were not as serious as at first reported, caused the Governor to cancel the militia arrangements. Gov. Carey is expected home to-morrow."

Permanent Service
a real safety in Buying A Piano

Service and price when you buy a piano of established value are as close as marriage.

But service and price are divorced the moment price is degraded to a place below its legitimate one.

A reasonable and fair profit on the cost of a piano is the only possible way a business can become permanent.

Your safeguard, especially in buying a piano, is in dealing with a permanent business, because it is the only way you can get permanent service.

It is to every one's interest to buy where reputable methods and established values have made a permanent service possible.

Yet human nature is so unreasonable that it generally expects service even when the price precludes it, and then complains when it finds it didn't get what it perfectly well knew it hadn't paid for.

A piano of mushroom growth with a new name and an unknown maker, heard of to-day and forgotten to-morrow, sold at a so-called great reduction, cannot give you the protection of permanent service.

You will find us the first to make the offer if the time ever comes when a Piano with an established value of $350 can be sold for $200.

The price of any piano we sell is guaranteed to be as low or lower than you can buy anywhere else.

There has never been a day's interruption in the success of the business since its establishment over fifty years ago.

But this has been possible only because we have always maintained the quality of our product—established a price that gives us a fair living profit above actual cost to make, and nothing more—a price open to every one and the same to every one with no extras of any kind—and a service that really means a permanent protection to any one who buys of us.

We own and operate our own factories and sell you direct at prices that are lower than any pianos in the same class.

Every one of these pianos has an established value that gives a permanent protection—no extras of any kind—the most liberal terms for payment—and a guarantee that means something.

CAVEMAN'S PAINTING IN BRITISH CAVERN

LIKE FRENCH EXAMPLES

But It Is Hard to Call the Series of Vivid Red Bands Covered with Stalagnite a "Picture."

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Monday, Oct. 14.—The Times this morning announces the discovery of the first example in Great Britain of a prehistoric cave painting of the kind already familiar to palaeontologists from the caves of Dordogne in the south of France and in the peninsula of Spain. It was recently discovered on the walls of Bacon's Hole, near the Mumbles, by Prof. Breuil and Prof. Sollas.

The discovery is not a picture but a number of horizontal bands of vivid red arranged in a vertical series about a yard in height. A deposit of stalagnite has formed over them and sealed them up so that none of the paint can be removed by rubbing.

Similar bands have been described from the walls of the Font de Gaume in Dordogne.

It is believed that the new discovery belongs to the Aurignacian stage of the upper palaeolithic epoch, since Aurignacian relics have been found in caves in the vicinity.

ATTACKS CORPORATION TAX.

Pullman Company Hopes to Break Down New Law in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 11.—A contest that will have a bearing on plans for corporation taxation all over the country is now under way here in the guise of a suit instituted by the Pullman Palace Car Company to compel the State of California to refund $19,000 taxes paid under protest by that concern. It is a test case, in which many corporations are interested, and is considered so important that Frank B. Kellogg, formerly "trust buster" for the Government, is the chief counsel for the company.

Under the corporation tax constitutional amendent of 1910 the State claims the right to tax the Pullman Company at the rate of 3 per cent. on all its earnings for the State on the proportion that the mileage operated within the State bears to the total mileage operated by the company. This is the general rule applied to all foreign corporations under the new law. The company was willing to pay on the amount of business accumulating in and confined within the State, and the $19,000 represented the difference last year. In the case of other corporations the amount would be much larger.

The law is attacked on the ground that it invades the right of the Federal Government to control inter-State commerce. It is declared that California has no authority to tax business which comes under this heading.

NEW ETTOR PANEL TO-DAY.

Salem Trial to be Resumed with 350 Fresh Talesmen Available.

SALEM, Mass., Oct. 13.—Three hundred and fifty Essex County voters eligible for jury duty have been summoned to report to Judge Joseph F. Quinn in the Superior Court to-morrow, when the trial of Joseph J. Ettor, Arturo F. Giovannitti and Joseph Caruso, defendants in the Lopizzo murder trial, will be resumed.

Only four qualified as jurors from a previous venire of 350 talesmen examined a fortnight ago, but better progress is expected to-morrow, as both sides have made heavy inroads into the sixty-six peremptory challenges to which they were originally entitled. After these become exhausted talesmen passed by Judge Quinn may be challenged only for cause satisfactory to the court. The jurors already selected are: Christian W. Larsen, hairdresser, of Haverhill; Robert S. Stillman, carpenter, of Rockport; Willis B. Cressey, sailmaker, of Gloucester, and George F. Burgess, leather dealer, of Lynn.

Larsen was the third man examined by Judge Quinn and Burgess the three hundred and tenth. The impaneling of these jurors occupied three court days, beginning on September 30. When the venire became exhausted the trial was adjourned until other talesmen could be summoned. During the interim counsel sought to secure the release of the prisoners on bail, but Judge Quinn denied motions to that end, which were argued before him last Wednesday.

50,000 IN CATHOLIC PARADES.

Great Holy Name Society Demonstrations in the Newark Diocese.

Throughout New Jersey yesterday afternoon Holy Name Society demonstrations were held with parades and open-air services in all the big towns. Fifty thousand walked in the parades of the Newark diocese alone, and word of the demonstration was cabled to Cardinal Merry del Val in Rome.

Through three miles of Jersey City streets a parade of 20,000 men and boys made its way to Hudson County Park, where the principal address was by the Right Rev. Mgr. Wall of the Church of St. Charles Borromeo in New York. An altar was erected in the park, and the benediction came from the Rev. J. J. Hall of the Church of St. Aloysius. The marchers came from eighteen Jersey City churches.

The parade of 12,000 through the streets of Newark was one of the largest ever held under the auspices of the Essex County division of the diocese. A feature of the open-air service in the grounds of the new Cathedral of the Sacred Heart was singing by a choir of 1,000 boys and girls.

NEW HOSPITAL FOR ANIMALS.

New York Women's League Institution to be Built at Once.

Announcement was made yesterday at the offices of the New York Women's League for Animals that it had been decided to establish a hospital where ailing animals of all kinds would be treated and kept until healed. The site selected is at the corner of Bond and Lafayette Streets, and it is expected work will be commenced before Christmas. The plans for the building will be drawn on the lines of similar institutions for dumb animals that have been inspected by Mrs. James Speyer, President of the league, who returned from Europe on Saturday with Miss Ella Mabel Clark, first Vice President, and Mrs. C. C. Cuyler, Second Vice President.

Mrs. Speyer said that she had gained useful information abroad and that the best methods of foreign societies would be employed in the erection and operation of the New York Hospital. An annual parade of work horses and the opening of a free clinic and dispensary for animals at 326 Lafayette Street were the first accomplishments of the league, she explained, and now the hospital would follow.

FRAULEIN HEMPEL IS ILL.

New Metropolitan Star May Not Be Able to Come at Appointed Time.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Oct. 13.—Fräulein Frieda Hempel, the young German coloratura prima donna of the Berlin Royal Opera, who will be one of the new stars of the coming season of the Metropolitan opera season, has been taken seriously ill at Budapest, where she was fulfilling a fortnight's engagement.

She has already had to cancel her farewell concert in Berlin, set for Oct. 17, and her appearance at the Stuttgart Royal Opera on Oct. 24, when she was to create the title rôle in Richard Strauss's new opera, "Ariadne auf Naxos."

Fräulein Hempel expected to sail for America on Nov. 1, and make her appearance at an early performance at the Metropolitan as Queen of Night in "The Magic Flute." It is now a question whether she will be able to reach New York on the appointed date.

KELLAN KILLED IN HOLD-UP.

Two Men Arrested for Crime Following Camden Church Carnival.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 13.—Karl Kellan, 18 years old, of 2,919 High Street, employed in the Pennsylvania Railroad yards here, escorted two young women home from the carnival held by the Grace Presbyterian Church, and was returning alone soon after midnight when he was held up and shot on the bridge over the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Other merrymakers, also returning from the carnival, found him and he was hurried to Pepper Hospital, where he died in an hour.

Information from a watchman of the railroad aided the police, and within a few hours they arrested Frederick Corsey, 21 years old, of 101 North Twenty-first Street, and Harry Duffield, 21 years old, of 407 North Forty-first Street.

According to Duffield's story, he and Corsey had been drinking in a saloon until their money was exhausted, when they decided to go out and hold up somebody. Corsey, he said, had given him a red bandanna and a blackjack, but when they reached the bridge he asserts he lost his courage and refused to take part in the hold-up.

Both men were held for murder.

REBELS LOOT TRAIN; KIDNAP AMERICAN

MAY BE HELD FOR RANSOM

Opening of Northwestern Road Reveals Large Losses Due to Rebels' Destruction.

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 13.—Mexican rebels held up a passenger train 150 miles south of this point on the border late to-day, rifled the mail and express cars, and kidnapped John T. Cameron, a wealthy stock broker of El Paso. The train was allowed to proceed south.

John T. Cameron was on his way to purchase cattle to be imported into the United States. It is believed he is held either for ransom or to prevent further stock shipments from the districts held by rebels. A Mexican passenger was also held by the rebels, who molested no one else, according to report.

The opening of the Mexico Northwestern Railway, after a stoppage of traffic for a week, caused by destruction of the road by rebels, reveals large losses sustained by the company. Aside from the destruction of many trestles on the line, a train of twenty-four cars of choice lumber for the United States was burned, causing a loss estimated at more than $50,000.

Federal troops still fail to protect the railway, remaining in the larger towns, say passengers arriving here. Some significance is attached to the departure to the State capital of Gen. Antonio Rabago, commander of the district. It is understood that he has been recalled to Mexico City. Troops are on the way from the City of Chihuahua to replace Rabago's forces.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 13.—The reports of the defection of Gen. Felix Diaz, nephew of ex-President Porfirio Diaz, brought out the official statement to-day that he was under the surveillance of Government agents.

A band of rebels under Cheche Campos had a skirmish yesterday, lasting two hours, with the small garrison at Mapimi, twenty-five miles from Torreon. The rebels retired and reinforcements have reached Mapimi from Torreon. Communication with the latter city, which was restored last week, has been interrupted again.

BALLIN COMES TO STUDY.

Will Make an Investigation of Canal's Effect on World's Shipping.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 13.—Accompanied by four other Directors, Alfred Ballin, Managing Director of the Hamburg-American Line, sailed for New York yesterday on the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria.

It is understood that the object of his visit to the United States is a thorough investigation of the transatlantic shipping situation, as it will be affected by the opening of the Panama Canal.

NEW BIDDERS AT PEKING.

Another Independent Banking Group Said to Have Approached China.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Oct. 14.—The Peking correspondent of the Daily Telegraph cables:

"I am officially informed that there is not a shadow of truth in the reports that China has resumed negotiations with the six-power group."

The correspondent adds that on Thursday a still more powerful independent London banking combination entered the field and informed China that it was willing to consider reasonable conversion schemes to any amount.

INVESTS IN OUR RAILWAYS.

London County Council Buys Them in Preference to Consols.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The report of the Finance Committee of the London County Council shows that the Council is investing its money in American railways in consequence of the depreciation in consols and gilt-edged securities.

Of £65,000 ($325,000) invested abroad £20,878 ($104,390) was recently put into a western railway.

LUCKY 13TH FOR GOV. WILSON

On This Day He Got His First Good Sleep and Home Sunday in Weeks.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 13.—It was 1 o'clock this morning when Gov. Wilson got back here after his hard campaigning tour. He starts out again on Thursday. If the Governor makes any answer to the attack made upon him by Col. Roosevelt in his speech at Chicago last night, it will probably be in one of the Governor's speeches on his next tour. Col. Roosevelt assailed the Governor's record on trusts in New Jersey.

The Governor is a convert now to the belief that 13 is a lucky number, for today he got his first good sleep in weeks, and it was the first Sunday that he has been able to spend with his family in his home in Cleveland Lane since he was nominated by the Democrats at the National Convention at Baltimore. He wasn't disturbed by one political visitor. Late this afternoon, feeling thoroughly rested and in high spirits, the Governor went for a long walk with Mrs. Wilson and his daughters.

Gov. Wilson will remain in Princeton today, and Tuesday he will go to Trenton to spend a few hours at the State House. He will start campaigning next in West Virginia and Delaware.

TELLS OF MASKED ROBBERS.

Cigar Clerk Says They Stole $236 from His Store.

At the point of revolvers, two masked men held up Edward Danziger, a salesman, employed in a branch of the United Cigar Stores Company, at 14 First Avenue, last night, at midnight, according to the clerk's story, and robbed the cash register of $236.

Danziger told this story when he ran into the Fifth Street Police Station a few minutes later. The celrk, who lives at 334 Lefferts Place, Brooklyn, was unable to describe the robbers beyond saying that they were of medium height and appeared to be foreigners.

AIRSHIP TRIES 40-HOUR TRIP.

Zeppelin Balloon Leaves Friedrichshaven for Her Longest Journey.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Oct. 13.—The new German naval Zeppelin dirigible balloon started this morning on the longest flight ever attempted, ascending at 8:45 o'clock with twenty-one passengers aboard.

A direct flight will be made to Helgoland, across to Dantzic, and from that town to Berlin. It is expected that forty hours will be occupied in the flight.

KILLS AN INNOCENT MAN.

Richter, Enraged Because His Wife Left Him, Stabs Brother-in-Law.

Coming home shortly after midnight on Sunday morning, Henry Richter, a contractor, living at First Street, near Lamartine Avenue, Bayside, L. I., found his home dark and deserted. His wife had departed without notice. Richter became enraged, and started out to find her, armed with a large knife. He went to the home of Ludwig Benliski, his sister's husband, a few blocks away.

When he knocked, his sister opened the door, and Richter in loud tones demanded to know if his wife was there. Mrs. Benlinski refused to give a direct answer, and Richter drew the knife and made a stab at her, cutting her arm. She screamed, and her husband came running to her side. Richter, who was beside himself with rage by this time, quickly turned on Benlinski and drove the knife into his breast up to the hilt. The blade pierced Benslinski's heart, and he fell dead. The murderer ran away.

Word was sent to the Flushing Police Station, and Mounted Patrolman Edward Clark hurried to Richter's house, where he found him, with a grip packed and about to make his escape. He was placed under arrest, and when arraigned on Sunday before Magistrate Fitch in the Flushing Police Court was held for the Coroner's jury. He was repentant, declaring that he had no intention of killing his brother-in-law, as they had been good friends.

ARREST IN $200,000 THEFT.

Messenger of National Bank of Cuba Detained by Judge's Order.

HAVANA, Oct. 13.—Antonio Ayala, a messenger of the National Bank of Cuba, has been arrested by order of the Special Judge in charge of the investigation into the disappearance of a package containing $200,000, which was supposed to have been sent by registered mail to the National Park Bank of New York on Sept. 27.

Ayala, it is alleged, was intrusted with the envelope containing the money, which he was instructed to take to the Post Office for registry. A scrutiny of photographs of the registered envelope received by the National Park Bank shows that it was not the one in which the money was placed. Other arrests are expected.

CAMPAIGN INQUIRY MAY END THIS WEEK

Senators Have Become Restive with Election Drawing Near, and Will Waste No Time.

FINANCIERS MAY BE EXCUSED

Hearst Probably Will Be Asked to Produce All the Standard Oil Letters He Has.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—With few important witnesses remaining to be heard, the expectation here is that the Clapp Senate Committee investigating campaign funds will almost conclude its hearings this week. It has devoted two weeks to hearing about thirty witnesses of more or less importance, and as Election Day draws near the members are becoming restive. This is particularly true because they have realized all along that the hearings, which they were compelled to hold for political effect while the campaign was still in progress, will have little bearing on the report the committee will make when Congress convenes in December.

The report, it can be stated, almost with certainty, will barely touch on what disclosures the hearings have brought out. The committee is directed merely to recommend legislation extending or modifying the Corrupt Practices act, and that will be done. But a report on findings of fact is left entirely to its discretion, and so far members are little inclined to the thankless task of attempting to arrange in sequence the mass of unrelated testimony that has been received. Besides, as the committee stands divided, with one Progressive, two regular Republicans, and two Democrats, agreement on the facts would be almost impossible.

It seems likely that the committee will find less difficulty in agreeing on new legislation, though no definite discussion has yet taken place as to what it will be. It is expected, however, that the bill which the committee will recommend will be along the lines of greater publicity in National elections, compelling by Federal statute returns from all State Committees aiding directly or indirectly the National candidates, as well as from National Committees. The size of all campaign contributions will also probably be limited.

To-morrow's schedule of witnesses will nearly clear up the Democratic aspects of the investigation, though their examination may run into Tuesday. On Wednesday there will be no session, as Senator George T. Oliver of Pennsylvania, the only active Taft member of the committee, will be absent receiving an honorary degree. The end of the week will be devoted to hearing Frank A. Munsey and George W. Perkins of the Bull Moose Party, and George B. Cortelyou, Chairman of the Republican National Committee in the Roosevelt campaign of 1904.

Postmaster General Frank H. Hitchcock, Republican National Chairman in the Taft National campaign of 1908, is listed to appear before the committee, and he may not be heard until next week. William Randolph Hearst, Judge E. H. Gary, ex-Gov. Benjamin B. Odell, Thomas F. Ryan, August Belmont, and Henry C. Frick will also remain after this week, but it is not certain that all of them will be called. With the possible exception of Gov. Odell, who will be closely interrogated as to the Harriman fund, none of these men will occupy the committee many minutes.

Mr. Hearst will be questioned chiefly as to what Standard Oil letters he has still unpublished, and it is expected that the committee will compel him to produce all of them before the campaign ends. Thomas F. Ryan and August Belmont will be asked about their financial support to Democratic candidates for the Presidential nomination. Mr. Frick, who contributed $100,000 to the Roosevelt campaign fund in 1904, will be asked to tell what else he knows about the financing of that campaign.

PERKINS ASSAILS HILLES.

Calls His Testimony on Bull Moose Contributions False.

George W. Perkins sent a letter yesterday to Chairman Hilles of the Republican National Committee criticising Mr. Hilles for statements the Chairman made when he was a witness before the Senate Committee which is investigating campaign contributions. Mr. Perkins in his letter declares that many of his statements were false, and challenges Mr. Hilles to produce proof of them. Here is the letter in part:

> You attempt, first, to justify the charge made in your article in The New York American of Sept. 21 that "Roosevelt spent millions of dollars of Harvester Trust money to gain the Republican nomination." When you made this charge I immediately denounced it, and when the newspapers pinned you down you were forced to retract it completely. That retraction naturally put you in a bad light before the public, and therefore you reiterate now your once retracted charges.
> As to these charges, your sworn statement contains absolutely no proof whatever with which to support them. You attempt to bolster them up with such generalities as the following: "Then there was Ohio. I am informed by men in that State, who are experienced in matters of political management, that what was done by the Roosevelt managers there shows an expenditure of not less than $300,000." If you have been so informed by men in that State I call on you to produce those men; name them, have the committee call them, and back up your statement with actual tangible evidence.
> You state that no report had been received by the Senate Committee as to money spent in Massachusetts. You state this under oath, notwithstanding the fact that Matthew Hale of Boston had already testified in detail as to the expense of the Massachusetts campaign.
> You state that the advertising in Massachusetts newspapers, "from actual measurement of the space occupied, is calculated to have amounted to not less than $100,000," whereas the actual bill for such advertising amounted to $9,031.
> You state "there was evidence on every hand of the expenditure of large sums of money in Mr. Roosevelt's behalf"—expenditures which "undoubtedly amounted to not less than $2,000,000." If there exists such evidence on every hand, why did you not produce it in detail on the stand before the very committee that is so anxious for exactly this kind of information?
> You state that "with respect to the assertion that Harvester money was used in the campaign certain undisputed facts permit no other reasonable conclusion." Again I say if there exists such certain undisputed facts, why did you not produce and present such facts while on the stand before the proper committee?

Mr. Perkins declares in his letter that the statement made by Mr. Hilles that "there is a fact full of significance, namely, that the Harvester Trust itself is silent as to whether it has contributed anything to the Roosevelt campaign" is without justification, inasmuch as Mr. Perkins says that he, in a letter of Sept. 23, declared that the Harvester Trust had not given a cent.

He also combats the statement, which he attributes to Mr. Hilles, that the Harvester Trust was a "grinding, price-increasing, farmer-crushing" monopoly by quoting from a decision of the Supreme Court of Missouri, returned within the last four months, in which that tribunal declared that the Harvester Trust had not increased the prices in proportion to the increased cost of manufacture, and that it had "not used its power to oppress or injure the farmers who were its customers."

Mr. Perkins closes by saying:

> In short, all your attacks upon me, and they have been many and of the same general character, constitute an attempt to create an impression in the public mind that I am after some improper advantage for myself and the corporations with which I am connected; that in some under-handed, subterranean way, by working with the Progressive Party for Mr. Roosevelt, I am going to reap enormous financial profits. If this were my aim, if I were this kind of a man, impelled by the base motives you ascribe, then I certainly would not be working for the Progressive Party and Mr. Roosevelt, but for the Republican Party and Mr. Taft; for what more could a venal, money-seeking corporation man want than to have his corporation dissolved on paper as the Taft Administration has dissolved the Standard Oil and Tobacco Companies, resulting in perfectly colossal profits to inside stockholders in a few short months, and enormous increase in the price of product to outside consumers.

Mr. Perkins said yesterday that he would have nothing to add to what he had written in his letter to Mr. Hilles until he had heard from the latter.

PENFIELD GOES TO TESTIFY.

Says He'll Also Engage His Rooms for the Wilson Inauguration.

Frederic Courtland Penfield, who contributed substantially to the Wilson preconvention campaign and is a member of the Finance Committee of the Democratic National Committee, has been summoned to appear in Washington before the Senate committee investigating campaign contributions to-day. Mr. Penfield has waived the formality of a subpoena.

"It's odd," said Mr. Penfield yesterday at the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee in the Fifth Avenue Building, "that I should have been summoned for to-morrow. If the committee had sought to study my convenience it couldn't have done better. I had planned long ago to go to Washington to-morrow to engage quarters on Pennsylvania Avenue for myself, my family, and a party of friends, from which to view the Wilson inaugural parade on March 4, next year.

MUNSEY'S BULL MOOSE CALL.

Tells Business Men Roosevelt Stands Between Them and Socialism.

Frank A. Munsey, financier, editor, and dévotée of the Bull Moose cause, issued a poster broadside yesterday in which he appealed to the business men of the country to insure the continuance of the Republican policies under which they have prospered by voting for the election of Col. Roosevelt. Among other things, Mr. Munsey said in this poster:

> You want to see the Republican economic policies triumph in this election, and you want to see the Republican Party triumph in this election. But you cannot have both. You can have the triumph of Republican policies, but you cannot have the triumph of the Republican Party. It isn't possible this year. The question for you to decide is this:
> Shall these policies be maintained through Roosevelt, or shall the election go to Wilson, with the destruction of these policies?
> The continuance in force of the economic policies of the Republican Party, under which we have grown to be a great Nation, means too much to be balanced against your likes or dislikes for any particular candidate—means too much, far and away too much, to justify you, Mr. Business Man, in contemplating their destruction that you may have your own way in this election, that you may vote for the man and for the party that suit your own particular preference, without regard to the effect on the country and the effect on all our people.

Mr. Munsey ended his appeal with the declaration.

"Roosevelt is the best friend you have in the situation, Mr. Business Man. He, more than any other man, stands between you and Socialism."

FEW SPEECHES FOR COLONEL

Condition of His Throat Compels Him to Cut His Schedule.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Col. Roosevelt today nursed an ailing throat, which, according to his campaigns managers, will prevent a visit to Springfield, Ill., early this week. The plan for the Colonel to go to the State capital and deliver two or more addresses at that point was under consideration at Progressive headquarters here until last night, when it was abandoned.

The condition of Col. Roosevelt's throat is not serious, according to his physician, but is simply the result of overfatigue. It is announced, however, that he will make no more speeches than are necessary from now until the close of the campaign. The Roosevelt party will leave for Milwaukee to-morrow at 3 P. M. After the Milwaukee address they will return to Chicago, and on Tuesday will go to Indianapolis. The speeches at Gary and Indian Harbor, Ind., and Racine and Kenosha, Wis., scheduled for to-morrow, will not be delivered.

Col. Roosevelt attended services this morning at Grace Reformed Lutheran Church, and in the afternoon went motoring. The rest of the day he spent in his room looking over future speeches. Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and Mr. and Mrs. Medill McCormick dined with the Colonel this evening.

WON'T RUN AS A MOOSER.

Langdon Declines Nomination for Second Place in Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 13.—Prof. Courtney Langdon of Brown University, who was named last week as the Progressive candidate for Lieutenant Governor in the coming State election, has notified the party committee that he cannot accept the nomination. Prof. Langdon gives lack of time as his reason for declining.

John E. Bolan, Secretary of the committee, said to-day that Prof. Langdon's name would remain on the ticket so far as the party was concerned, but he could have it removed, if he wished, by formal request to the Secretary of State.

KEIR HARDIE WARNS AGAINST BULL MOOSE

Progressive Party Has No Economic Basis, English Socialist Says at Carnegie Hall Meeting.

LABOR'S FUTURE IN POLITICS

Union Members and Socialists Must Settle Their Differences and Unite in a Common Cause, He Declares.

J. Keir Hardie, chairman of the Labor Party in the British House of Commons, lectured yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Intercollegiate Socialist Society in Carnegie Hall on "Socialism and the Progressve Movement Here and in England." Mr. Hardie pointed out the dangers to Socialists of the twenty-one Socialist planks in the Bull Moose platform and advised voters not to be lured into a party which would never have a chance to carry out its pledges.

Just before Meyer London, the East Side Socialist candidate for Congress, introduced Keir Hardie, Harry W. Laidlaw, organizer of the Intercollegiate Socialist Society, told of the objects of his society and wound up by sending men around with collection baskets. It was so skillfully done that the audience applauded him when he sat down.

"I have had a unique experience this afternoon," began Mr. Hardie. "First I saw you pay to enter this hall and then, when a collection was called for, I heard you applaud. Then, when it was announced that there would positively be no more collections this afternoon, you greeted the announcement with stony silence. Really, if this had been in Scotland it would have been a sign for a general exodus."

Would Unite Unions and Socialists.

Keir Hardie's object in coming to America, it appeared from his lecture, was to spread the doctrine of Socialism as viewed by the International Socialist Bureau, of which he is a member. But he had a second aim in view, it was obvious to those who understood the situation, which was to preach harmony between the Socialists and the trades unionists. In England harmony exists between these two organizations, but in this country there is open and violent discord. Mr. Hardie tried to show that the success of the combination in England, where forty-one leaders of the Labor Party had seats in the lower house, could only be duplicated in this country by following England's example.

Mr. Hardie protested at the order of things which permitted wealth and poverty to dwell side by side. He lamented, he said, that his own distinguished countryman, Andrew Carnegie, on whose platform he stood, should be a part of the system which was preventing the accession of the natural order of society.

"Suppose you were all so well supplied with luxuries as Mr. Carnegie," he said. "You would then see all about you the propertyless multitudes, for the holding of property necessitates the existence of the propertyless.

"Why is the working class not educated? Why does it lack leisure and refinement? Surely, in the beginning of things, the workingman had just as much of what we in Scotland call 'gumption' as any other class. Yet why is it that the working class is bereft of all the things which that gumption should, under normal conditions, procure for them. It is because the working class is the Tantalus of the modern world; there is plenty all about the workingmen, all fruits of their own labor, but everything is just out of reach, and hunger and thirst result. What is the spell that holds things out of reach? The issue is to discover the spellbinders and to throw them out, cost what it may in consequences.

"It is essential that the working class should be kept unintelligent, or as near the hunger line as possible. The property owning class requires it. I don't blame the property owners for the system that exists. It is not the individual that we must condemn, but rather the system which produces the successful millionaire at one end and the starving workingman at the other. It lies with the workingman to break up the system, and if he does not utilize his power, no class should come to his assistance.

"Those Socialists who are so fond of hurling epithets of abuse and scorn at Samuel Gompers might remember that once they have done for Socialism what Gompers has done for trades unionism, it will be time enough to make criticisms.

"You must get together. Karl Marx said that workmen of the world should unite. He did not say that workmen should become Socialists first and then unite. First get together, and then you will find that you are all class-conscious Socialists. Trades unionism is not sufficient to win the fight. It may win higher wages at the expense of a strike or threat of a strike, but it cannot prevent the capitalists from taking back in increased prices of food all that has been won in the strike. It can't give freedom to the working class. Don't be misled by strikes. They are nothing new. We had them in England over a century ago. Trades unionism has its limitations."

Labor's Hope in Politics.

Keir Hardie declared that politics was the natural field within which the dissatisfied must find their rights, and suggested that the same line of procedure be begun in this country that started in England with the coming into power of the Labor Party, of which he is a member.

"The organizing power of labor must first be felt in the State," he said, "and the labor representatives of the people must supplant the capitalist representatives. In England we now have 1,500,000 workers under the Labor Party banner. We have forty-one labor members in the House of Commons. We are not called Socialists in the American sense, perhaps. We are an alliance of trade-unionists and Socialists. We are the working party. Our representation is made up of machinists, miners, carpenters, shop workers, (you would call them sales gentlemen, I suppose,) school teachers, and others. We have raised our own class standard, and we have a great deal more influence than some of your Socialists.

"The Bull Moose Party," he said, "is proving wonderfully that there exists in the other two parties a great number of men who are sick of the corruption of party politics and who want to get into a new party to start all over again. It is a laudable desire.

"I'm not a prophet nor even a son of a prophet, but I venture the prediction that the new party will go the way of other third parties. The Progressive Party, so-called, has no economic basis. It has nothing to distinguish itself from the other two parties. Its money comes from the same source.

"Its platform, however, is one of social progress, and, as history bears us out, the existence of the new party will help the working class party—that is, the Socialist Party—and not the Bull Moose himself. It will tend to increase the vote of the Socialist Party, and the bigger you make the vote this year the more social reforms you will get.

"If you want social reforms, don't vote for the Bull Moose Party and their social reforms. Vote for the Socialist Party and then you will get social reforms. Don't let the politicians fool you. The only reason there are three large parties is to keep the working party split up."

In closing his address Mr. Hardy had this to say about the President, whom he referred to as "Taft:"

"Taft has said in his political speeches that Socialism is an attempt to interfere with natural law. What can be his idea of natural law? When a dog has a bone, according to the unalterable natural law, he has to guard it himself. Taft would call in a policeman to help him guard it, or a whole army. The policeman's club is natural law in his interpretation. So is private property and all the wrongs that go with it."

"What would be the first law the Socialists would enact if they had the power?" asked a man when it was announced that questions were in order.

"The first thing that the Socialists would set down," replied Mr. Hardy, "would be the principle that no man who would not work should have a bite to eat."

Mr. Hardie made the last address of his American trip last night at the New Palm Garden in Brownsville. An audience of more than 2,000 persons assembled to hear him.

He told them that in his opinion the Socialists in the country would roll up a vote of 3,000,000 in the election.

REGISTRATION SLUMP WORRIES PARTY MEN

All Kinds of Explanations, but Even Republican Leaders Say It Bodes Ill for Their Ticket.

APATHY IN THEIR RANKS

Saturday Holiday Given as a Reason for Poor Showing Made—Voters Expected to Do Better This Week.

Political leaders in the city spent much time yesterday trying to discover why the registration on Friday and Saturday, the first two days the books were open this year, had fallen so far below the figures of former Presidential years, notably 1904 and 1908. It is no exaggeration to say that Democratic, Republican, and Progressive Party leaders are greatly worried over the poor showing, and they are hoping that on the final two days of registration, next Friday and Saturday, the average will be made up.

The Republican managers are much more worried than either the Democrats or the Bull Moose. They find evidence on every hand that the enormous slump in the figures all over the State from four years ago is due to apathy on the part of the voters, and they realize that this means the Republican candidates will be hardest hit. It is in the Republican districts that the slump is greatest. While there is a great falling off in many Democratic districts, other districts, notably on the lower West Side, where the Jewish and Italian vote is heaviest, the figures compare favorably with the first two days of other years, and the Republican managers admit this fact augurs well for the Democratic and Bull Moose candidates for Governor.

An idea of the enormous falling off in this year's registration figures, compared with the past two Presidential years, can be gained from the fact that the first two days' total for this year is 25,000 behind that of the corresponding two days in 1908, and 53,000 behind the corresponding period in 1904, when Col. Roosevelt was candidate for President. Many and interesting are the reasons set forth yesterday by the political leaders of all parties to explain the deficiency. At Republican State and County Headquarters nothing else was talked about yesterday, and it was generally admitted by the gloomy leaders that it presaged Republican defeat in November. Of course, none of the leaders would make such a statement over their signatures, but all agreed that the situation looked very bad.

Ifs and Ands of the Situation.

"If it doesn't buck up next Friday and Saturday the case will be hopeless," said one leader, and others nodded assent. Then they started to explain. The new signature and identification law, which went into effect since 1908, it was explained, may have had much to do with keeping citizens from registering, especially in the districts where the illiterate voters are most numerous because many of these would feel ashamed at having to admit that they could not read or write. The whole practice of demanding higher requirements of voters was set down as likely to influence a number of those who have the right of suffrage to remain away from the registration booths.

Another reason given is that many voters, a great many more than is usual in a Presidential year, have not yet made up their minds how they are going to vote or whether they will vote at all. It was generally agreed by leaders of all parties that there was so much political confusion this year due to the wide split in the Republican Party, that thousands of voters were still trying to make up their minds just what to do. These, it was explained, are waiting until the very last moment before deciding which candidate to support. The fact that all three parties had put unusually good candidates in the Gubernatorial field this year, also tended, it was thought, to establish uncertainty in the voters' minds.

Then it was pointed out—and leaders of all parties eagerly seized on this explanation—that the general holiday spirit in the city on Saturday was responsible for the disregard of registration by many citizens. Saturday being a legal holiday, thousands of workers eagerly seized the first opportuunity they had to view the warships in the river, while thousands more watched the land parade or the baseball bulletins. The illumination of the ships at night also kept many away. The Italian parade alone, it is estimated, kept a large number from registering.

Richer Ones Out of Town.

The decline in the uptown and so-called "silk stocking" districts, which are Republican, as a rule, is accounted for by the fact that many took advantage of the holiday to go out of town for the week-end. Then it is pointed out that the second day of registration was always light.

Over and above all these reasons, however, the fact stands out boldly that apathy on the part of Republican voters was general all over the State. William Barnes, Jr., Chairman of the Republican State Committee, went to Albany on Saturday to register, and had not returned yesterday. Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the Republican County Committee, gave it as his opinion that the lack of interest manifested by the low figures was due to the fact that the independent voters as a rule did not make up their minds so far in advance just what candidate, if any, to support, and they always waited until the two last days of registration. Mr. Koenig expects a big improvement in next Friday's and Saturday's figures.

William Sulzer, Democratic candidate for Governor, said much the same thing. The figures for the last two days, he said, would reach a new high-water mark. He thought that fully 1,600,000 voters would be registered in the State when the last two days were over.

"The low figures for the first two days were due in great measure to the fact that so much has been going on in the way of sightseeing and amusement during Friday and Saturday," said Mr. Sulzer.

Many Indifferent Citizens.

Charles F. Murphy was not in town yesterday, and the members of the Democratic National Committee who were at headquarters said they were not paying much attention to what was happening in the State. At the Republican National Committee silence reigned.

Senator Joseph A. Dixon, Chairman of the National Progressive Committee, said he had not been paying much attention to the registration in the State, but from what he had heard he judged that apathy on the part of Republican voters was responsible for the showing made.

"I talked with a prominent New York politician last night," said Mr. Dixon, "and he told me that there was a surprisingly large number of voters to whom neither of the three Presidential candidates made any especial appeal this year. He told me that many voters had made up their minds to stay away from the polls. There is no enthusiasm anywhere for President Taft, and certainly there is none in New York State. Wherever there is any enthusiasm, it is for Col. Roosevelt.

The Democratic leaders decided yesterday to make a special effort to get out a large registration during the final two days of enrollment. The Republican leaders here are in such an inactive spirit that no special effort will be made. The Republicans are not getting much money this year, if the local leaders are to be believed. One Republican at State headquarters explained the money situation in this way:

"Those who have contributed liberally to the Republican Party in the past seem to have made up their minds that the party cannot win this year and that it would be a waste of good money to contribute anything. Others are saying that they do not want to become a target for a future campaign investigating committee such as is sitting at present, and therefore they are taking no chances."

BALTIMORE DEMOCRATS GAIN.

Registration Shows Increase of 3,038 to Republican Loss of 9,522.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 13.—In the new registration in Baltimore City, completed last night, the Democrats, on party affiliation, eclipsed all previous figures, going far ahead of the results of 1908 and 1910, in which years also there were new enrollments. The Republicans, on the other hand, fell far behind and this, the Democrats believe, presages a sweeping Wilson victory in Maryland.

The total registration for this year is 112,122, against 118,000 on the old books. Of this number 93,429 are white and 15,693 colored. The affiliation is: Democratic, 58,998; Republican, 34,780; Progressive, 5,947; "declined," 12,397. Cardinal Gibbons is in the "declined" list.

The total registration in 1908, which preceded the Taft-Bryan campaign, one of the most interesting waged in this State for years, was 115,986. Of this number 98,821 were white and 17,165 colored. The party affiliation was: Democrats, 55,960; Republican, 44,302; "declined," 15,724.

Thus it it seen that on affiliation the Democrats have an increase of 3,038, while the Republican decrease is 9,522. The Republican majority in the State in 1908 was 605.

WILSON WORKER FOR STRAUS

Benjamin C. Marsh Calls Bull Moose State Ticket Best for Masses.

Benjamin C. Marsh, who is Executive Secretary of the Committee on Exhibits formed by the Democratic National Committee, and in that capacity organized the exhibit in the tariff "Chamber of Horrors" at Union Square, is out with an appeal to all Wilson men in this State to vote for Oscar S. Straus and the Bull Moose State ticket.

"The many reasons why every Wilson man in New York State should vote the State Bull Moose ticket are all based upon one fundamental fact," said Mr. Marsh in his appeal. "The general and permanent improvement of economic conditions can be effected only by legislative action, either the enactment of laws to prevent 'special privilege' or the repeal of laws now granting 'special privilege' and subversive of justice.

"Self-preservation is the first law of nature, and every citizen in a democracy must avail himself of the opportunity to improve his economic condition. The only State platform which offers any reasonable opportunity for improving the condition of the average worker in New York State is the Bull Moose platform. The Republican, as well as the Democratic, platform gives some promise of improving the machinery of government. The Bull Moose is the only one which is committed definitely to those economic changes which would secure to the average citizen improvement of his economic condition. Moreover, the Republican and Democratic Parties must be judged not only upon the platform pledges, but upon their record as well."

Mr. Marsh in his lengthy appeal then points out that the legislative and administrative record of the two older parties is one of broken platform pledges when policies concerning the welfare of the masses are considered.

$500,000 SALE

Why Waste Half Your Clothes Money?

You wouldn't willingly pay double for anything.

Yet you deliberately commit just such an extravagance if you overlook this great sale.

There's hardly a garment in the Hackett-Carhart stocks—stocks worth a half million dollars—that can be duplicated elsewhere at double today's prices.

And even were you to pay the double price, it is doubtful whether you would secure the equal of Hackett-Carhart styles, or fabrics, or tailoring.

Doubtless you know the reason for this remarkable money saving opportunity: It's all due to the recent Hackett-Carhart receivership.

The creditors accepted 50 cents on the dollar, and the other 50 cents is offered you.

More than that: This splendid saving is offered you in the finest clothes that the season has produced. It is yours, multiplied many times over, in every garment.

Surely this is no time to hesitate. True, more than 25,000 garments are to be sold—and the variety is enormous. But it won't last forever.

Nor is it a selfish motive on our part that prompts us to urge you to visit one of the Hackett-Carhart stores today.

Today your visit means real money to you. You couldn't be more highly paid for the time spent in coming here. It is your chance to save

The Meat in the Nut

To our Mind it's the REASON WHY back of our Declaration that our clothes cannot be approached for the money in New York that makes our Declaration worth while.

For anybody can make Declarations. And they may be just empty statements—empty as the hollow nut shell and equally worthless. The WHY is the meat in the nut.

Now for three weeks we've been pounding home a single Declaration—that our fabrics are exclusive—and telling WHY. And although we have heard similar Declarations elsewhere—we have yet to see a WHY.

Our Reason WHY is this: Because we make our own clothes we buy our fabrics seven months after the shops that sell other folks' clothes have to select their fabrics.

We go to the Woolen Mills at such a late date that their designers are already designing new patterns for next year. We bought many of these.

Therefore, we have exclusive fabrics. And into them is put the skilled workmanship productive of such style as their superiority deserves.

Unseen Empire
By
David Starr Jordan

Dr. Jordan here shows that civilized nations are all in their degree under the domination of a power stronger than kings or parliaments, more lasting than armies or navies, the unseen Empire of Finance. He further shows that this mastery is not now in the hands of individual men, however powerful, but that it has passed over into an impersonal Empire of Debt. Many of the essential statements which Dr. Jordan makes have been verified by leading bankers both in this country and abroad. There is an "unseen emprie" that can to a certain, perhaps to a large, degree sway the destinies of nations, and the method, if not the exact extent of it, is told in this highly informing and suggestive volume.

ROBB EXPLAINS ORDER ABOUT FIRE WALLS

Speaks of Service Board's "Astonishing Failure" to Consider Fire Hazard in Subways.

WRITES ATTORNEY GENERAL

Of the Legality of the Insurance Exchange He Says in Effect an Inquiry Will Be Welcomed.

Willis O. Robb, manager of the New York Fire Insurance Exchange, has written to Attorney General Carmody reviewing the entire controversy which has arisen between the Exchange and the Public Service Commission with regard to the erection of fire-walls across the opening made by contractors in cellars along the line of the new subways. The Attorney General had sent to him the letter of Chairman Willcox complaining of the action of the Exchange and raising the question of its legality as an institution.

Mr. Robb quotes the provision of fire insurance policies, which permits the employment of mechanics in building, altering or repairing premises for fifteen days without affecting the protection against fire, and points out that this has been for the last sixteen years supplemented by the so-called Mechanics' Privilege. This has allowed the employment of mechanics for ordinary alterations and repairs without limit as to time. The imposition of an additional premium to cover the building risk, that is for alterations or repairs which cannot be included under the two provisions just quoted, Mr. Robb shows has been a regular custom at fixed rates.

It always has been the practice of the Fire Exchange and the individual companies to leave to the insured the decision when they were about to have alterations to their premises made, whether they should rely on the free privileges granted to them or should apply for Builders' Risk rates.

This question had to be faced by the property owners when the construction of the new subway was begun, and Mr. Robb thus describes the result:

"Neither owners, tenants, nor brokers were usually content to take the responsibility of going on without the special Builders' Risk indorsement under the circumstances now existing. And especially the more experienced and conscientious brokers, who could not but advise many of their clients that the work going on or about to go on in their premises was not covered by the Mechanics' Privilege for ordinary alterations and repairs, were embarrassed by the gratuitous advice those clients received from other brokers anxious to gain a foothold, that they should content themselves with the free permits and take their chances with the companies in case of loss.

"Inquiry also showed that the Public Service Commission was requiring from their contractors no protection for the new openings beyond plank partitions or corrugated iron on wooden framework, thus indicating that the owners had a right to some defense against the dirt and noise of the work, but to none whatever against the increased fire hazard."

The desire of the property owners and insurance brokers to get some definite ruling on the question induced the Fire Exchange to make the decision with regard to firewalls which has caused the present controversy. This, Mr. Robb says, for a time seemed to clear the air, and an estate having much property along Broadway was satisfied, after consultation with the Exchange, that its requirements were reasonable.

The business was later taken up by the Public Service Commission, and Mr. Robb quotes from the correspondence which passed between the Exchange and the commision. In answer to the charge that the Exchange had refused a conference, Mr. Robb refers to a letter he wrote the commission on July 23, in which he quoted from a paragraph from a letter to the commission, June 23, reading:

"If the foregoing position of the Exchange leaves your commission still desirous of a conference, I shall be glad to arrange for same if so advised."

Moreover, Mr. Robb points out that when he wrote to the commission to acquaint it with the fact that the Exchange had made concessions in cases where there was only one story below the grade to be protected. The commission acknowledges the letter without renewing its request for a conference, consequently, says Mr. Robb, the Exchange believed that the matter had been disposed of.

The Merchants' Association and the Fire Commissioner, Mr. Robb goes on to state, without any consultation with the Exchange, have apparently accepted its requirements as reasonable, and he then takes up the charges of illegality brought against the Exchange by the commission. Of these he says:

"The Public Service Commission complained to the Mayor of the illegality of the Commissioner's order, and to you of the illegality of the very existence of this exchange, at whose door it laid the blame really due to its own complete and astonishing failure even to think of the fire hazard involved in connecting up a mile or two of buildings on each side of the congested value section of Broadway by subway and sidewalk vault openings without any kind of fire stop whatever. The fact in this as in many a similar case has been that the underwriters have better safe guarded the public interest involved than has the public body directly charged with that duty.

"So much for the facts of the particular transaction. As to the proposed hearing on the general question of the right of this exchange to exist—a wholly irrelevant question clearly raised to distract attention from the shortcomings of the complainant body—we are quite content that you should order and hold such a hearing whenever your official duty seems to you to require it. This Exchange operates under the close supervision of the Insurance Department of the State, in accordance with a statute to that effect passed upon the recommendation of a legislative investigating committee that after a full inquiry had unanimously reported it to be for the public interest that such organizations, if proper supervision and publicity are maintained, should not only be allowed, but encouraged.

"It may be that this finding ought to be challenged and reviewed every few months, or years, by courts or legislative bodies or executive officers of the State; and if you think the public interest calls for such a review at your hands at this time, we can only await your further order to that effect."

SLEEPS WALKING BAREFOOT.

It Took a Surgeon to Awaken Woman Policeman Stopped.

While her family slept, Miss Ella Skidmore, 28 years old, a school teacher, afflicted with somnambulism brought on by a nervous breakdown, walked out of her house at 109 Halsey Street, Brooklyn, at 1 o'clock yesterday morning and through the streets for two blocks, where she was stopped by Policeman Peter Horan of the Gates Avenue Station at Hancock Street and Marcy Avenue.

She was barefooted, clad in a kimona, and her hair was hanging loose down her back, when the policeman asked her what she was doing out at that time of the morning. Horan noticed that her eyes were wide open and stared straight ahead. She did not answer his question.

The policeman sent for an ambulance. Dr. Poole of the St. John's Hospital awakened her, and as soon as she realized where she was and what had happened she became hysterical. After she was quieted she gave her name and address. Word was sent to her family, who are well known in the vicinity, and they took her home.

Miss Skidmore had been under a physician's care for several months for nervousness. She is a teacher in a private kindergarten in Manhattan.

When City Judge Beall of Yonkers refused to decide his case over the telephone yesterday, John Janes, a manufacturer of 53 South Hamilton Street, Poughkeepsie, took an unusual way to show his displeasure. Evidently having come prepared, Mr. Janes went out to his auto, after leaving a watch as security in the police station, and attached to the rear of his auto a long strip of blue cloth bearing the words, "Thank you."

Mr. Janes was arrested for speeding. He said he would rather pay a ten-dollar fine than be compelled to return. He will be examined next Sunday.

Y. M. H. A. LEADERS WANT CENTRAL BODY

Committee Appointed to Plan One That Shall Be an Improvement on the Y. M. C. A.'s.

TO BE NATIONAL IN SCOPE

And It Will Seek to Co-ordinate All Jewish Institutions Engaged in Betterment Work.

At a meeting held yesterday morning in the Y. M. H. A. Building, Ninety-second Street and Lexington Avenue, preliminary steps were taken to form a central commission which will co-ordinate the various Jewish organizations working for educational and social betterment, and for the development of religious and general vocational instruction. This commission, by bringing unity of action and harmony of effort, will not only increase the efficiency of the various organizations now in existence, but it is planned to so organize that it will be able to furnish financial assistance for the creation of educational and religious organizations where they are needed and cannot now be established because of either lack of financial help or the seeming impossibility of the Jews to combine for betterment work.

There were about seventy-five persons present at yesterday's meeting. Jewish organizations in this city, Philadelphia, Chicago, and Boston were represented. Judge Julian W. Mack of Chicago presided, and Felix M. Warburg acted as temporary Secretary. Among those present were Dr. S. Schechter, President of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America; Mrs. I. Unterberg, President of the Y. W. H. A.; Marcus M. Marks, Nathan S. Sodekson of Boston, Louis Marshall, President of the Jewish Protectory; Dr. N. A. Finklestein of Boston, Julius Rosenwald of Chicago, Judge Alexander H. Geismar, President of the Y. M. H. A. of Brooklyn; the Rev. Dr. Samuel Schulman, rabbi of Temple Beth-El; Dr. Cyrus Adler, Samuel Greenbaum, the Rev. Dr. J. L. Magnes, and Isaac Hassler of Philadelphia.

Mr. Warburg, who has given much thought to the subject, and who was one of those active in issuing the call for yesterday's meeting, told of the need of co-operation in Jewish educational and social betterment work. He said the subject should be carefully considered and the plans of organization and scope as carefully worked out, for such an organization as was proposed would be of vast importance and far reaching in its effect.

It was agreed that the new controlling body should be modeled upon the general lines of the national conference of the Y. M. C. A. It was pointed out that with the experience and plan of operation of the Y. M. C. A. central body to go by it would be possible to improve upon it and make the proposed commission or conference much more effective. The need of a definite programme and the guidance of men who have made betterment work a life study were also insisted upon.

A resolution was adopted calling for the appointment of a committee of ten, which, after conferences with educational institutions throughout the country, will outline the plan and scope of the national body. Some of the questions which this committee will consider are:

Could a Board of expert Supervisors be helpful to all Jewish educational institutions, and to what degree would the existence of such a board relieve the different institutions from individual expenditure for superintendence?

What should be the representation of the organizations engaged in different branches of betterment work, including specialists in woman's work, in the co-ordinating body?

Is it practicable to exchange membership privileges between the various Y. M. H. A. and similar organizations, so that members in good standing in any one of them could benefit by similar privileges elsewhere?

What can be done for the benefit of young Jewish travelers and what means of identification and introduction could be adopted?

What conditions must be fulfilled to make an association eligible to such a federation?

Much time will be required for the committee to work out the plan and scope, and at least two weeks before the next meeting is called by the Chair the report will be printed and sent to the various organizations throughout the country for their consideration and action. The committee will confer with educational institutions and Jewish committees and will be to an extent guided by the advice given and the data gathered.

Tel-Electric
PIANO PLAYER

THE officers of this big bull dog of our Navy have recently purchased two Tel-Electric Piano Players, one of which has replaced a pneumatic player. Several years' service on other ships of our Navy has proved that the unique mechanical features and the marvelous musical qualities of the Tel-Electric are absolutely unaffected, either by the damp air of the sea or by the concussion of heavy gun fire.

The music rolls of the Tel-Electric are made of thin brass—thinner than paper—and will not warp or tear. They always "track perfectly"—one of the reasons why the Tel-Electric gives such perfect satisfaction in homes which are near the seashore or in the country.

There are many other reasons why you should see and hear the Tel-Electric before you select any piano-player or player-piano. Here are a few of the more important:

Because it is operated entirely by electricity, though electricity in the house is not essential. No pumping. No noisy bellows.

Because it is entirely out of sight and can be played from a distance.

Because it does not injure your piano's appearance in any way or obstruct the keyboard.

Because it can be easily attached to any grand or upright piano.

Because it may be hand-controlled by the individual to produce every effect that a pianist or a piano player can give, or it will play itself with complete musical expression.

Because it brings out all the artistic qualities of your piano.

Because it can be played easily and perfectly by young and old, weak or strong.

Because it eliminates all the drudgery and leaves only the pleasures of piano playing.

Because it uses brass music rolls into which the expression is cut—these rolls are indestructible and inexpensive.

Because it has never been replaced for another piano-player or player-piano by any of its thousands of users.

Price, $350. Convenient Terms.

RIDICULES THEORY IMPLICATING GOMPERS

Morrison Says President Was in St. Louis When Dynamite Plot Was Arranged.

CONSPIRACY STORY ABSURD

Also Explains Presence of Indicted Men, Who, He Says, Were Federation Delegates.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, made a response to-day in explanation of the testimony in the dynamite conspiracy trial at Indianapolis which hinted at the possibility that Samuel Gompers, President of the Federation, might be implicated in the conspiracy.

The tesimony that brought in the name of Mr. Gompers was given by Frank Schilling of St. Louis, a hotel clerk. He said that in November, 1910, when the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers was holding its annual convention in St. Louis, Frank M. Ryan, head of the Structural Iron Workers; Michael J. Young, F. J. McNulty, M. B. Madden, and Olaf A. Tveitmoe were registered at the hotel where Schilling served as clerk, and that Mr. Gompers was around the hotel a great deal, but not registered. The prosecution is apparently endeavoring to show that the conspiracy to blow up the building of The Los Angeles Times was formed at this period, when the iron workers' convention was being held in St. Louis. It is alleged that Tveitmoe was the paymaster of the dynamiters, and that during the St. Louis convention he told Ryan, President of the Iron Workers, that the Pacific Coast expected "a Christmas present in the shape of more explosions."

President Gompers left Washington to keep engagements in New York State on the day Schilling's testimony was given. To-day Secretary Morrison decided to make an explanation in regard to Mr. Gompers's presence in St. Louis in November, 1910. Mr. Morrison said that any inference from Schilling's story that President Gompers was implicated in the dynamiting was absurd.

"It is true," he said, "that President Gompers was in St. Louis in November, 1910. So was I. So were the other officers of the American Federation of Labor. I have heard this silly story before, and I am perfectly willing to give all of the facts, so that any one can judge for himself how much of a mystery there is back of it.

"The annual convention of the American Federation of Labor in the year 1910 was held in St. Louis from Nov. 14 to Nov. 26, inclusive. Is there anything remarkable in the fact that President Gompers was there? He usually is found in the neighborhood where a convention of the Federation is going on. The headquarters of the American Federation of Labor was at the Planters' Hotel. I am not a bit surprised that President Gompers was seen around that hotel a good deal. If people had been looking they would have seen me there, too. The building trades department had its headquarters at the Southern Hotel, and I think Mr. Gompers could have been seen around that hotel also.

"There appears to be a curious lot of misinformation about what was going on in St. Louis, but I cannot imagine that the witness who testified yesterday made such an error as to state that the ironworkers were holding their annual convention there at that time. Surely he was misquoted, for the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers held its annual convention in 1910 at Rochester, N. Y., in September, two months before the time indicated. The constitution of the ironworkers, adopted Jan. 1, 1910, and in operation that year, fixes the third Monday in September as the date for the opening of each annual meeting. A simple reference to the constitution ought to settle that.

"Following the annual convention of the Federation of Labor, the convention of building trades was held in the afternoon, as is usual, the dates of the latter convention being from Nov. 28 until Dec. 5, 1910. President Gompers and I remained in St. Louis to attend it, and we were 'seen around' the hotels by a good many men with whom we were in daily association.

"Now as to the five men—Ryan, Young, McNulty, Madden, and Tveitmoe—who were registered at the hotel when President Gompers was seen around it. Why were they there? The question is easily answered by referring to the lists of delegates. Ryan and McNulty were delegates to the American Federation of Labor Convention. Tveitmoe was a delegate from the American Brotherhood of Cement Workers to the convention of the building trades. M. J. Young was a delegate from Boston to the same convention, having been sent there by the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers. M. B. Madden, who is now dead, represented a discordant element in the building trades of Chicago. He was there in regard to the Chicago situation, and attended the building trades convention.

"The charge that Mr. Gompers's presence in St. Louis had any connection in any way with a dynamiting conspiracy is thoroughly ridiculous," added Mr. Morrison.

GROCER KILLED BY CLERK.

Difference of $2 in Wages Cause of Third Avenue Shooting.

Churchgoers who were moving sedately along Third Avenue yesterday morning scattered at the sound of pistol shots which came from in front of the grocery store at 2,615, and a policeman ran forward to head off the retreat of young Elly Geller, clerk in the store, who ran into the policeman's arms just as he was pitching a revolver into the street. On the pavement Samuel Schwartz, the grocer, lay dying. He died shortly after on the operating table at Lincoln Hospital.

Geller was locked up on his own confession that he had shot his employer when the latter paid him $2 less than he thought was due him.

Racing Lessons

A Fiat Car, driven by Caleb Bragg, won the Grand Prize Race at Milwaukee, Wis., on October 5th, averaging 69.3 miles an hour for the 410 miles. A Fiat also won the Grand Prize Race in 1908 and 1911. Of the four contests for this famous Gold Trophy Fiat Cars have won three.

Fiat has won more great racing victories than any other automobile—yet it is in no sense an exclusive racing car.

The lessons learned from these clean-cut victories and world's records in speed and endurance on track and road have been two-fold.

1st. They have proven, as no other medium could prove, the correctness of Fiat Design, the strength of Fiat Materials, and the thoroughness of Fiat Construction.

2nd. They have demonstrated to the world that the famous Italian Fiat engineers are unequalled in the solution of any motor car problem.

The cars produced by F·I·A·T at Turin and Poughkeepsie are the final expression of these racing tests as applied to every-day uses. They have the same oiling system, ignition, carburetor, clutch, cooling system, axles, frames, wheels, steering gear, etc., as the cars which have contributed to the great Fiat accomplishments in the contest world.

DENEEN GIVES LIE BACK TO ROOSEVELT

Declares Colonel Did Ask Him to Cut Contests at Chicago to 34.

REFERRED IT TO HADLEY

Governor, Put in the Ananias Club, Explains His Position at the Convention.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 13.—Gov. Deneen, replying to statements by Col. Roosevelt yesterday, gave out to-night a statement, saying in part:

"Gov. Hadley introduced at the Republican National Convention a motion to take from the temporary roll the Taft delegates and substitute Roosevelt delegates in certain contested States. These numbered about seventy-eight delegates.

"Col. Roosevelt sent for me and asked me to introduce a resolution limiting the number to the thirty-four delegates from Washington, California, Arizona and Texas. I refused to do this without Gov. Hadley's consent, because he had presented the motion. I felt that I could not change the line of a battle which had been participated in by Gov. Hadley and others in behalf of Col. Roosevelt and make them appear to be acting either without knowledge or without good faith to the convention.

"I went to the convention and saw Gov. Hadley and Gov. Hadley himself wrote the amendment to his motion which I introduced. He wrote it in the presence of Senator Dixon of Montana, Senator Borah of Idaho and myself.

"The motion of Gov. Hadley was to strike from the temporary roll the Taft delegates and substitute Roosevelt delegates in their stead. My amendment provided that no delegates whose right to a seat in the convention was questioned by Gov. Hadley's motion should have a right to vote on the selection of a member for the credentials committee or upon its report.

"Col. Roosevelt, in his statement on Saturday, makes me responsible for Gov. Hadley's statement, and states that my motion charged that the Taft delegates were stolen. The resolution does not so state, and there is no possibility of placing upon it such construction.

"Gov. Hadley himself said to the convention, in urging adoption of his motion: 'I do not say that these charges are true. I sat in that committee and know some of them are true. But, true or false, let us meet them here.'

"On the general question of contested delegations, it may be remembered that Col. Roosevelt cried 'Crook,' and quoted the Scriptural injunction 'Thou shalt not steal!' very vehemently regarding the selection of the Southern delegates long before the States with primary laws had had any opportunity to vote. He did this with apparent sincerity, but he reduced his claims and indignation with mathematical precision as he gained delegates in the primary States.

"Col. Roosevelt went out of his way to seek to injure me by garbled quotations in an effort to make it appear that I was an ally of Senator Lorimer. His statement is without truth or justification. In my testimony before the Senate Committee I said that Mr. Lorimer in an interview with me had stated that they had enough votes to prevent Senator Hopkins's re-election and that they proposed to elect Speaker Shurtleff. In reply I said: 'If you have power to elect Speaker Shurtleff why don't you elect yourself?' There was no offer to assist him.

"Col. Roosevelt says that Senator Lorimer called at the Executive Mansion at 2 o'clock in the morning and that I congratulated him on his election as Senator. The Colonel is at the very antipodes of truth. Mr. Lorimer called at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, after he had been elected, and was on his way over to his hotel.

"He asked me to make no comment upon his election and hold party matters in abeyance until he could readjust himself and bring harmony out of the discord in our party. I passed the compliments due to such an occasion. I saw him in Washington in December following his election when we had a short talk about waterways and again the following spring when he came to Springfield to defeat plans for a waterways. I have had no other meeting or relation with him since.

"I shall not answer Col. Roosevelt's abusive epithets except to say that a committee of five, representing his party, and with his approval, as I have been informed, called on me at the State House on July 22, 1912, and stated, in effect, if I would agree to vote for Roosevelt and announce that fact no third party ticket would be nominated against me and I would be indorsed and supported by the Colonel's friends. The abuse and opposition which I am now receiving is due to the fact that I am trying to make effective in Illinois the rule of the people by standing by the trust imposed in me by them at the primaries of April 9.

"Col. Roosevelt has received fair treatment from the Republicans of Illinois; from the delegates to the convention and from myself. I voted with his friends on every motion that affected his candidacy up to the time that he withdrew from the convention and did everything within my power to secure his nomination. But because he failed and because I refused to desert the Republican party, I am subjected to unmerited abuse."

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Col. Roosevelt declined to comment to-night on the statement issued by Gov. Deneen.

McADOO ANSWERS PERKINS.

Gov. Wilson, He Says, Will Continue to Discomfit His Enemies.

In a somewhat sarcastic vein George W. Perkins, Executive Chairman of the National Progressive Party, some days ago sat down and wrote an open letter to Acting Chairman McAdoo of the Democratic National Committee in which he expressed regrets at certain reports that Gov. Woodrow Wilson would not continue on the stump to the end of the campaign. Mr. Perkins wrote many other things that Gov. Wilson so far had failed to state his own and his party's position on tariff and trust legislation.

> Replying to yours of the 11th inst. Don't worry! Gov. Wilson will speak often enough, and say enough during the remainder of the campaign to keep his friends satisfied and his enemies discomfited.
> I am not surprised that you do not like Gov. Wilson's speeches. None of his opponents do; but we cannot help that. Gov. Wilson has a peculiarly effective way of handling the issues, and I do not think he needs any help or suggestions.
> Please do not hesitate, however, to submit any new suggestions that may occur to you.

Mr. Perkins took a lay-off yesterday from his arduous Bull Moose duties, which during the last weeks have kept him engaged until the small hours of the morning.

Effort to Have Him Accept Challenge from Dean Kirchwey.

An effort is being made to arrange a debate between Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University, who is an ardent Wilson man, and Dean George W. Kirchwey of Columbia University Law School, who is one of the Bull Moose candidates for the Court of Appeals. If it can be arranged, the subject will be the social and industrial planks in the Bull Moose platform.

It is intended that the debate shall be held in one of the public schools, which under a resolution recently adopted by the Board of Education have been thrown open for political gatherings. The challenge has been issued by Dean Kirchwey.

Bourke Cockran, Bull Moose candidate for Congress in the First District, has just returned from Baltimore, where he engaged in debate with United States Senator Rayner on National issues. Mr. Cockran took the Progressive and Senator Rayner the Democratic end of the argument. He has issued a challenge now to both the Republican and the Democratic National Committees offering to enter upon a series of five or ten debates with any advocates of their own policies they may select, provided only that Mr. Cockran's opponent must be a man well known to the public and of as high standing as Senator Rayner.

Should Dr. Eliot decide to enter the field it would be under Democratic auspices, for though the challenge from Dean Kirchwey was issued to both the old parties only the Democratic National Committee has responded so far. Boyd Fisher of the Democratic Social Service Committee sent word yesterday that he had wired Dr. Eliot and asked him to accept Dean Kirchwey's challenge.

THREE ESCAPE FROM HOUSE OF DETENTION

A PAL OF "GYP THE BLOOD"

Either Climbed a 20-Foot Wall Topped by 10-Foot Iron Pickets or Walked Out by the Door.

Three men held as witnesses for the State escaped last night from the House of Detention, and at 11 o'clock a general order to arrest them on sight was sent to all the five boroughs of the city.

One of the men who escaped was Max Kahn, held at the request of District Attorney Whitman as a witness in the Rosenthal case. Kahn it was who was found in the Glendale flat in company with "Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louie" when the gunmen were finally run to earth in Queens by Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty.

One of those who fled with Kahn was a lanky negro, and the other a wiry little man who is blind in one eye.

The House of Detention is a double five-story building that stands on Mulberry Street just next to the Mulberry Street Station. All important witnesses for the State no held within the jurisdiction by the pressure of substantial bail are kept there under the eyes of the police until they are called to the witness stand.

The women prisoners are detained in the part of the building that fronts on Mulberry Street, and behind that part is a big, high-walled courtyard. Across the courtyard in the rear part of the building the men witnesses are kept. The House of Detention gives all the appearance from the street of a private house, and those held there have more freedom than persons locked up in the city jails, but for all that it is virtually a prison, and a guard is always there.

The guard last night was Rudolph Teasney, and at 11 o'clock he ran breathless to the station next door to inform the Lieutenant on the desk that three of the men had escaped. They had gone, he said, after 9:50, for he had seen all of them at that time.

The alarm was immediately circulated, and then began persistent queries as to how the three had got out from a house that is supposed to keep them as securely as a prison cell. Teasney had no explanations to offer. It was suggested that the men might have managed to climb from the window looking on to the courtyard to the wall of the yard which rises to a height of twenty feet. But many who heard this explanation were profoundly skeptical, for above the brick wall is a row of ten-foot iron pickets, barbed and bent in and designed to shut off all escape that way.

Once over that obstruction, however, the rest would be comparatively easy. The drop of twenty feet would deliver the three to the backyard of 201 Mulberry Street.

A more plausible theory of the escape as it was gathered from the rank and file of Mulberry Street was that somehow the men had simply betaken themselves from the building by a no more romantic and ingenious means than that afforded by the front door. The suggestion that they might have left by the fire-escape did not last long, for the iron stairway is incased in sheet iron and locked at both top and bottom.

There were only six men detained at the House last evening, so that the escape represents half of the male witnesses kept there by the District Attorney.

Kahn, who was sitting in the little dining room of the Glendale flat when the two long-sought gunmen of the Rosenthal case were found there, never subsequently escaped from police supervision. When he was brought before the Coroner, sitting as a Magistrate, he gave the flat as his own address.

Of the other two one was William Clarey, 20 years old, of 315 East hirty-third Street. He had been held since April 22 as a witness in the murder of Christ Larsen. He is described as brown haired, blind in the right eye, short of stature, light of build, and clothed in a dark suit.

The other was a tall, thing negro named Thomas Wise, wanted as a witness in a cocaine case. Wise lived at 243 West Sixty-first Street, and left the House of Detention clothed in a gray suit and wearing a blue cap. He has an ugly scar on his neck.

BLIND AGAINST DOUBLE FARE.

Complain of P. R. R. Ruling Requiring Guide on Train with Them.

Special to The New York Times.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Oct. 13.—The Blind Men's Working Home of Philadelphia has just sent to the State Railroad Commission a complaint of a most unusual character. It is directed against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and protests against its ruling, which requires blind people to be accompanied by a guide, in this way doubling the expense of traveling.

The complainants declare that many of them will be unable to visit their homes if this ruling is enforced, and they think it unnecessary and unjust. Theq point out that in entering and leaving the trains they can always get volunteer assistance from other travelers. The complaint is signed by George E. Miller, York County; A. A. Coller, Perry County; Frank C. Yonst, Franklin County, and John Sowden, Philadelphia.

THE EVEN HAND

A STORY OF RETRIBUTIVE JUSTICE

Harshness is met by anger. They who sow the wind reap the whirlwind. The story is set in a New England Mill Town. The characters are Mill officials of opposite type; an agent, risen from the ranks, merciless and grasping; a superintendent of the old stock, son of a founder of the Mill, siding with the men. The lesson is that fair dealing and consideration for others is answered with trust and good will, while "even handed justice," to use the author's motto quotation, "commends th' ingredients of our poisoned chalice to our own lips." The characters, men and women, are of various types and drawn with a strong hand. This first book of a new author is remarkably successful and full of promise. Illustrated.

HENRY VAN DYKE'S
New and Most Important Book of Fiction,
The Unknown Quantity

is described in a sub-title as A book of Romance and Some Half-Told Tales. "Let X equal the Unknown Quantity" stands on the fly-leaf. And all its stories—French-Canadian, and mystery stories, stories of the effect of music, stories of redemption—have in common that elusive unknown force which goes by many names; it is here beautifully revealed as a moral quality founded on the spiritual ideal. The illustrations are many and exceptional.

Scientific Sprague
By FRANCIS LYNDE

who wrote "The Price" and "The Taming of Red Butte Western," is a collection of real detective stories. "Scientific Sprague" is a government engineer with a passion for detective work. This he has the chance to gratify through the tangles of difficulties that enmesh the work of his friend, a railroad superintendent of the old "Red Butte Western." How he unravels them is told in the graphic narration of a half-dozen exciting episodes.

General A. W. Greely

is so well known as an author that a pretty complete idea of his new book, "TRUE TALES OF ARCTIC HEROISM IN THE NEW WORLD," will come from a glance at the contents,—the skill they are told with goes without saying. Contents: The Loyalty of Philip Staffe to Henry Hudson—Franklin's Crossing of the Barren Grounds—The Discovery of the Northwest Passage—Sonntag and Hans Hendrick—Rae and the Franklin Mystery—The Shipwreck of the Hansa—Parr's March from the Great Frozen Sea—The Missionary's Arctic Trail—Tyson's Marvellous Drift—Relief of American Whalers at Point Barrow, etc. There are maps and pictures.

Christmas Tales and Christmas Verse
By EUGENE FIELD:—

Nobody ever caught, held, and imprisoned in print so successfully as Eugene Field, The Christmas Spirit.

In current theory a child's mind passes through the stages of racial development. That may be why the stories that enthrall the child are primitive legends like those from Homer or Roman Mythology. This book is of that type; the great old Finnish epic, "THE KALEVALA," contained these stories:—"The Courting of the Maid of Beauty, the field of serpents, the deeds of Ilmarinen the Smith," etc.

by writing his first book,
A Camera Crusade Through the Holy Land, has preserved in a permanent and accessible form those qualities—hitherto limited by the walls of the lecture hall—which made his lectures famous. He gives the fresh narrative of a journey on horseback from Hebron on the South to Dan on the North, with excursions to Damascus and Mount Hermon.

Nor have the one hundred beautiful photographic illustrations been visible elsewhere; they are a selection from the total of two thousand he made on the journey. Each is accompanied with a list of biblical references it especially illustrates.

Price $3.00 net; by mail $3.27.

THE YALE BOOK OF AMERICAN VERSE
Professor of English Emeritus, Yale University.

This anthology is a chronologically arranged collection of poems by American authors, excluding the work of any living writer. The Editor has made a catholic yet discriminating selection, including specimens of all kinds of poetry, the serious as well as the light, the contemplative, the pathetic, the humorous, and the satiric. Not even have the travesty and the vers de societe been omitted. Lyrics inspired by the Civil War, as well as the National hymns, find their place in the collection.

Professor Lounsbury, whose commanding position in American letters peculiarly fits him for the onerous task of editorship, has brought wide and accurate reading to his labors, and as far as practicable has followed in each case the author's latest revised text.

A delightful introduction of over fifty pages states the viewpoint of the Editor in regard to anthologies with a wit which charms and a reasonableness which disarms criticism.

All who have read anything of Professor Lounsbury's will desire this book for the sake of his introduction, whether or not they are interested in anthologies in general.

UPRISING IN CUBA NOT LAID TO US

FRIENDSHIP FOR US GROWING

More Schools Needed for Republic's Young—Introduction of Our High School System Favored.

Dr. Carlos de la Torre y Huerta, ex-Mayor of Havana, and representative in the Cuban Congress from the District of Havana, who is a guest of friends in this city, declared last night that no prominent Cuban in either private or public life believed that there had been any American influence concerned in the recent uprising of the negroes in the eastern part of the Province of Santiago, despite the oft-repeated charge that some foreign interest was involved and had given the movement strength.

"It was a matter of purely local politics," he said. "The question was often asked, Who could have an interest in the negro revolution? Some answered that certain wealthy Americans might have such an interest But it was never shown that any American could have a motive in aiding such a cause. The general opinion is that no American had any interest in the uprising, directly or indirectly. The trouble was confined practically to a part of the eastern province of Santiago, and the Government has brought about a peaceful settlement without much difficulty.

"I want to say that the Cuban people to-day are warmer friends of the people of the United States than ever before. As the years have passed since the United States assisted Cuba in ending the revolution against Spain the people of Cuba have become convinced of the good intentions of the United States. There is great satisfaction everywhere in Cuba, due to continuation of these good intentions, and year by year the two countries are drawn closer together in mutual interest and help, and this international confidence is being constantly strengthened by the fact that in no instance has the United States taken advantage of a single situation, but has always considered the general welfare of Cuba first.

Americans Had Nothing to Gain.

"The Americans who are working the mines in Cuba could have had no interest in the Santiago uprising, for there was no duty on the products of those mines, and no one there could have been benefited had the revolution succeeded."

Concerning the trouble between Secretary Gibson of the American Legation and an editor in Havana, which resulted in the transfer of Mr. Gibson, Dr. de la Torre said he knew very little, but, so far as he was aware, it was a personal matter and did not represent any general feeling among the Cuban people. He is also Professor of Science in the University of Havana, and recently received the degree of Doctor of Science from Harvard University. He has given one-half of his valuable scientific collection to the American Museum of Natural History, of which he for some time has been a life member. The remainder of his collection will be placed in the University of Havana.

Accompanying Dr. de la Torre is his brother, Ricardo de la Torre y Huerta, Superintendent of Schools in the Province of Santa Clara, Cuba, who was commissioned by the Cuban Government to study the American school system while here and to make a report on the features he considers desirable for introduction in Cuba. He has held the position since his appointment by Gen. Leonard Wood.

Cuba Needs More Schools.

"The Cuban school system established by Gen. Wood has not, and could not, have been improved upon," said Ricardo de la Torre, "though much has been gained in experience and in details and mode of teaching. Only about 60 per cent. of the children of Cuba between the ages of 6 and 12 years now attend school, numbering in all about 130,000 pupils, with 4,000 teachers, and 3,200 schools. We want a law to compel all children to attend school, but before that can be done we must build more schools to provide for them. We also intend to introduce the American high school system. The only higher education provided by the State now is the institute established in each of the six provinces.

"But I am paying more particular attention to the manual features of education as practiced in this country. I have spent some time in the Boston public schools, New York and Cambridge, and shall look into those of Newark, and the best thing I have found thus far is the system of teaching cooking and washing to girls in the schools of Boston. I think that will be one of the greatest additions we can make to our schools for the general welfare of the rising generations, and I shall recommend it to the Secretary of Instruction.

"We have a fair system for teaching boys in manual trades. Later on we hope to introduce some of the higher and more artistic branches I find in common practice here, such as metal work and other more skilled trades, but for the present we must be satisfied with the most practical efforts and wait the growth of an elaborate development. It was very fine in Boston to see the work of the young girls, hats and dresses, but for us just now the domestic arts are more important, so that is why I shall recommend cooking and household work above everything else. Our system now is limited to five grades, so we cannot take in all the courses used here in the public schools."

Mrs. Ricardo de la Torre, who received some of her early education in this country, accompanies her husband and acts as interpreter for him.

SENT ABROAD FOR FIGURES

To Make Comparisons Unassailable, Data for "Chamber of Horrors" Was Gathered on Same Day.

One of the most interesting exhibits in the Tariff Chamber of Horrors, 29 Union Square, will be a comparative table showing the prices of essential articles of food on the same day in London and New York. It was prepared from information obtained by an agent of the Committee on Exhibits who was sent to London.

The agent was instructed to get prices of such articles of food as beef, eggs, butter, and sugar in the London retail markets on Sept. 26. On the same day the committee sent its agents out among the retail markets in this city to get prices of the same foodstuffs here. The London prices were obtained from high-grade shops in Tottenham Court Road and Bedford Street. The New York prices were averaged from figures obtained from several moderate priced butchers and grocers.

The difference in prices, according to a table made public yesterday at the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee, was particularly apparent in American beef, which, after having crossed the ocean, in some cases was found to sell in London for about half the price it commanded in this city. Here is the comparative table:

Roast beef, (prime)	24c	*13c
Brisket of beef	18c-25c	*11c
Fowl, (broilers)	25c-30c	24c
Fowl, (fricassee)	22c	14c-18c
Steak, (sirloin)	28c-30c	*13c
Steak, (porterhouse)	32c	*24c
Steak, (round)	22c-26c	*17c
Bacon	25c	*26c
Leg lamb	16c-20c	13c-17c
Leg mutton	14c	13c
Veal, (breast)	18c-24c	15c
Ham, (smoked)	20c-24c	*18c
Eggs, (best)	43c-49c	36c
Eggs, (second grade)	37c-40c	29c
Eggs, (third grade)	27c-32c	24c
Butter, (best)	35c	32c
Butter, (second grade)	29c-31c	28c
Sugar, (granulated)	5½c	4c

*Imported from the United States.

The above prices are per pound, except in the case of eggs, where the price per dozen is given.

"Our figures are absolutely unanswerable," said Abram I. Elkus, Chairman of the Committee on Exhibits, yesterday. "They show how the high tariff mulcts the American at every meal."

Congressman William C. Redfield of Brooklyn, an expert on the tariff, said:

"When will our working people learn the error of taxing their ordinary articles of food? It seems as if this table, made under such striking conditions and with such exact and careful comparisons, should destroy once and for all the delusion that prosperity rises from the tariff."

LIGHT ON CHEMOTHERAPY.

It Is Feared That the New Therapeutic Agents Are Not Unmixed Blessings

There is danger now, it seems, according to the observations of scientists, that some of the new chemical remedies for disease are not the unmixed blessings they appeared to be when their discoveries were first heralded. It is true that they kill the pathogenic germs in the animal economy, but in doing so they leave in the body an amount of dead material which, when absorbed into the circulation, may be productive of untoward and even dangerous results.

Commenting upon the difficulties involved in the administration of chemotherapeutic agents, The Medical Record says:

"Those who seek to rid their domiciles of rodents know how often one nuisance is replaced by another through the death of the animals in their haunts. It may seem a crude and farfetched analogy between rats in the household and animal and vegetable parasites of human beings or between the former and irresponsibly proliferating tumor cells; yet at present the pathologists are being confronted with much the same sort of a problem as the aforesaid vermin infested householder. Once they succeed in destroying the activities of bacteria and tumor cells, the very death of these individuals forms a new source of danger.

"We have learned in late years that certain substances are by selective chemotherapeutic affinity enabled to cause the death of tumor cells, but through the fact that these structures so destroyed must undergo chemical decomposition with the formation of absorbable toxic products these discoveries are largely invalidated. We have also learned that it may not be an unmixed blessing to destroy in an instant all the pathogenic bacteria in the body, for the numerous untoward results from salvarsan appear to be due in part to the absorption en masse of the decomposition products of the destroyed spirochetes.

"The success of antidiphtheritic serum in neutralizing the toxemia of the disease, while at the same time the local proliferation of the bacteria was inhibited, has led us, perhaps, to expect too much from this plan of therapy. In a current number of the Berliner Klinische Wochenschrift Geronne announces that while he succeeded in overcoming the blood infection in croupous pneumonia through early intravenous injection of a new serum, the local condition, so far from showing a parallel improvement, yielded in certain cases the very opposite results. The lungs did not clear up as they ordinarily do, and in two instances the patients had rusty expectoration for days.

"These results appear to show that in filling one indication satisfactorily we may set new irresponsible mechanisms in motion."

TEXT OF BOND ACT NOW BEFORE VOTERS

Proposal to Spend $50,000,000 More on Roads Submitted at This Election.

$50,000,000 ALREADY SPENT

And Only a Start Made on Rebuilding the State's Highways—Majority to Carry New Measures.

On top of $50,000,000 already provided for the construction and maintenance of good roads in this State, the voters in the coming election will have submitted to them on a referendum a proposal to spend $50,000,000 more for the same purpose.

The original $50,000,000, nearly all of which has been expended, was provided for by a constitutional amendment and a statute, which went into effect in 1909. When the bond issue to raise this vast amount had been provided, it was thought that it would prove ample for all present-day highway purposes. Instead, only a fraction of the roads contemplated have been completed with the funds provided.

Here is the statute which will be submitted:

AN ACT making provision for issuing bonds to the amount of not to exceed $50,000,000 for the purpose of constructing and improving State and county highways, and providing for a submission of the same to the people to be voted upon at the general election to be held in the year 1912. Became a law April 12, 1912, with the approval of the Governor. Passed, three-fifths being present.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Bonds Authorized.—There shall be issued, in the manner and at the times hereinafter recited, bonds of the State in an amount not to exceed $50,000,000, which bonds shall be sold by the State and the proceeds thereof paid into the State Treasury, and so much thereof as shall be necessary expended for the purpose of constructing and improving the State and county highways as defined in the highway law. Said bonds when issued shall be exempt from taxation.

Sec. 2. Sale, Interest, Tax to Pay, Sinking Fund.—The Controller is hereby directed to cause to be prepared the bonds of this State to an amount not to exceed $50,000,000, said bonds to bear interest at the rate of not to exceed 4 per centum per annum, which interest shall be payable semi-annually in the City of New York. Said bonds shall be issued for a term of fifty years from their respective dates of issue, and shall be sold for not less than par. The Controller is hereby charged with the duty of selling said bonds to the highest bidder after advertising for a period of twenty consecutive days, Sundays excepted, in at least two daily newspapers printed in the City of New York and one in the City of Albany. Advertisements shall contain a provision to the effect that the Controller in his discretion may reject any or all bids made in pursuance of said advertisements, and in the event of such rejection the Controller is authorized to readvertise for bids in the form and manner above described as many times as in his judgment may be necessary to effect a satisfactory sale. Said bonds shall be sold in such lots and at such times as may be required for the purpose of making partial or final payments on work contracted for in accordance with the provisions of this act, and for other payments lawfully to be made under the provisions thereof. There is hereby imposed a direct annual tax to pay and sufficient to pay the interest on each bond issued under this act as it falls due, and to pay and sufficient to pay and discharge the principal of each of such bonds within fifty years from the date thereof. The rate of such annual tax shall be five one-thousandths of a mill on each dollar of valuation of real and personal property in this State subject to taxation, for each and every one million dollars or fraction thereof in par value of said bonds issued under this act, and outstanding or to be outstanding during the fiscal year during which the amount of such tax is computed. The tax imposed as herein provided shall be assessed, levied, and collected in the manner prescribed by law, and shall be paid by the several County Treasurers into the Treasury of the State. The proceeds of such tax shall be invested by the Controller in securities in which he is authorized by law to invest the trust and sinking funds of the State, and together with the interest arising therefrom, any premiums received on the sale of said bonds, and interest accruing on deposits of money received from the sale of said bonds or from miscellaneous sources shall constitute a sinking fund, which is hereby created. Said fund shall be used solely for the purpose of paying the principal and interest of bonds issued in accordance with the provisions of this act.

Sec. 3. Moneys Divided Between State and County Highways.—The sum of $20,000,000 of the moneys hereby authorized to be raised shall be used solely for the construction and improvement of State highways, as defined by Section 3 of the highway law, and the sum of $30,000,000 of the aforesaid moneys shall be used solely for the construction and improvement of county highways as defined by Section 3 of the highway law.

Sec. 4. Apportionment of Moneys.—The State Commission of Highways is hereby directed, immediately after this law shall take effect, to equitably apportion among the counties containing towns the total amount of money hereby authorized. Said apportionment for each of said counties shall be computed on the following basis: On the population as fixed by the Federal census of 1910, on the aforesaid measured mileage of public highways outside of cities and villages as obtained pursuant to Section 69 of Chapter 30 of the laws of 1909, and on the total area; and the sum of one-third of each of these three factors thus obtained for each of said counties shall constitute such equitable apportionment.

Sec. 5. Routes of State Highways.—The routes of the State highways to be constructed and improved hereunder are those specifically set forth and described in Section 120 of the highway law, being Chapter 30 of the laws of 1909, and the acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Sec. 6. Routes of County Highways.—The routes of county highways to be constructed and improved hereunder are such as shall be determined by the State Commission of Highways with the approval of the Boards of Supervisors of the respective counties as set forth and prescribed by the highway law.

Sec. 7. Control of Construction.—The work of construction and improvement of the aforesaid highways shall be under the management, supervision, and control of the State Commission of Highways, and the provisions of Articles 6 and 7 of Chapter 30 of the laws of 1909, known as the highway law, and the acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, so far as they may be applicable and not inconsistent herewith, shall apply to and govern the work authorized by this act. The maps, plans, routes, specifications, resolutions, and acts heretofore prepared or adopted for use in the improvement and construction of State and county highways shall be applicable to the work authorized under this act.

Sec. 8. Surplus.—Any surplus arising from the sale of bonds over and above the cost of the work herein provided for shall be applied to the sinking fund for the payment of said bonds.

Sec. 9. Submission of Law to People.—This law shall not take effect until it shall at a general election have been submitted to the people and have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election; and the same shall be submitted to the people of this State at the general election to be held in November, 1912. The ballots to be furnished for the use of voters upon the submission of this law shall be in the form prescribed by the election law, and the proposition or question to be submitted shall be printed thereon in substantially the following form, namely: "Shall chapter (here insert the number of the chapter) of the laws of 1912, entitled, 'An act making provision for issuing bonds to the amount of not to exceed $50,000,000 for the purpose of constructing and improving State and county highways, and providing for a submission of the same to the people to be voted upon at the next general election to be held in the year 1912,' be approved?"

The referendum on this new highway bond issue will be submitted as Proposition No. 1 and will be printed on a separate ballot which voters will receive at their various polling places together with the electoral and State ballots. Should a majority of those voting on Proposition No. 1 vote in the affirmative, the statute will go into effect automatically and at once.

LESS IDLENESS DUE TO LABOR DISPUTES

Better Trade Conditions in Half Year Also Produce More Work in the State.

YET STRIKES INCREASED

But the Working Time Lost Was Only Half That of Last Year—Accidents Reach a Record.

ALBANY, Oct. 13.—Monthly returns to the Bureau of Labor Statistics from 185 representative trade unions with a membership of upward of 112,000, or 23 per cent. of the total union membership in the State, indicate considerably less unemployment in the first six months of 1912, as compared with 1911. The percentage of members reported idle for any cause was lower this year in each month, so that the mean for the half year was 19.7, as against 24.8 last year. This difference is in part accounted for by less disputes this year, but principally by less idleness due to the condition of trade as affected either by business conditions or, in certain industries, weather conditions. Thus the mean percentage of idleness reported as due to labor disputes was 0.3 this year, as against 1.3 last year. This improvement for the first half of the year as a whole is about equally apparent in each month after January up to June.

In some contrast to this favorable comparison with last year is the fact that a comparison with earlier years is not favorable to 1912, except in 1908 and 1909, years of exceptional idleness following the panic of 1907.

The record of strikes and lockouts of the Bureau of Mediation and Arbitration shows for the second quarter of this year not far from the same number of disputes and employes involved as last year, but only about half as much time lost. The figures are, for this year and last respectively, 80 and 72 disputes, 30,359 and 35,962 employes concerned, and 377,075 and 741,317 working days lost in the quarter. The largest disputes of the quarter this year were the strikes of waiters and furriers in New York City, these two alone accounting for almost one-half of the employes involved in all disputes and a little over one-half of the quarter's time loss. No less than fifty of the eighty disputes this year were strikes for higher wages. In the quarter the Bureau of Mediation and Arbitration intervened in eighteen disputes as compared with thirty last year, and thirty-nine in 1910. Successful interventions, however, exceeded last year's record with a total of thirteen, as compared with eight in 1911, and nine in 1910. Two interventions occurred before suspension of work, both being successful and averting threatened strikes. An intervention in the strike of motormen and conductors on the Albany Southern Railway is particularly notable as having resulted in successful arbitration by the Commissioner of Labor of a disputed question of interpretation of an existing agreement.

The unsolved problems of industrial safety continue to be emphasized by the returns of accidents to workmen. Accidents in the second quarter of the year reported to the Department of Labor numbered 19,567, of which 13,731 were in factories, 208 in mines and quarries, and 5,628 in building and engineering work. This is the largest number of reported accidents for a single quarter on record, exceeding the figures for the second quarter of last year by about 3,000 for factory accidents and 1,000 for building accidents. This increase can be interpreted only as an evidence of more nearly complete reporting, and no inference can be drawn from it as to increase or decrease in actual number of accidents in the State. An important general fact clearly and constantly revealed by the quarterly returns ever since the reporting of accidents in the building industry was begun, in 1910, is the much higher number and proportion of fatal accidents in that industry as compared with manufacturing. Thus, in the second quarter of this year, out of less than one-half as many accidents reported there were seventy fatal cases (as shown by first report) in the building industry, as against only forty in factories.

The law of 1911 requiring physicians to report to the Department of Labor certain classes of industrial diseases took effect on Sept. 1 of that year, and the bulletin summarizes the returns for the first year thereunder, which ended on Aug. 31 of this year. A total of 164 cases were reported, including 127 cases of lead poisoning, 4 of arsenic, 1 of mercury, and 1 of phosphorous poisoning, with 2 cases of anthrax and 29 of caisson disease. By far the most frequently reported disease was lead poisoning.

LEAVING RUTGERS CHURCH.

The Rev. Dr. Foulkes Resigns to Join New Presbyterian Board.

At the close of his sermon yesterday morning the Rev. Dr. William Hiram Foulkes announced his resignation of the pastorate of Rutgers Presbyterian Church, Broadway and Seventy-third Street, to take effect Nov. 15. It was the first announcement to his congregation. He resigns, he says, to accept the secretaryship of a new Presbyterian Board of Sustentation and Relief, formed to raise a fund of $10,000,000 for the relief of ministers who are sick or aged Older societies, one of them having an insurance feature, have been merged. The society has in hand about a third of the sum. In his announcement the Rev. Dr. Foulkes said the fund needed him more than Rutgers Church. He has been at the church only a short time, coming to New York from Oregon.

Other west side churches, all of them large, that are without pastors include St. Paul's and St. Andrew's Methodist and Calvary Baptist.

PICTURES RUBBER ATROCITIES

The Rev. A. B. Simpson Gets Funds for Missionary Work.

The Rev. A. B. Simpson, President of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, preached his annual sermon yesterday morning at the Gospel Temple in Forty-fourth Street, and after a picture of mission work that included all the horrors of the Putamayo rubber district, he read aloud the contributions pledged by his hearers. They amounted to more than $40,000. The first to respond to his appeal for funds was a little gray-haired woman who ran up the aisle and held out her watch and chain. Other gifts ranged from $1 to $2,000.

"The politicians are bestirring themselves," said Dr. Simpson. "They talk of Armageddon and pour out enough money for their campaign to double our forces in the missionary field. We are the ones who stand at Armageddon."

The Rear Admirals' Photograph.

By an oversight in printing the picture of the six visiting Rear Admirals of the fleet in THE TIMES yesterday, credit was not given for the picture to the Aimé Dupont Studio, which had taken and copyrighted it. The picture was unusual in two respects: both because seldom have so many Rear Admirals of the United States Navy been photographed together, and because even more rarely have high naval officers been pictured together in civilian evening clothes.

"A Scuffler is one who struggles to keep that station in life in which God has placed her . . . a scuffler is absolutely feminine."

Edwin Markham, than whom we have no better critic, wrote me of SCUFFLES ($1.00 net): "Sally Nelson Robins has in her the stuff of a story-teller—she can write. SCUFFLES is a story good to read and good to own. Neither Corra Harris nor Inez Gillman would be ashamed to have written some of these flashing pages. Another world-famous writer and critic, George Wharton James, says of this story of a Southern widow left with four small children, whose pride of family and little money make simultaneous the laugh and the lump; "Mrs. Threshley starts a boarding house—you know what that means. The struggles, bravery and cheerfulness, her heroism and tenderness are told with the power of genius touched with love. I predict a greater popularity for SCUFFLES than Mrs. Wiggs."

If you would know something of the Old World mystery and charm that permeates Naples, read CITY OF SWEET-DO-NOTHING ($1.35 net), which has the honor to be the first book dedicated to Cardinal Farley.—Letters of a well-known Southern and Lenox-New York Belle. She prefers not to reveal her name, but the book reveals her girlish, bouyant, art-loving nature. The book hints at a pending international marriage—but * * * The Dial says: "One is moved to envy her ecstatic winter at the Bay of Naples." The Oregonian: "Beautiful atmosphere." Another: "Remarkable knowledge of Italian history, painting, architecture, and sculpture."

Mr. James also likes HIS UNCLE'S WIFE ($1.00 net), by Ruth Neuberger. "Clever in plot," he writes; "Charmingly written, interesting throughout. It is a ticklish situation, but the firm hand of the author handles it satisfactorily."

The renaissance of poetry gives special interest to a second edition of Marion Couthony Smith's THE ROAD OF LIFE ($1.00 net). Miss Smith's poetry is of the highest order. The Century, Scribner's, all the best magazines, accept her work. Individual lovers of poetry and libraries should buy.

WILT THOU SING?
ALICE HARRIMAN

What shall the publisher say of her own book of verse, WILT THOU NOT SING? ($1.00 net.) I wrote the poems because I felt them and I hope you'll buy for the same reason. SONGS O' THE SOUND and SONGS O' THE OLYMPICS are all sold, and I take this opportunity of thanking my friends for their appreciation. At the suggestion of Mr. Edwin Markham, Mr. R. U. Johnson, and Mr. Alexander Harvey of Current Literature, I have combined the majority of the poems in those two books with others in WILT THOU NOT SING? Mr. Harvey, in the introduction, says: "The poetry of Alice Harriman reflects the heart of things in our great West. She writes verses that have all the largeness, the simplicity, the strength of the Nature whose moods she reflects. One must be unjaded and a youth in spirit to appreciate such lines. * * * It is because she has retained the childlikeness of inspiration that Alice Harriman can give us verses like a draught from the cup of Nature she knows so intimately. She brings us the soul of high mountains, wide horizons. * * * One is tempted to compare her with the poets of the Lake School. * * * Some would deem her American note provincial. But it is that with all the sublime provincialism of Homer."

BURTON DANE, by Alfred E. Chirm. The story of an athletic Virginian who won't be downed, a winsome heroine of whom the world needs more, a sturdy, lovable American boy who feels it his duty to lick a little British new-comer, (who can't see it that way,) and a man who "just has to burgle"! Love, friendship, and fighting. Ready Nov. 10th. ($1.35 net.)

LIPTON READY TO CHALLENGE AGAIN

ANXIOUS TO RACE ONCE MORE

Will Build Shamrock IV. If Present Conditions Can Be Made Acceptable.

With ruddy cheeks, clear blue, smiling eyes and a vigorous handshake that betokened the earnest greeting he always gives his many American friends, Sir Thomas J. Lipton, three time challenger for the America's Cup, arrived by the Caronia yesterday from Liverpool to stay awhile and travel in the West he says.

When asked if it was his intention to challenge for the America's Cup during his present visit to the United States, Sir Thomas replied: "I have not come over for that purpose," then laughingly he said, "but you know if some little bird should whisper in my ear that the New York Yacht Club—for whose officers and members I have the highest regard—would favorably consider a challenge under the universal rule, I should be only too glad to issue one, for I know that many yachtsmen and others, who love the sport, would like to hear the report of the starting gun off Sandy Hook next Fall. It would please me very much to see my fighting flag flying from a Shamrock IV. in these waters. I challenged several years ago under the new rule, but it was not accepted. It may, however, have been my fault, because I challenged with a type of boat that was too small. The New York Yacht Club has been kind and generous to me on other occasions, and I should hate to do anything that might cause them any embarrassment."

"Have you done much racing abroad this year?" was asked.

"Yes, indeed," Sir Thomas replied. "I am racing all the time in British and German waters. We have just closed the finest racing season I have ever witnessed. One hundred and twenty-eight first-class yachts took part in the Kiel regatta. His Majesty, the Emperor of Germany, sailed every day on board his schooner, the Meteor. We had a great deal of bad weather, and one day off the Warner Lightship in a fifty-mile race in a gale, the Emperor's Meteor got a hard knockdown. She was on her beam ends for a time, and there was between six and seven feet of water in her cabin, I was told.

"Yachting in Germany is on the increase," continued Sir Thomas. "They have a fine fleet of racing yachts, and the Emperor encourages the sport as a means, I take it, of teaching his people to become familiar with the sea and ships."

"How many races did you win with the present Shamrock?" was asked.

"We raced all around the coast of England, Scotland, and Ireland," he answered, "and out of a total of twenty-nine starts she won twenty-three first prizes. She had a time allowance of 7:10 from the Meteor and Krupp's schooner Germania, but she defeated them easily without the allowance."

"What are the yachting conditions in England?" the Shamrock's owner was asked.

"I am sorry to say they are nothing like as good as they were in former years," he replied. "The first notable decrease in interest in the sport was when motoring came in vogue. Now the regattas are as nothing compared with those of the past."

When asked who would design the two yachts that he intended to build if a challenge was accepted, Sir Thomas said that Fife would design one and the other would probably be from the plans of Nicholson, who has shown with his fifteen-meter boat Istria that he is a clever designer. He referred to the late Capt. Charles Barr as the greatest racing skipper in the world. "Any boat with Barr at the wheel," he said, 'had five minutes time on her opponent."

Asked if he considered that a racing yacht built abroad would really be strained by crossing the Atlantic any more than in a race off Sandy Hook in a blow—an objection that has often been raised—Sir Thomas replied: "Yes, indeed. There is hardly any comparison. Crossing the Atlantic the boat gets a perpetual battering. Why, if my Shamrock II. had had to remain at sea another twelve hours when she was towed over in 1901, I believe she would have foundered. We had to put a lot of new rivets in her here to replace those sheared off."

When asked if this could not be avoided by building a yacht in Canada, he said: "No, I'm sorry to say it could not be done. We must have the best possible construction for a racing boat, and they are not able to do it there. At least, they have not the facilities that our ship yards have."

Col. Duncan Neill, an expert yachtsman, who has raced on all the Shamrocks with Sir Thomas, and who accompanies him on his visit, declares that the revision of the scantling rules is one of the most important changes necessary at the present time. Scantlings, he asserts, are altogether too light for safety. A tax, he thinks, should also be put on sail area instead of on displacement.

In conclusion, Sir Thomas said:

"I have really come over this time to make an extended trip through the West, some parts of which I have never visited. When I was here three years ago my visit was cut short, so that I had not time to travel as much as I wished.

"Your Mayor and the Citizens' Committee," he continued, "were kind enough to send me a wireless message at sea inviting me to attend a dinner at the Hotel Astor to-morrow night to the President and the officers of the warships now in this port. I shall be pleased to accept the invitation, and also one I have received from Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston—whom I know very well—to witness a game of baseball at the Polo Grounds tomorrow."

Clancy Makes Good Time in Run.

James Clancy of the Dominican Lyceum carried off the honors yesterday in the annual cross-country run of four miles, held under the auspices of the Aquinas Lyceum of West Farms. Clancy covered the four miles in the good time of 21:01, after a hard fight in the last half mile with D. Gerrell, Italian-American A. C., who, after following his pace, came in eight seconds behind the winner. The event attracted a good number of hill and dale chasers, with close to thirty-five members of prominent local clubs participating. C. Carlins, a clubmate of the winner, accounted for third place, his time being 21:15.

Close Finish in St. Anselms Run.

Frank Masterson and Frank Joyce of the Mohawk Athletic Club finished first and second, respectively, in the cross-country run of the St. Anselms Lyceum, which was contested over a five-mile course on Saturday. During the running of the last two miles the Mohawk runners ran neck and neck until within a few yards of the finish, when Masterson increased his speed and won by a scant margin. James McNamara and Hugh Chauffat, both of the Dominican Lyceum, ran a dead heat for ninth position after a hard finish.

AUTOS PACE ATHLETES.

Hannes Kolehmainen, the Finnish runner, and his brother Willie were fêted last night by the members of the Bradhurst Field Club at the conclusion of the club road race, which was won by Harry J. Smith, Bronx Church House, the five-mile junior National and senior metropolitan champion, in 19 minutes 58 seconds, bettering the course record of Al. Roth, Mohawk A. C., of 20 minutes 42 seconds.

The course was estimated to have been about four miles and a quarter, but the time of the winner appears to be conclusive evidence that the distance covered was a shade less than four miles, the going being none too good and over rough pavement quite a good bit of the way.

The improvement in the time of several of the other runners in the pack caused surprise until it became known that they had taken a "hitch" on passing automobiles, to which they clung. This trick warranted their being carried along at a pace well inside their usual speed, and for which they will probably suffer when the handicapper gets a glimpse of their time performance.

By the time the score of runners had reached St. Nicholas Avenue they were pretty well strung out, and the further they ran the greater the distance between first and last man became, with the latter a half-mile to the bad at the two-mile mark, midway down the Viaduct. Horton showed the best pace of any of the other runners, all of whom he quickly outran, except Tom Harris, a negro, who eventually finished third, over a quarter of a mile behind the winner. The others straggled home, showing little effects from the outing. The summary:

MINOGUE CAPTURES RUN.

Close Competition in Weekly Games of Ozanam Association.

J. Minogue, with a mark of 150 yards, captured the feature event, the one-mile handicap run of the games of the Ozanam Association, yesterday at De Witt Clinton Park. J. Hannagan with the same mark as the winner finished second and J. Giorgio with a handicap of 100 yards was third. The winner, a distance man, held the lead from the start and in a hard sprint in the last fifty yards with Hannagan breasted the tape first with a margin of but a few feet.

The 300-yard run was productive of a good finish, when Joseph Foley, with a handicap of eight yards, won from P. J. Quinn, who started with an allowance of sixteen yards. The summaries:

50-Yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by H. Ahearn, (9 feet;) P. J. Quinn, (9 feet,) second; J. Foley, (3 feet,) third. Time—0:05 4-5.

NELSON LEADS RUNNERS.

Big Field Competes in Weekly Road Race of Morningside A. C.

Oscar Nelson of the Morningside Athletic Club won the regular weekly invitation cross-country run of the Morningside Athletic Club yesterday, leading his clubmate, J. Manning, home by 125 yards. Thirty-six runners started, and all finished in good condition. At the start Manning took the lead, with Brogan and Crook close behind. They passed the mile mark in these positions, with the big pack well up. At the second mile Nelson let out a sprint and took the lead, opening up a gap of about ten yards. Once in front, he was never headed. Manning and Brogan had a hard fight for second place, the Morningside boy shaking off his rival in the last quarter mile.

Near the two-mile mark Norman of the Morningsides fell and hurt his ankle. M. Garren of the Mott Havens stopped and helped Norman to his feet, and after walking for half a block, they both started running. Garren stuck with Norman till the finish. The order of finish:

O. Nelson, Morningside A. C., 19:38; J. Manning, Morningside A. C., 19:56; A. Brogan, Mercury A. C., 20:06; W. Croop, Knights of St. Anthony, 20:18; W. Burke, Union Settlement A. C., 20:05; R. WINGED FOOT ATHLETES OUT.

Five of Wefer's Proteges Show Form at Van Cortlandt Park.

Members of the cross-country team of the New York Athletic Club as their first preliminary to the preparation for the championships at Van Cortlandt Park had a spin over the newly authorized course in that territory and pronounced the route over which the junior and senior National titles will be decided to be perfect.

The squad consisted of Fred Bellars, George Critchley, Maurice Hughes, Vic Casey, and Harold Gibbons, and while there was no attempt made at racing, the run proved to be very satisfactory. Bernie Wefers, the club coach, announced himself as satisfied with the manner in which his protege performed. Nightly runs will be held from the Central Park South clubhouse with the course around the park as the route to be covered.

Easy Victory for Kramer.

William J. Kramer easily captured the four-mile road race of the Long Island Athletic Club yesterday, when he carried the Long Island Club colors to the front over a big field of long-distance runners. Kramer won the race by a margin of 20 seconds, and was not exerted. The summary:

COLLEGE SWIMMERS MAKE OWN RULES

In Annual Meeting Decide That A. A. U. Method of Judging Is Too Intricate.

In a three-hour session at Columbia University yesterday afternoon the representatives to the first annual meeting of the Intercollegiate Swimming Association went over many matters of importance to the college swimming world, taking up applications for admission to the league, the framing of new rules, and the arrangement of the season's schedule. No new colleges will be represented this year, but it is expected that both Amherst and Harvard will enter the league next year.

These two colleges had representatives at yesterday's meeting, and they stated that while it was their desire to enter the league this year, the managements felt that their teams were not yet up to the mark with those already in, and that another year would be needed to place the sport on the proper basis for such a step. Williams and Brown are in very nearly the same position, and it is very probable that within two years these two will also apply for admission. R. C. Patterson, a former Columbia Captain, speaking for the league, said that there was no doubt but that applications from any or all of these four colleges would be passed upon favorably by the association.

Cornell, as formerly announced, has dropped out of the league, the formal resignation taking place yesterday and being accepted. The reason for this move on the part of the Ithacans is that they have no pool in which they can hold any meets, and this requires that they go out of town for all their contests, which makes their expense bill more than the authorities at Cornell will permit. The Cornell swimming team will hold several dual meets, but will not appear on the intercollegiate schedule.

The most important change in the rules that will govern the intercollegiate meets was in those having to do with judging the fancy diving contests. The intricacies of the A. A. U. rules on this subject have occasioned so much confusion among the collegians that it was thought better yesterday to go back to the old but simple system of preparing a list of all dives and making them worth a certain credit. The judges will then watch the dive, and in a glance see in what form it is executed, then giving whatever percentage is deserved on a basis of the maximum mark allowed. This does away with marks for the approach, the form, the difficulty, and the kind of dive, as considered in separate units under the A. A. U. method.

To avoid confusion it was urged at yesterday's meeting that the goal judge in the water polo game have the power of calling a foul as well as the referee. In a game last season at Columbia the goal judge saw a foul, but before he could call the attention of the referee to it a goal was scored, and the referee allowed it, giving rise to a bitter dispute.

That the meetings of the representatives of the league may have the advantage of graduate advice, it is proposed that an Executive Committee composed of one graduate from each college be appointed, these men to serve for five years or even longer. In this way men who have been in close touch with the swimming situation may continue to do so after graduation and when their help is often needed.

The date for the intercollegiate races has been set for March 8 at Princeton. The schedule is as follows:

CUBS WIN SECOND GAME.

Record Crowd Sees Inter-League Contest at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—The Chicago National League Club defeated the local club of the American League, 4 to 2, in to-day's game of the series which is to decide the city championship. This is the second victory for the Nationals. Two games resulted in a tie.

The game to-day was a pitchers' battle between Walsh and Reulbach. Walsh allowed seven hits, two of which were doubles and one a home run, while Reulbach was touched for eight, four of which were doubles.

Never before has so large a crowd passed through the turnstiles of the National League Park here. The official attendance as announced by the National Commission was 30,393, the total receipts $21,197. Of this amount the National Commission will receive $2,119.70; each club gets $3,815.46, and $11,446.38 goes to the players' pool.

The crowd became so unmanageable in the early part of the game that it was impossible for a large detail of police to keep them from crowding on to the infield. A dozen or more park attaches and ushers went to the assistance of the police, and when this failed to put the crowd back the National League players, each armed with a bat, went to the rescue. After some time the crowd was quieted and the game resumed. The score:

Upholds Pittsburgh's Protest.

Pittsburgh's protest against Chicago's victory in the game of Oct. 2 was upheld by President Lynch of the National League, in a decision made public last night, and the game was thrown out of the record, thus changing slightly the league's standing. The protest was based on the fact that Catcher Cotter of Chicago was batting out of his turn when he hit a single which won the game in the tenth inning. President Lynch gave out to-night the official standing of the league as follows:

	W.	L.	P.C.		W.	L.	P.C.

Three U. S. Navy Championships to be Decided at the Garden.

Two important events are on the calendar of boxing clubs this week. The first is scheduled for to-night, when sailors from the United States fleet now anchored in the Hudson River will decide the heavyweight, welterweight, and lightweight championships of the navy at Madison Square Garden. The second event is the opening of the Forty-fourth Street Sporting Club, which has leased the old quarters of the National Sporting Club, which lost its license.

Manager Gibson has offered three championship belts instead of money for the sailors, as a rule of the navy prohibits Uncle Sam's tars from competing in boxing matches for any money consideration. From the time when he won as an amateur in 1907, Phil Schlossberg's ring affairs have been one series of triumphs, and some of the professionals who have fallen before his skill and strength are fighters who gained notoriety outside of the navy. Almost equally as prominent as Schlossberg is Tim Logan, the heavy hitter from the Connecticut, who a couple of months ago boxed Luther McCarty to a six-round draw. The complete naval part of the programme follows: Phil Schlossberg vs. Tim Logan, heavyweights, ten rounds; Tommy Teague vs. Jimmy Glavin, middleweights, ten rounds; Andy King vs. Billy Shevlin, lightweights, ten rounds; Jackie Kane vs. Joe Kucera, featherweights, six rounds; Jackie Albright vs. Bobby Hubon, featherweights, six rounds.

Those who saw Young Shugrue and Jimmy Coffey go through ten whirlwind rounds at the Garden several weeks ago will go prepared to witness another fast set-to. They will go on for ten rounds to-night.

The Forty-fourth Street National Club has arranged an excellent card for the opening show Thursday. Leo Houck, who defeated Eddie McGoorty last week in Philadelphia, is booked to face Freddie Hicks for ten rounds, while Young Brown, whose last contest was a victory over Tommy Murphy, will tackle a hard proposition in Joe Thomas. The contest will be ten rounds, and Knockout Brown has agreed to box the winner. The third bout will probably bring together Young Sammy Smith and Tommy Maloney.

Among the other bills announced are Young Hickey and Freddie Kelly at the New Star A. C. to-morrow night, and Patsey Callahan will be matched against a good lightweight at the National A. C. of Brooklyn Saturday night.

FOGLER VELODROME STAR.

Joe Fogler of Brooklyn, a six-day bicycle racer, proved his prowess in the long distances yesterday afternoon by winning the twenty-five-mile race at the Newark Velodrome. With a field of the world's best riders pitted against him, the little Brooklyn rider took the pace of the fastest, and, after wearing down Frank L. Kramer of East Orange, Alfred Grenda and Jackie Clarke of Australia, and the others, set the pace in the final miles and finished with a strong sprint just half a wheel length ahead of John Bedell of Lynbrook, L. I.

This event was the feature of a long programme of exciting amateur and professional races, and closed one of the most successful seasons that the Newark Velodrome Cycle Racing Association has enjoyed for several years.

In a match contest between Fogler and André Perchicot, the champion of France, the Frenchman proved the better at the short distance of two-thirds of a mile. Perchicot won in two straight heats by snapping up the critical position just before opening up with his final sprint and tearing loose from Fogler, who, however, fought him to close finishes, where there was but a foot to spare. Fogler had his revenue later by wearing the Frenchman out in the seventeenth mile of the Marathon event.

Donald McDougall, the one-mile world's amateur champion, who for the last part of the present season has been riding under the colors of the New York Athletic Club, fully lived up to his former standards by cleaning up in both the one-mile amateur handicap event and in the three-mile amateur race, open. Summary:

One-Mile Handicap, Amateur.—Won by Donald McDougall, New York A. C.; Gus Wohlrab, Jersey City, second; Alvin Loftus, New York A. C., third. Time—2:02 2-5.

Two-Mile Invitation, Professional.—Won by August Miller, New York; Eddie Root, Boston, second; Peter Drobach, Boston, third. Time—4:43 4-5.

Twenty-five-Mile Open Professional.—Won by Joe Fogler, Brooklyn; John Bedell, Lynbrook, L. I., second; Menus Bedell, Lynbrook, L. I., third. Time—55:41.

ITHACANS ARE HOPEFUL.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 13.—For the first time in several weeks the Cornell football team came through a game yesterday without serious injury, and the coaches are rather hopeful that the period of misfortune is over. Hard work for the Penn State game, one of the hardest on the schedule, if last year's contest is any criterion, will begin to-morrow, and particular attention will be devoted to remedying the defects shown yesterday, which include failure of the line to charge low, mediocre work on the part of Munns and Larrowe, not very good tackling by the ends, and a few other fundamental weaknesses. The spirit shown by the team, however, and their power to actually score by rushing has gone a long way toward encouraging the big undergraduate body, which felt pretty gloomy after successive defeats by Colgate and Oberlin.

The coaches were unable to say whether Capt. Butler, who has been limping around with a cane for several weeks, will get into the line-up again this week or not. The outlook is not considered very bright. Butler's punting and drop kicking are sorely missed, though Taber's running of the team and his individual work make him a very satisfactory quarterback. It is expected that the squad will be strengthened by the return of Whyte, last year's centre, and R. B. Whyte, one of the half backs, who have been laid up for two weeks, while Underhill will probably start in playing with the scrub in this week's scrimmages.

College Point Runners Out.

The Y. M. C. L. of College Point held its first cross-country run yesterday over a three-and-a-half-mile course. Parkinson and Wonfor made the pace for the first half mile. From that point Parkinson and Douis had a duel for the leadership until the last mile, when the Ozanam man lengthened his stride and shook Parkinson off, winning by thirty yards. Joe Losgar of the Y. M. C. L. and Skellett of the Pennants had a hot battle for third place, the Y. M. C. L. man being the stronger in the last half mile. Thirty men faced the starter, and all but two finished.

De Palma Does Not Blame Bragg.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 13.—Ralph De Palma, able to be seen for the first time since his accident in the Grand Prize automobile race a week ago, declared to-day that he laid no blame on Caleb Bragg, winner of the race, but added that according to the rules of the race, Bragg's mechanician should have been looking back and should have notified Bragg that De Palma wished to pass him.

MATINEE FAVORITES GO DOWN TO DEFEAT

Reversal of form in two instances yesterday in the competition of the fifth Fall matinee on the Harlem Speedway would indicate that the struggle for supremacy in both the pacing and trotting divisions promises to be exceptionally keen before the season is ended. The two leading horses in their respective divisions, E. Shoemaker's bay gelding Startle in the trotting class and I. V. Hunt's Clover Patch in the pacing event, were defeated by coming contenders and, with the season only just past the half-way mark, the final outcome is in doubt.

Up to last Sunday Clover Patch was regarded as peerless in the pacing ranks, but at that time was forced to taste defeat when H. B. Clark's black gelding Dick Mason scored a victory over her and repeated the performance yesterday in the free-for-all-pace with straight heats.

Startle was considered invincible in the trotting class, but by not being up to form De Witt, a bay gelding owned by E. Bass, won yesterday in the fast trot after a split heat contest. These two events aside from an impromptu meeting of James Murphy's pacing mare Coast Marie and Nathan Straus's trotter Denver were the features of an eleven-event programme.

Fast time was recorded in a number of the heats, the best being clocked in the fast pace. In the opening heat the winner crossed the line in 1:02 and in the following one equaled the mark for the Speedway when it came down in 1:01¾, a rather good showing. The summaries:

PIPING ROCK ENTRIES.

More Than Sixty Horses Named for Five Events Wednesday.

Five events are scheduled for the second day's meet of the Piping Rock Racing Association at Locust Valley, L. I., on Wednesday. More than sixty owners have accepted the handicap weights, and good fields are assured. With twenty-two entries, the Matinecock Plate is the feature event, and a number of fast distance horses have been named. It is a selling handicap of about two miles over the steeplechase course. The Tryon Hall Army Steeplechase has attracted ten good horses, which will be required to travel a route of two and one-half miles.

Polo Games at Wheatley Hills.

Special to The New York Times.

WHEATLEY HILLS, L. I., Oct. 13.—There were two good games of polo this afternoon on the old and new fields of the Phipps estate. Both commenced at 3:15, and there were many to appreciate and applaud first-class polo as played by the international stars on the old field. The game on the new field lined up as follows. Reds—L. Stoddard, R. Bacon, Jr., and J. C. Race. Whites—A. S. Burden, Mrs. E. Randolph, and T. Le Boutillier. The score was 8 to 7, in favor of the Whites. There were two falls on account of Mr. Stoddard's pony slipping and Mr. Bacon's mount stepping on a ball and carrying the rider down.

On the old field the game was fought spiritedly and ended in a score of 18 to 14, in favor of the Whites. Line-up:

WHITES.	REDS.
1—K. Milburn.	1—H. P. Whitney.
2—C. C. Rumsey.	2—L. Waterbury.
3—G. Milburn.	3—R. Bacon, Sr.

YALE FEARS WEST POINT.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 13.—Easily the largest coaches' council at Yale since the season opened was held at the Hotel Taft to-night. Yale is determined not to lose to West Point next Saturday, as the Army mule has kicked the Yale bulldog out of its path in the last two annual games, and no American college has beaten Yale three years in succession on the gridiron. Yale's poor defense, particularly the rush line, against Lafayette yesterday, nettled the coaches. In conference to-day were Jack Field, head coach last year; "Pa" Corbin, Captain in '89; Walter Camp, Yale's veteran adviser; Jack Owsley, head coach in 1906, and the resident squad, Howe, Scully, McDevitt, and Vaughan. It was announced that the recent telegram of Head Coach Howe to former Capt. Tom Shevlin had brought a response that he will come east from Minneapolis and remain several days with the team. It has been decided to invite Foster Sanford, the perennial creator of Yale defense, to tackle the shortcomings of the present Yale line. Sanford is just departing for Europe, but he will be urged to give the team several days. Jim Scully, who saw West Point play yesterday, reported that the Army has a well-drilled attack and takes advantage of opponents' mishaps. It has been decided not to depend on Bomeisler, but to try him in the Harvard and Princeton games. Avery and Gallauer will be started against West Point.

The injury of Randall, guard, who was hurt last week, has developed a serious knee wrench, and he will not be in condition for three weeks. His absence leaves a shortage of guards, and the coaches will now send Harbison to guard when he recovers from his light bruise. He formerly played left tackle. He has been benched several days. Cornish has practically recovered from his recent muscle bruise, and will return to practice by Wednesday. None of the first string players will be used to-morrow.

It is now almost certain that the backs sent against West Point Saturday will be Philbin, Spalding, and Flynn. Avery, Castles, and Camp will probably be the reserve trio.

Lafayette's plucky game was much admired by the Yale coaches, and that team will be urged to accept a place on the Yale schedule next Fall. Till yesterday Yale had never met the team.

HARD GAMES FOR TIGERS.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 13.—Princeton's early season schedule is over, and the Tigers are facing a stiff trio in Syracuse, Dartmouth, and Harvard during the next three weeks. There is a widespread feeling among Princetonians that for the past three years the opening games have not been a thorough test for the teams, and this season's results would bear out the opinion. As yet the Tigers have had no decisive work in the games, and there is still much to be learned about their power in this respect.

All the Tigers are in fit shape to-night and ready for the stiffest kind of work. Pendleton's finger is still in a splint, but he should be at his true form by Saturday. The widely different tactics of the coaches against Lehigh and Virginia have left much conjecture among the following here as to what kind of an attack the Tigers really intend to use this year. The most radical kind of work with the forward pass last Saturday led critics to suppose that this was to be the foundation of the offense, but yesterday this style of play was avoided as though worthless.

The experiments with Stewart Baker at quarter back, and Fred Trenkman at end did not meet with success, and it will not be surprising if Pendleton resumes his place as field general before this week's practice progresses far. Several of Baker's passes to the backs were poor, though he ran the team with all the snap that Emmons had shown. Trenkman seemed out of his element at end, due largely to his inexperience at this post. The drills this week will probably be secret.

Soccer Player Breaks Leg.

The first accident of the soccer season occurred yesterday, at Macombs Dam Park, when Harry Pessire, 21 years old, a member of the St. George United, had his right leg broken, when he came in contact with a Albion half back. He was removed to the Fordham Hospital. The Albions won the game three goals to nothing. It was suggested that the New York Protective Association should now be launched, so that when a player is disabled he will be properly taken care of. The movement started a few months ago, and it is believed that this accident will break the spell of laxity that now surrounds this association.

Critchleys Defeat Hollywood.

An unexpected result occurred in the association football game, between the Critchleys and Hollywood Inn elevens at Yonkers, yesterday, when the former team walked off the field victors, by the close score of two goals to one. It was generally expected that the Hollywoods would capture the game, as they had defeated the league's champion, Newark, last week. The Critchleys also won their contest last Sunday, and a good sized crowd was out yesterday to witness the battle.

Brooklyn socker team traveled to Jersey again yesterday, and as on the two previous visits they met defeat. This time the victorious eleven was the Scottish American F. C., and they captured the contest by the close margin of four goals to three.

At Van Cortlandt Park, the Over Seas and Anglo-Saxons elevens played a no-scoring game in a second divsion New York State League contest.

The scheduled contest between the Newark Football Club, champions of the first division last year, and the New York Celtics, champions of the second division, came to an end abruptly ten minutes before time yesterday, when the crowd surged upon the field, and forced the referee to call the game. The Celtics were leading two goals to one, but whether they will be credited with a victory or not will have to be decided by the Executive Board of the league. It as alleged that in a controversy on the side lines between a spectator and a Newark player the former struck the soccerite. At once a big crowd assembled on the gridiron, and the game was stopped. The contest took place at Jasper Oval.

The St. George Football Club met and defeated the Camerons in a New York State League contest at Macomb's Dam Park by 2 goals to 0.

At Van Cortlandt Park the German Football Club easily defeated the Spanish Americans by the one-sided score of 8 goals to 0. Four goals were scored in each period.

At Jersey City the Clan McDuffs triumphed over the Washington Football Club by the close score of 1 goal to 0. This was a second division championship game of the New York State League.

The Wanderers of Brooklyn showed marked improvement over their game last week, but the old star combination work of the True Blues proved too much for them, and they were defeated at Williard Park, Paterson, by 3 goals to 0.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 13.—Swarthmore defeated the Pennsylvania team here yesterday through her superior strength in the line. This was feared, for the Swarthmore line averaged 128 pounds and was composed of veterans. As far as known the Swarthmore line is as good as any in the country. They showed this by easily defeating Lafayette 22 to 0, a team that Yale had difficulty in beating a week ago by 16 to 0. It was their superiority in line play that caused Penn's defeat, and the Red and Blue forwards must do better Saturday against Brown if they desire to score consistently on the Providence eleven. The game yesterday was the first real test of the line, and Coach Smith will spend this week in an endeavor to strengthen this department of the team, as it may prove just as fatal against Brown.

Judging by the work of the two teams to date, the coming contest should be very close. On form to date, Brown seems to have the best of Penn in the line, but the back field play of Mercer, Minds, and Marshall should more than neutralize this. The result of Saturday's games makes the coming contest very uncertain. Playing on their own grounds, Brown will undoubtedly be very hard to beat, but the Philadelphians recognize this, and they will go to Providence determined to bring back a victory. The play should be an improvement, for, though defeated yesterday by Swarthmore, the experience of the men in that game will be of great value.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Oct. 13.—Except for minor bruises all of Lehigh's victorious eleven came out of the struggle with the Navy yesterday in good condition. The coaches are not fully decided as to whether or not they will give the men a rest to-morrow, which would call for the first practice on Tuesday, but began to plan at once for the contest with Haverford Saturday. This is the main liner's biggest game. Lehigh to-day was still jubilant over the great come-back of the eleven, and the feeling of depression that was evident last week has given way to one of confidence.

Kilbane to Box Albanese.

THE EUROPEAN PERIL.

The five European Powers, having failed in their tardy effort to prevent war in the Balkans, are now facing a task of even greater magnitude and portent—that of "localizing" the struggle. In effect, this means keeping the peace with each other, refraining from taking any advantage of the troubles of Turkey or of those which are sure to come on the four relatively little nations which are attacking Turkey. How very hard this task may be is shown by two facts. One is that Italy, one of the most important parties to the Triple Alliance, is actually waging war on Turkey, and is seeking to impose hard terms of peace by a threat to land a heavy force from the Aegean on the left flank of the Turkish armies moving to resist the armies of the Balkan States. The second is that Austria-Hungary is taking steps to occupy Novi Bazar, the little enclave that lies between her own boundaries and those of Servia and Bulgaria. To some degree these two movements, should they be carried out, would, so far as the immediate struggle is concerned, offset each other, but as signs of the peril of dissensions among the Powers they are equally disquieting.

The hope of the maintenance of peace in Europe since the troublesome events in the Near East has avowedly rested on the apparent readiness of the Powers of the Triple Alliance and those of the Triple Entente to work together, each group recognizing that the existence of the other made for the preservation of an effective balance. It was in this spirit that Russia, on the one hand, and Austria-Hungary, on the other, were intrusted with the immediate charge of carrying out the terms of the note presented to Turkey and to the assailants of Turkey. Much importance was attached to this fact in the discussion of the action of the five Powers and its probable effect. But now that we have Italy threatening increased aggression on Turkey, and Austria-Hungary moving her troops near to the border of Servia, the situation is distinctly more threatening. may be, indeed, that the menace by Italy will effect its purpose and that Turkey will make peace promptly. And it may be, if this be done, that a part of the peace agreement may be an understanding with Italy that will aid Turkey in the long run.

That, however, will not necessarily clear the situation as between the European Powers, or tend to maintain peace among them. It may, indeed, have the opposite effect. It is not to be denied that there are very serious differences of interest and aim between Italy and Austria-Hungary. The latter has long been working for the ultimate possession of a foothold and a port on the Mediterranean. To Italy it has now become a matter of essential importance that there shall be only friendly Powers on the Mediterranean. She has planted herself on the north coast of Africa at very great cost of money and no small loss of life. To carry out the work thus undertaken she must have free passage from the peninsula across the Mediterranean. At present the only two great Powers with possessions on that sea are France and England, and they, though members of the rival group, are friendly and quite ready to become more so. What would happen if next year, when the Triple Alliance must be renewed, Italy should remain outside it, or come to an understanding with the members of the Entente? We may be sure that that is a contingency which engages the anxious attention of Austria-Hungary and of Germany, and is regarded with quite other feelings by Russia, Great Britain, and France.

There is thus a very complex and difficult situation with reference to the maintenance of the peace of Europe. The only really encouraging feature in it is the immense need that all the Powers have for peace. They are armed to the teeth, and their armor is a dreadful burden. It is nothing to the crushing weight that actual war would impose even on the victors. It seems incredible in view of the fact that the resources of statesmanship should not be equal to the task of preventing that catastrophe.

REGISTRATION PSYCHOLOGY.

Is too much politics the explanation of the deficiency of registered voters in comparison with other years? Registration is the price of a vote, and a man does not go shopping unless he has the price. If a man is resolved to shop his first act is to put himself in position to buy, but if he is not sure what he wants to buy or whether he wants to buy, then the possession of the price is not a matter of concern. It is lamentable to believe that there is such indifference to social justice as is implied in the neglect to register and qualify to vote for it. It is simply shocking to think that so many seem not to have made up their minds between protection and free trade. If these are incredible propositions the alternative would seem to be that the people have made up their minds that the difference between a Republican and a Democratic tariff is nothing that they need bother themselves about, and that social justice is not going to fail of realization whoever is elected.

Whatever the explanation may be, it is sure that the climax of the campaign is fast approaching, and that there is need of a hurry call to those who may feel indifferent and confused now, but who will regret it if later on they are not provided with the price of a vote, that is to say, with a place on the register. Next Friday and Saturday are the last two days and the only remaining opportunities. Voters can take until Nov. 5 to make up their minds about how they want to vote, but they must register this week if at all, and if they do not register it makes very little difference whether or not they make up their minds.

A MISTAKEN FRENCH CRITIC.

When the Paris Journal accuses the United States of provoking the rebellion in Nicaragua for purposes of its own it overstates the case. The United States has helped to suppress this particular rebellion, which was simply an armed uprising against the interests of the Nicaraguan people, and the Journal cannot understand what United States troops are doing there. It 's hard to understand. A great many patriotic Americans are puzzled. But we were compelled to protect the property and lives of American and other foreign residents, and to do that we had to land marines, and the marines were compelled to fight. It is an unpleasant situation, but our Government has no designs on Nicaragua or any other Central American State. Our forces will retire when peace is fully restored. If, when such troubles occur in these small States, protection should be withheld from the United States, some European Power might land forces to protect property and restore order. We cannot permit that, we will not permit it.

But there are, unfortunately, American citizens who frequently have designs on Central American States. They want valuable concessions, which they cannot get by fair means. So they adopt foul means, helping renegades and political exiles from those countries to organize rebellions. If the Government at Washington would take measures, severely, to check the evil doings of such people, there would be fewer rebellions, or none, our relations with the little countries south of us would be more agreeable, our foreign critics would be silenced, and bewildered Americans would have less to wonder at.

MEXICAN INSURGENTS.

The report that Gen. Felix Diaz has joined the insurgents in Mexico is, indeed, disconcerting to the Madero Government. He is a more formidable personage than Bernardo Reyes was, before his downfall, for Reyes had no following and Felix Diaz is popular. He has been Chief of Police in the Federal District, Governor of Oaxaca, and a formidable figure in the Mexican Congress. He has been spoken of frequently as a fit man to administer the Government in a firm but discreet way. He has not, hitherto, allied himself with any of the revolutionary factions, and while, obviously, not in sympathy with the half measures of the Government, has been regarded as a safe man. The report of his disaffection lacks verification. Of Aguilar, whom he is expected to join, little is known in this country. The latest report from Morelos and the remote parts of the State of Mexico is that the insurgents are losing courage.

A formidable recruit to the anti-Madero movement, however, is Vicente Segura, who has made a fortune as a matador, and has now allied himself with the waning cause of Orozco, in the north of Mexico. Segura, it is said, has sold property for $250,000 gold, and has lately been in Texas buying arms and ammunition which he proposes to smuggle across the border. If he is really in Texas he should be hunted down and arrested. The bullfighter type is enormously popular with the common kind of Mexicans, and a matador in the field would surely have a large following. Segura has always been a lawless fellow, but strong and courageous, with the swagger of his kind. On the whole, the news from Mexico is not encouraging.

MATHEWSON AND BEDIENT.

Mr. "Christy" Mathewson has cause to reflect, with Shakespeare's Ulysses, that "the present eye praises the present object." He pitched well in Saturday's game, but the bats of the Bostons were quick enough to hit him. His average in the league games this season was good, if not equal to his best. It was better than that of his young adversary on Saturday, who played only two games less than Mathewson in the season. But it is given to no human being to be always triumphant. That third inning in Boston was no Waterloo; all defeats are not Waterloos. Mathewson has not been captured or conquered. It is admitted by all the experts, and there are more experts in baseball in this country than in any other profession, trade, or science, that Mathewson picked up bravely; not a Boston player reached first base thereafter. Bedient deserves praise. Who can say that he will ever hold such a record, through a term of years, as the heroic "Matty"?

Yet all the talk Saturday evening, when the subject was baseball, (and that was the absorbing subject even among the crowds attracted to Riverside Park by the illumination of the ships,) was of the eclipse of "Matty" and the triumph of Bedient. Hugh Bedient is the baseball hero of the hour. Let him enjoy his glory while it lasts. He doubtless will deserve all the praise he receives, and no other man, in these times and this country, receives so large a portion of praise as he who pitches the ball most cunningly. As for Mr. Mathewson, we are not yet ready to talk of his "passing." If he has been fourth in the Giants' list of pitchers this year he may well be first again if he does not willfully "entomb "himself alive and case his reputation "in his tent." Such, we are sure, would be the opinion of Ulysses. No "has been" could play ball as Mathewson played the game Saturday, undaunted by the two hits of Hooper and Yerkes. But if he never reaches his best average again, the baseball world will have reason to honor him as long as baseball lasts. For his own part, he is modest and admits that he is growing old. But he is not going to retire, you may be sure of that.

BAKERVILLE'S ANNIVERSARY.

A printed circular of a commendably ancient pattern announces the celebration to be held in Bakerville, Conn., Wednesday of this week, and urges whoever receives the circular not to miss the celebration. Wagons, not motor cars, will meet trains at Torrington and New Hartford, but it will be necessary for all who require conveyance and meals to notify the Rev. F. M. Hallock, the pastor of the Bakerville Methodist Episcopal Church. There is no suggestion of twentieth century rush and unrest in these announcements. Bakerville will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of its Methodist Episcopal Church with an avoidance of all up-to-date effects. The Methodism of Bakerville in 1912 is precisely the same as the Methodism of the village in which the Rev. Dr. J. M. Buckley preached some of his earliest sermons in 1862, when he was not only the first resident pastor but Principal of Academy Hall, next door to the church.

Dr. Buckley will preach the semi-centennial sermon Wednesday, and in the evening will deliver a reminiscent lecture. The world outside of Bakerville is interested in many things, but in the Connecticut village interest centres in the Methodist jubilee. It is the celebration of the growth and permanence of a great and wholesome force, which has upheld millions in affliction and placed within their reach the "means of grace." And among the Methodists of this hour none, even of the Bishops, has a larger influence than Dr. Buckley. In the United States, North and South, there are 5,000,000 Methodist Episcopalians who will take satisfaction in Bakerville's quiet and confident celebration of its Methodism amid the turmoil and unrest, the clashing of political factions, the heated arguments of the scientists, the pursuit of new and strange ideals in the outer world.

THE SHIPS AND THE CROWDS.

Every time there is an assembling of ships of war in the North River it is reported that the crowds along the Riverside Drive are the largest ever seen there. It is quite likely, too, that the reports are always accurate. The population of New York increases rapidly, though the facilities of getting around town quickly have not been proportionately increased. It is by an unhappy chance that both upper Broadway and West Seventy-second Street are now torn up, so that the going and coming of the crowds on foot, in omnibuses, taxicabs, and carriages of all descriptions are badly blocked. It seemed yesterday that so many human beings were never seen in any one part of the city. It is a matter of fact that so many never visited the warships in one day, but never before were there nearly so many warships to visit.

The weather served. Though the sky was somewhat overcast, there was little wind, and the water was not rough. So many ships and people cannot simultaneously crowd river and shore without some disasters. The two deaths from drowning reported, however, were not due to overcrowding, while the wrecking of a launch in collision, though it spoiled a day's pleasure for the occupants, had no fatal result.

CHANGES IN LONDON.

Buckingham Palace is ugly, indeed, but there is a sort of grandeur in its ugliness, it is unique among the world's palaces, and a great many Londoners, as well as a host of frequent visitors to London, will be apprehensive about the effect of the new façade, even though it was designed by Sir Aston Webb. The modernization of London, so far as it has gone, is not oversatisfying. Buckingham Palace was doing very well as it was. Why should the New York spirit of change and destruction be permitted to conquer the City of the Georges and Victoria? The vista of Waterloo Place and Regent Street, looking northward, is not lovely, but who that has seen it on a misty morning, when the sun was just trying to shine, would have it changed?

Next the innovators will be attacking Trafalgar Square, trying to put a new front on the National Gallery, and to play architectural tricks with St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. With all their experiments they can never make of London a Rome or a Paris, and if they could, they would not make it more habitable. It has been the most comfortable town to dwell in, in spite of the Autumn fogs and the occasional wet Summers, and the true-born Londoners ought to form a society to protect its familiar vistas from destruction, to question severely all plans to change historic monuments and to lay out new avenues. London was finished years ago.

"DRUNKEN" OYSTERS.

"Drinks," so called by the oystermen because the white and bloated bivalves are artificially fattened in the running fresh water of estuaries, have properly come under the scrutiny of the Health Department. Too many of the oysters that are "drunk" are intoxicated in the sense of that word which means poisoned. There is not a river flowing through a populous district that is not poisoned with sewage.

Health Commissioner Lederle has announced that dealers selling oysters fattened in fresh water must show conclusively that the freshened beds are not contaminated, if they are to retain their permits. The public is warned that the gray and relatively smaller oysters that are tonged in salt water are the only bivalves above suspicion. The gray ones may be eaten raw without danger of starting an epidemic.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Cowless Milk Is Now the Promise.

It is a little ominous, perhaps, that of the eminent British scientists who examined the synthetic milk which certain chemists, of course German, have produced, only Sir William Crookes's name is mentioned in the London dispatch on this highly interesting subject, and as to what he thought about this latest of laboratory achievements we learn only that he pronounced it palatable.

Sir William is an eminent scientist, beyond question, and we are not aware of any sound reason for suspecting his competency to give to the question whether something tastes well or not an answer as valuable as that of anybody else. He is, however, a scientist who is also a mystic, with a large capacity for seeing and believing things invisible or incredible to most of his colleagues, and at his age the gustatory nerves are apt to have lost something of their original responsiveness to stimulation.

For these, among other reasons, it would probably be unsafe to assume, because of the statements in this dispatch, that the day of comparative independence of the amiable but unsatisfactory cow has brightly dawned. That may be true, for next to nothing is impossible for German chemists, and there is no necessary falsity in the announcement of their new success in substituting art for nature, but we must have more facts and from other sources before letting hope turn into the more upholding emotion of confident expectancy. For the present, it is good enough to say that if true this news is good.

We are, of course, all too deeply indebted to the cow to deny her the reward—which probably no beast alive would value less—of respect and gratitude, but a better source of better milk is easily imaginable. The cow as a milk producer for human consumption has, besides unquestionable merits, many and grave faults, among them the transmission of her own diseases to her patrons and an obstinate refusal to standardize her product. Not only is the milk of cows belonging to different breeds unlike in constituents, but the closely related cows are also diverse, lacteally, and even the same cow at various seasons uses various formulae in compounding her extract of hay.

These idiosyncrasies are always annoying, and they are often dangerous, and of their consequences the laboratory milk will or may be free. The statement, however, that it is "of purely vegetable origin" hath a quackish and disquieting sound. Most poisons, and the worst of them, are "of purely vegetable origin."

Heroes if Not Sons of Heroes.

There are in the modern Greek, as represented by the majority of our alien residents so designated, few outward indications of descent from ancestors of whom we think as having all been heroes, philosophers, and artists of unsurpassable genius. As they go about their affairs, mostly petty, they look and act an origin as little as—well, as little as do we whose fathers their fathers, with more accuracy than kindness, called "barbarians." Now and then one of them so conducts himself as to make easily understandable why for not a few of their Continental neighbors the word "Greek" has come to mean a sly and tricky fellow, trustworthy only when carefully watched and not too trustworthy even then.

Of villains, however, their number seems to include no more than the fraction to be found in other races, and very probably the tradition which imputes to them a special shiftiness is in essence only a disguised tribute to the superiority of their intelligence to that of their near neighbors. Certainly most of our Hellenes are sober and industrious, and their appearance in our courts, police and other, are infrequent. And just now this element of our population is giving a convincing exhibition of patriotism, a virtue which, though it has come to be regarded by many as a bit old-fashioned, is still not without its charm.

They are remembering, not how hard it was to make a living in Greece, and that they came away from it for that reason, but that they are its sons and in some way bound to return in its hour of need. So, with apparent unanimity and with obvious enthusiasm they are offering their lives and their money to the land that they love, even though it didn't feed them as well as this one does, and they are going back to it in great companies at a time when there is every reason to expect that arrival will be followed by all the hardships incidental to a war sure to be particularly savage.

Possibly they hate Turkey as much as they love Greece. Even that, however, would be, if not patriotism, a by-product of it, and there is enough of the primitive in all of us to make the feeling comprehensible, even though we feel obliged, for the sake of our nominal—very nominal—ideals to view all hatred with disfavor.

Whether these Greeks really are the descendants of the historic Greeks, or of the autochthones whom those historic Greeks ruled and exploited, is a debatable question, with the probabilities inclining toward the second proposition, but surely they have something of the old Greek spirit.

Suits That Ought to be Won.

Civic responsibility is about to be subjected to an unusual but perfectly reasonable test up in Ottawa. That city is now suffering, for the second time this year, from an epidemic of typhoid, with a present record of seventy-two deaths and 1,200 cases.

This, of course, is much less a misfortune than a crime, and though a rigidly just apportionment of the deserved blame would put a share of it on every inhabitant of Ottawa, the part of them who have been infected or met with measurable losses because of the epidemic are actively moving to make the city as a whole pay them individually for its negligence.

In other words, the epidemic of typhoid has been followed by an epidemic of suits for damages against the municipality. The City Solicitor has told the City Council that the liability is real, as the water supply was not protected as it should have been, and the damages demanded in suits already begun aggregate $420,000.

There is even talk of suing the city to recover for fuel used in boiling water! That, however, is probably said in an effort to make ridiculous by reducing it to an apparent absurdity a movement which is not ridiculous at all.

It is to be hoped that these suits will be successful—all of them. If they are it will be a most valuable lesson, not only for Ottawa, but for every other city whose officials are convicted of like negligence whenever it has enough typhoid fever cases to constitute even a small epidemic.

THE FARMER'S BIG CROPS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The farmers of our country do not seem to be exempt from the tricks of politics, as witnessed by the misleading figures given out by the Department of Agriculture under date of Oct. 1, 1912. Much glamour surrounds the picture drawn by the department, and because it is framed officially it is largely accepted as infallible. Large headlines quote the Secretary as saying: "Looks like prosperity. Increase over $500,000,000 on last year's production," &c.

While the farmers are just as willing as any other class to have prosperity, they believe that the department representing them should not deviate from the facts so far as their products are concerned.

An analysis of this report shows that the $500,000,000 comes almost entirely from the corn crop.

The oats, although 500,000,000 bushels more, and the barley, 64,000,000 bushels more, show very little additional revenue to the farmers, because of the much lower prices. In wheat there is an additional showing of $57,000,000, but in these calculations there is no consideration given to the additional acreage and the additional cost of seed and labor.

The entire additional prosperity rests therefore with the corn crop, the present production being 3,016,000,000 bushels, as against 2,531,000,000 bushels last season. The error made by the department in computing the value of the corn crop is in taking the average farm price on Oct. 1, 1912, as a basis. This is the price of corn of last season on the farms, and the actual figures show that the crop of last season averaged 67 cents per bushel in the Chicago market over a period of time ranging from the first movement of the crop to Oct. 1 following.

The value of the present large crop should be calculated on its value in the Chicago market for the delivery of this new corn, and the December price is 53 cents, which price is also 1 cent per bushel more than its value for delivery next May.

A calculation based accordingly will show a shrinkage to the farmers of $100,000,000 instead of an increase of $500,000,000, and this destroys entirely this big argument for prosperity.

THE MIGHTIEST WARSHIPS.

England Has Four That Surpass the Wyoming and Arkansas.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In to-day's article entitled "Greatest Warship Now in the Hudson" you say that there are no battleships in commission the equal of the Arkansas and Wyoming, and that they lead all the other navies of the world in point of size and armament.

I feel you will welcome a correction.

There are four battleships in the British Navy that are less in tonnage and yet more powerful in armament. They are the Orion, Thunderer, Monarch, and Conqueror, the first three of which took part in the review at Spithead in the early Summer.

Below is given a chart, comparing them with the Arkansas and Wyoming:

	Orion, Thunderer, Monarch, Conqueror.	Arkansas, Wyoming.
Length over all	584 ft.	562 ft.
Beam	88½ ft.	93¼ ft.
Designed displacement	22,680 tons	26,000 tons
Speed	*22.31 knots.
Armor belt	12 in.	11 in.
Armor belt for guns	12 in.	12 in.
Armament	10-13.5 in. 16-4 in.	12-12 in. 21-5 in.
Torpedo tubes	3	2
Broadside fire	12,500	10,440 lbs.
Ahead fire	5,000	3,480 lbs.
Astern fire	5,000	3,480 lbs.

*Orion only.

My figures are taken from the British Navy League Annual, but where they are more favorable to the Arkansas I have given figures from The Scientific American for Feb. 4, 1911, instead. You underestimated the broadside fire of the Arkansas, putting it at 10,200 pounds. The shells weigh 870 pounds each, (or, according to The Scientific American, 867.) Even then the broadside fire of each of the four ships of the Orion class is over 2,000 pounds heavier than that of the Arkansas.

Empire Democrat for Straus.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to correct a slight error in your news article in to-day's issue headed "Empire Democrats Will Back Sulzer." You say that all of the candidates were present at the meeting at which it was decided to withdraw the Empire State Democracy ticket. I had been designated as the candidate for Controller on this ticket, but was not present at the said meeting, although duly notified that it would be held.

I do not share the views expressed by Julius Henry Cohen, Chairman of the Executive Committee, and I wish you would say for me that I am no more in favor of Tammany candidates and Tammany domination of the Democratic Party in this State now than I was before the Syracuse convention, and it is my present purpose to support Oscar Straus for Governor and Woodrow Wilson for President.

VAN HISE ON THE TRUSTS.

Special to The New York Times.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 12.—Charles R. Van Hise believes he has found a solution of the Trust Problem in the United States. He is President of the University of Wisconsin, a scholar of distinction, a writer of very considerable note and a thinker of progressive ideas. His cure for the Trust evil is covered in two words—Concentration and Control. He would take economic advantage of the concentration of industry, but he would guard the interests of the public by such Governmental supervision as would restrain the speculative spirit, without, however, impairing the legitimate use of capital, or bridling the free course of industrial genius. He would apply the rule of reason, of "fair play, mutual consideration and toleration" to the solution of the problem, and in the spirit of the opportunist make the best of existing conditions.

Having grown out of the competitive period, the country must attain fair play in its industrial affairs by regulation within the rules of law. The stage coach era has passed; there are few self-sufficient communities left in the United States, and they are to be found only in remote regions that have not felt the quickening touch of this age of progress; the country has grown out of its ante-bellum isolation into a great World Power. The abandonment of ancient methods has been followed by the development of transportation facilities which have resulted in the concentration of industry. Economies of administration, specialization and integration have made the manufacturing industry of the country great and powerful until it is now practically impossible to retain the relatively small industrial units of the outgrown competitive system of the fathers which is out of touch with the genius of the age.

Not only are the industrial advantages of concentration admitted by the students of the problem, but the business advantages are equally great. Big organizations are not only able to buy in large quantities and thus attain the lowest rates, but they are able also to sell in large quantities to the utmost advantage. They can practice through superior organization economies in administration that are not possible to smaller organizations; they can regulate production, afford better wages to those engaged in their service, provide for the better care of their people, arrange for the more economic distribution of industrial effort by increasing the efficiency of their plants, handle their products to greater advantage because of the very magnitude of their operations, and by concentration of effort reach the maximum of efficiency.

The Steadying of Prices.

The purposes of concentration, in addition to the economic advantages to be obtained by it, are "elimination of competition, the regulation of output and division of business and territory, the maintenance of prices, and the profits of readjustment," all good enough in their way, but directly at variance with the public welfare, as most of the political prophets of the day aver. The competitive system leads to irregularity in prices, encourages the overbuilding of industries, and compels combination or eventuates in financial disaster. Possibly the most pernicious of the results of concentration is the opportunity it affords promoters and capitalists to gain large and unearned profits from reorganizations. The restoration of the old competitive system is not possible, even if it were desirable. This country and the world have grown out of that method of doing business. Competition is dead. There must be concentration, but concentration regulated by law. Speaking the other day of the laws regarding trusts in this country, Dr. Van Hise said:

"In England in the Middle Ages the laws, both statute and common, were very strict against combinations and contracts in restraint of trade. It was found that these restrictions instead of benefiting the people worked against them, and they were all swept away in 1844 by an act of Parliament. Thus in England it was definitely settled that freedom in trade meant freedom to combine as well as freedom to compete, with the restriction, however, that no combination or contract should be immoral, against public policy, nor a monopoly. General contracts in restraint of trade were permitted, provided they were reasonable. In the United States the development of the common and statute laws went through like evolution. Under the common law, combination to reduce competition, to realize a fair price, to provide for exclusive selling agencies, to divide output and territory, were all legal, provided they did not result in monopoly.

"In 1890 a new policy was introduced by the Sherman anti-trust law, which made 'every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce,' illegal. Within ten years after the Sherman anti-trust law was passed the larger number of States passed anti-trust acts which while similar to the Sherman law were in many cases even more drastic. Thus the Nation and the States went back to the principles which had obtained in England and America in the Middle Ages regarding combinations and contracts in restraint of trade.

"It is a well-known fact that there are combinations and contracts in restraint of trade, or what accomplishes the same, tacit understandings in most lines of business in almost every locality of the United States, from the co-operation of the three or four ice men or coal men in a small town to the great central ice companies or anthracite combinations. The Attorney General of the United States and the Attorneys General of some of the States have begun numerous prosecutions under the anti-trust laws. The organizations selected for attack were those which were most conspicuous, and in some cases those against which there was most popular clamor and therefore political advantage in attacking them.

Dividing Into Units Impossible.

"The United States Supreme Court, confronted with the new situation, realizing that it was impossible for business to go on economically and efficiently under the principles which obtained in the Middle Ages, interpreted into the clear-cut words of the Sherman law the word 'reasonable.' They have thus gone a long way by interpretation to create a situation which was produced through the natural development of law before the anti-trust laws were passed. Other countries have found one cycle of the development of law sufficient; in this country it is clear that we shall be obliged to go through two cycles before we realize that co-operation in industry is inevitable.

"It has been assumed by those defending the existing anti-trust laws and the programme of disintegration of the large concentrations of industry that if only the large organizations are divided into a sufficient number of small units, the old conditions of competition will be restored. The fundamental defect of this hypothesis is that under modern conditions we have realized the great advantage of co-operation in every line of work, and now that industries have once enjoyed the advantages of co-operation they can never again be driven to unrestricted competition."

Dr. Van Hise has stated very clearly the remedies he would apply to the trusts, but that is another story.

THE SIMPLE SPELLERS

To the Editor of The New York Times:

From a casual paragraf in your editorial colums I infer that you hav a certain curiosity as to the present condition of the movement in behalf of simplified spelling.

It is now seven years since the Simplified Spelling Board was organized, and the question may well be askt: "What has it achieved?" The answer to this is that it has accomplished more than its most sanguine members dared to hope for when the work began. Of course, the victory is not won in this seven years' war with well-meaning ignorance and aggressive prejudice. The public has not accepted all or most of the orthografic simplifications recommended; but this acceptance was not expected by any member of the board. We had taken to heart Lord Morley's shrewd remark (in his "Voltaire") that "nearly all lovers of improvement are apt in the heat of a generous enthusiasm to forget that if all the world were ready to embrace their cause their improvement could hardly be needed."

As a matter of fact, many of the simpler spellings we hav urged hav been adopted by more publications than we had anticipated—by far more than can be known to anybody who has not taken the trouble to investigate. Certain of our briefer orthografies are stealthily creeping into more general use, especially in business correspondence, in catalogs, and in advertizements. As they become less strange, they become less abhorrent; familiarity breeds toleration, to say the least. In fact, the old violence of opposition to any and all change in spelling seems to be dying down. Many of those who still object strenuously to our specific simplifications are ready to admit that orthografy is not all that it should be and that it will profit by some sort of improvement which will better fit English for its future use as a world-language.

We are told that in seven years men change their bodies; and the efforts of the Simplified Spelling Board in its seven years of activity hav led many men to change their minds. As Prof. Lounsbury put it pithily, one of our main purposes is "the gradual diffusion of intelligence among the educated classes." We hav pretty well broken down the superstition that the dictionary is divinely inspired; and we hav disestablisht the twin belief that there is now and has always been a fixt and final standard of English spelling, to depart from which is to sin against light. A mere general knowledge now exists that our orthografy has never been uniform, and that it has always been changing, either for the better or for the worse, ever since the language first began to be written. No more do we listen to the shrill shriek that our simplifications will "destroy the language." Very rarely do we hear the outworn argument that any attempt to better spelling will bring confusion and conceal etymology.

Indeed, the most of our opponents hav relinquisht argument. They take refuge now in a frank declaration of prejudise in favor of the spellings they happen individually to prefer. And, of course, this makes our task only the harder; we can overcome argument—but prejudise will yield only to enlightenment, and inertia can be conquered only by time. But we cannot fail to feel encouraged when we note how quickly the atmosfere of arrogant hostility has been dissipated and how much more open-minded the discussion has become. And we are still more encouraged when we call the roll of the prominent educators who hav been won over and who are seeing to it that the rising generation shall not harden into the prejudise which may hav possest their parents. It is in the schools that we hav done our best work; and it is among the teachers that we hav our strongest allies. This might hav been expected, since the cumbrous and illogical spelling taught in our schools is responsible for an immense waste of time—and also for the pupil's injurious reliance on rule and rote rather than on observation and deduction. The City Superintendent of New York, Dr. Maxwell, personally abominates thru for through and dislikes past for passed; but he is broad-minded enough to sink individual prejudise "to advocate that which is for the welfare of all." He holds that the loss of time in teaching spelling is not the worst feature of the accepted orthografy. "The result of falling into ridiculous mistakes by depending upon reasoning or analogy in spelling is to make the child timorous about reasoning in arithemtic, geografy, history, and grammar"; and "the habit of depending upon memory exclusively in spelling engenders the habit of depending upon memory in every other study, and so retards progress in teaching children to think for themselves."

This, then, is what the Simplified Spelling Board has accomplisht: It has brought up again the necessity for considering the urgent need of making our spelling at least as simple as the spelling of French and of German.

The Suez Canal.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The distinguished French critic, Pierre Loti, is quoted in a recent interview, apropos of the Panama Canal, as stating that the Suez Canal was built by the French, managed and owned by them, and urging our Government to act likewise in the Panama Canal.

I beg to call M. Loti's attention to the fact that while the Suez Canal was built by M. de Lesseps, the great French engineer, and financed by the French Government, it is no longer under French control nor ownership. The greatest statesman of the nineteenth century, Lord Beaconsfield, accomplished the crowning glory of his notable career by purchasing the controlling interest (the majority of shares) in the canal, thereby obtaining for England its ownership, control, and management.

Baseball Queries.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is it true, as I have heard, that the baseball gentlemen who pitch the kind of balls called spit-balls are to be hereafter designated as spitchers? I am also informed that in Boston spit-balls are referred to as saliva spheroids. Is this true? I should also like to inquire if "Jack and the Bean Stalk" is the same person as "Jack the Giant Killer." Perhaps I should have addressed this last question to the literary editor instead of the baseball editor but I do not care who answers it so long as it is answered.

JOE.

Joe would, it seems, and so Joe does,
By some mysterious science
That spins the leather somehow where
It's clean beyond the Giants.

Joe would, they told us, but we thought
It was the Boston manner
To scare New York just bad enough
To drop the champion banner.

Joe would, although the others might
Not wish to hog the series,
And so at shoving no-hit balls
He never, never wearies.

By heck, Joe would as soon as not Put New York where she couldn't
Have any show to reach the rag—
And, say, we wish Joe wouldn't.

ZIMBALIST BELIEVES IN VIOLIN NOVELTIES

It Is the Duty of the Artist to Play New Music Constantly, He Says.

EVEN IF PUBLIC DISLIKES IT

With the lesson of "Fanny's First Play" and "Milestones," both to be considered as the protest of youth against age, still dinning itself into one's ears, now may be added a few remarks of that extremely young Russian violinist, Efrem Zimbalist, who has returned to this country for his second tour here. Mr. Zimbalist thinks that it is an artist's duty to the public to play new music constantly, whether the public dislikes it or not, and he does not believe that it is either highly moral or highly artistic to sound constantly the classic strings.

"I don't remember being really sick but once in my life," Mr. Zimbalist said one day last week to a TIMES reporter. "And that was once after I had played Wieniawski's 'Souvenir de Moscow' in London. I was asked to do it at an orchestral concert, and there seemed no way out of it. I learned the work in a few days, and played it, but the mental suffering I went through afterward convinced me that it was not worth the trouble. It isn't that the work is so bad, but that it is so hackneyed; it has been played so much, and by so many people, that it has become stale. I could breathe nothing new into it; I was doing nothing for a living composer in playing it; in fact, I hated myself for doing it, and for days afterward I felt wretched."

"That's all rot," answered Mr. Zimbalist in good American fashion, for since he has been in this country this young Russian has become thoroughly saturated with its conversational spirit. "There's plenty of good new violin music written, but nobody will play it.

"I have never heard Maud Powell play, but I admire her very much because she is continually giving music by unknown composers or new music by well-known composers. She is constantly on the lookout for novelties. There is really plenty of new music written for the violin, and it should be played. And if the public doesn't like it and if even the critics do not like it, it doesn't mean that some day it will not be popular.

"Orchestral conductors are constantly introducing new music to their publics, and plenty of the works they play are not successful at first. You know of the conductors who have dinned Brahms into the ears of symphony concertgoers until the ears got accustomed to the juxtaposition of sounds and enjoyed them. Do you know that when Tschaikowsky's so-called 'Symphonie Pathetique' was first played in St. Petersburg it made no success at all? After the composer's death it was played again, and with a different result. And now it is one of the most popular works in the répertoire. The cases of 'Carmen,' 'Madama Butterfly,' and other works come immediately to mind.

"Now, I like to play new music, and I continually search for it; I like to vary my programmes as much as possible, and when I find anything new that I like I add it to my répertoire. There is the music of Cyril Scott, for instance. I have three new pieces of his which are very beautiful. I feel they are beautiful; they appeal to my heart, and if necessary I shall play them for twenty years—until people like them.

"Then there is the concerto of John Powell. Ah, in John Powell you have a countryman to be proud of! He is from Richmond, and I gave his concerto its first hearing there last Spring. It has been played nowhere else. I have the exclusive rights to it for two years, and it will not be published for another year.

"This season I shall play it many times. I consider it the most beautiful concerto for the violin written since Brahms. Americans should like it because it is full of American color. It is real American music. The first movement, I believe, utilizes no established tunes, but it is American in atmosphere. In the adagio Powell has used many negro melodies. I shall play it first, I think, when I appear with the Symphony Society.

"At my first concert here I shall play practically nothing but novelties, although some of them are not by new composers. For instance, there is a concerto by Vivaldi, not yet published, and another by Rubinstein. I do not think the Rubinstein violin concerto has ever been played in New York. The second and last movements are too bad to play anywhere. I do not understand how such a great musician could write such bad music, but I shall play only the first movement. My programme will also include a new concerto by Hubay, the Cyril Scott numbers, and some new compositions of my own.

"During the Summer I have written several things. It is about the only work I have done. I wanted some rest and I took it, but I have written several songs—three, with Russian words, for Alma Gluck. I believe she will sing one of them at her New York concert and I have arranged 'The Old Folks at Home,' which I consider the most beautiful melody I have ever heard, simple and direct from the heart, for violin and string orchestra. I shall probably play it first at one of the Metropolitan Sunday-night concerts. I am engaged there for three Sunday nights.

Rode Through the Caucasus.

"This Summer I rode on horseback through the Caucasus. One day I came across an old man playing an instrument somewhat resembling the 'cello, of which he plucked the strings. I noted the tune he was playing, a wonderful folk melody, and I shall play it here under the title 'Orientale.'"

"But when you take a rest, is it not necessary for you to practice a great deal?"

"No. I practice very little—an hour a day at the most, just enough to get my fingers into shape. It is the same before a concert. I do not have to rehearse my numbers. I remember them. But I must get my fingers into shape. I play exercises on the violin until I feel that my fingers are just right, and then I go to the concert. But I always remember anything I have played. For instance, it is eight years since I have played the Rubinstein concerto, but I have not forgotten it. I could play it to-day if necessary."

In appearance and manner Efrem Zimbalist is but a boy. He is, in fact, only 23 years old. He is as simple as possible in his tastes, and as enthusiastic as only a youth can be. This season he came to this country a full three weeks before his season opened "to have a good time." His idea of a good time here is to visit the shops, take in the first nights, and go to see his friends, of whom he has many here.

"I went to London in September," he said, "intending to stay there until my season opened over here, and then I found that I was not enjoying myself. I knew that I could enjoy myself in New York, and so I took a boat and came over. I love America and I am sure that some day I will make my home here. I recently bought my family a house in Russia, but for myself I should much prefer living in America. I came to this country this season against the advice of many people, because almost every notable violinist in the world is touring here this year. But I already have concerts booked solid up to the middle of January, so you see it turned out all right."

"Ysaye is coming over," he explained, "and Kreisler, the wonderful, whom I admire more than any other violinist—he has both heart and brain—and Miss Powell and Mischa Elman. It is an extraordinary list."

Mr. Zimbalist at this point asked the reporter if he would like to walk up the avenue. At one of the many phonograph shops the violinist stopped, and, beckoning the reporter to follow, he entered.

"I haven't heard the new records I made in the Spring," he explained. Then, unrecognized, he asked the clerk to play some Zimbalist records, and listened delightedly to that young man's comments, upon them, which were largely encomiastic in nature. Thus he highly praised a certain MacDowell record, and also one in which Mr. Zimbalist had united with Alma Gluck, because they were good sellers.

From there the young Russian wandered into other shops, with the keenest interest displayed for the new and the inviting. He said that one of his chief joys was to attend the first nights of musical comedies, and he rarely missed one when he had the opportunity of going.

FROHMAN INVADES CONTINENT

Charles Frohman's plan to establish a European circuit for his successful London and American productions, in which managers of Continental theatres will be interested, has culminated in an arrangement to send on tour the three one-act plays by Barrie, Pinero, and Shaw, to be produced first at the Duke of York's Theatre, London, this week. These three plays, the first with an American cast and the other two with English casts, will be sent out on Nov. 11 and will be seen in Paris, Vienna, Munich, Dresden, Budapest, Lyons, Marseilles, Berlin, Frankfort, and Brussels. The managers in these cities are associated financially with Mr. Frohman, and he expects to present their desirable plays in England and America.

Mr. Frohman said yesterday that only those plays that had been chosen by a majority of the managers would go over the circuit. The three one-act plays had been seen by the Continental representatives in rehearsal, he said. The next piece he hopes to put out is Barrie's "The Legion of Leonora," which is to be done here and in England. "Officer 666" he also expects to have played in Europe. This he is to produce in London in association with Cohan & Harris.

To Publish a New Satire.

Satire, the weekly publication devoted to "the higher type of humor," which, according to its editor, Walter Pulitzer, had evidently proved above the heads of the masses, has only suspended temporarily. A revised Satire, in a new and more popular form, it is promised, will soon be issued, and meanwhile the old subscribers will be transferred to a magazine which the Pulitzer Publishing Company has just bought until the revised version of Satire appears.

FINGER PRINT TEST FOR GUILTY MONKEY

ANIMALS MUCH ANNOYED

After many years' association, Bill Snyder, head keeper of the Zoo in Central Park, has made the discovery that Patrick Keenan, the veteran keeper of the monkey house, has a scientific turn of mind. Bill announced his discovery yesterday to his friends at their weekly meeting in the hay house. It was recounted as the most important news of the week, and not even Andy Smith, the policeman, doubted the absolute truth of the assertion. Keenan, according to Snyder, has been making a finger print record of the monkeys in his care.

"I noticed for some days that Keenan was preoccupied, and spent much time writing in a corner of the monkey house," said Snyder. "Once when I came in unexpectedly I noted that Keenan hid some papers in evident haste. I did not think much of it until one day I noticed a commotion among the monkeys, and arrived in time to find Keenan holding a Javanese monkey tight in his arms while he was pressing the thumb of the animal to a white sheet of paper."

It was then that Keenan after much questioning confessed to Snyder that he was studying the finger prints of the monkeys. It was reading the police stores in the newspapers that first led him to the study, he said, and what stimulated him to active endeavor was the repeated thefts of milk from the monkey hospital, where there are sometimes as many as five patients.

"I want to know who is getting that milk," said Keenan. "I have tried a hundred different ways trapping the offender, but it is no good. Now, I have just completed a record of the monkeys' thumb prints. I am going to know who is stealing that milk if I have to get a regular job as a detective."

Keenan's investigations, however, so interested him that they led him further afield, and so one day last week he took half a day off and went up to Bronx Park and held a conference with the keeper there. From all Snyder could learn, his views did not meet the same approval up there that Snyder gave them.

"Sure, it is interesting," said Keenan yesterday when he was found trying to soothe an indignant monkey. "There is just as much difference between the thumbprints of monkeys as there is between the thumbprints of men. I am using lampblack to obtain the impressions, and I must say the monkeys do not take kindly to having their marks recorded."

"What's the use of it all?" asked Bob Hurton, the assistant keeper.

"Sure I am studying for the benefit of science," replied Keenan, as he retired, much put out over the open laughter of Keeper Cunningham.

"I am going down," said the latter, "to take the pawprints of the lions."

"Keenan," explained Bill, "is very much in earnest, and as a result the monkeys are getting positively to dislike the old man. He is very earnest in his new pursuit of science, and he actually came to me with talk of how valuable his record will be if one of the monkeys escapes."

The only outward excitement in the Zoo yesterday was caused by the arctic goose. Every once in a while the goose creates disorder in the big cage, to the great enjoyment of the public. The goose got into an argument with the very dignified crane over a choice bit of fish, and trouble was not long in starting. The goose is small but chunky, and, as Bill expresses it, can lick anything in the feathered line in the Zoo. The hundreds of visitors were first attracted to the big outside cage by the protests of the indignant goose. The crane had snatched the morsel of fish and promptly bolted it. In a second the goose became a feathered bundle of chain lightning. The crane made an effort to repel the attack, but the arctic bird seemed to be in ten places at once. Finally the larger bird gave it up and tried to get out of the way of the angry one. For five minutes the goose chased the crane about the cage. The other birds got out of the way, and the crowd roared and shouted as time and again the goose left the ground and projected herself against the tailfeathers of the retreating bird.

Around and around the cage the chase went, while the spectators shouted approval. Finally the crane darted in the door of the birdhouse. The goose then gave up pursuit, and for the next ten minutes had the open-air cave all to itself. It was a very subdued crane that appeared timidly about a quarter of an hour later.

"Gee, but it was great!" was the verdict of the small spectators, who had gathered in force.

Grace George to Rehearse 'Carnival.'

Grace George decided yesterday that, in view of the number of Chinese plays promised for the current season, she would not produce Volmoeller's "Tournadot" for the present, but will turn immediately to "Carnival," a drama by Compton MacKenzie and founded on his novel of the same name. Rehearsals will begin to-morrow. Mr. MacKenzie came to America about a week ago to confer with William A. Brady about the production.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

MUSIC LECTURES FOR WEEK.

Education Board Course to be Supplemented by Special Events.

Thomas Whitney Surette of the American Society of University Extension Teaching, Miss Margaret Anderton and Miss Pearl Cleveland Wilson are among the latest additions to the corps of lecturers on music engaged by the Board of Education. They will give lecture recitals the latter part of this month and in November.

This week the regular course lecture recitals now in progress in the various boroughs will be supplemented by special lectures. At St. Luke's Hall, Hudson Street, Manhattan, on Thursday, Peter W. NO COFFIN FOR POOR DICK.

Tries to Buy One Second-Hand and Her Grief Is Great.

A pawnbroker who for twenty years has been practicing avuncular charity in the neighborhood of Fifty-ninth Street and Third Avenue by taking in among other things such doubtful risks as false teeth, glass eyes, wooden legs, crutches, and other assets of the poor, was startled on Saturday night by a demand for assistance such as had never come to him before. A rather good-looking young woman, very neatly dressed, entered the loan shop, pushed her way to the front of a waiting line of customers, and, hiding her face in her handkerchief, burst into sobs and tears:

"Oh, he's dead! Oh, he's dead!" she moaned. "Oh, my poor, poor fellow!"

The pawnbroker ordered his clerk to attend to the customer, and the clerk managed to get an explanation from the woman, through tears and convulsive sobbing, that "Poor Dick" had died that night.

"Oh, the poor, poor boy!" she cried.

"Surely, it must have been very sudden," said the pawnbroker, comfortingly, "for Dick was in here only yesterday morning to get $2. Well, you needn't take it so hard, madam. You needn't worry about any of the stuff Mr. Dick has in pawn here. We will keep everything for you until you are able to redeem it."

"But it isn't my husband," she answered disconsolately. "I haven't any husband. Dick is my poor little poodle. He only weighed three pounds! Oh, my poor, poor boy!"

"And I want to know if you can sell me a small coffin for him. I've got to bury him to-morrow. Oh, poor, poor little fellow; to think that you've got to be buried on Sunday!"

"A second-hand coffin!" exclaimed the pawnbroker. "Do you think we take such things in hock here?"

To stop her tears, however, the pawnbroker and his clerk offered her as a substitute for a pawned coffin a perfectly adequate soap box, which was gratefully accepted.

To Aim Shavian Shafts at Our Critics

The Shuberts have cabled George Bernard Shaw asking permission to change the identity of the critics who appear in the induction and epilogue to "Fanny's First Play" for a single matinée performance so that they will suggest New York instead of London theatrical writers. No change will be made in the lines of the play, but it is planned to have the actors who play the four critics "made up" to look like four of the most prominent of the New York writers. Which four will be selected the Shuberts have not told, but they intend to invite all of them to see the performance.

APE NOT AFRAID OF POLICE.

A fascinated crowd gathered in front of the animal store at 44 Cortlandt Street yesterday afternoon, and a passing policeman looked in and saw that a large ape had broken from its cage and was busy seeing how many things it could break. It had already smashed several showcases, uncaged a hysterical parrot, and eaten seven rare Japanese goldfishes. The policeman groaned and sent in a call for help. A few moments later, by which time the crowd had grown to Madison Square Garden proportions, five other bluecoats joined him, and the six entered the store.

The ape retreated sourly and in passing smashed a case from which there immediately emerged a company of snakes measuring from a foot to two yards in length. The troublemaker then picked a sizeable one up by the tip of its tail and swung it in the air like a lariat.

"Grafters!" screamed the parrot from the chandelier.

Two of the policemen stepped out to press back the crowd. The other four closed the door and advanced grimly on the ape. They cornered it at the rear of the store, but it seemed quite unimpressed. The police then decided to adjourn to the street, and did so with all possible speed.

"Grafters!" croaked the parrot with much feeling, as the door closed.

After a half hour had passed and the ape had amused itself by killing a few snakes the police were still holding a council of war when the keeper arrived, went in, and gave one look at the ape.

"Heine!" he said reproachfully.

And at the familiar name the ape crept sheepishly to its cage, while the parrot came silently down from the chandelier. No arrests were made.

MRS. JOHN ASTOR BACK.

Among the passengers arriving yesterday on the Cunarder Caronia was Mrs. Eva Willing Astor, or Mrs. John Astor, as she prefers to be styled, and her daughter, Muriel Astor. They have come to spend the Winter with Vincent Astor in the house he recently leased in Fifth Avenue. Mrs. Astor wore a black velvet gown, cut V-shaped in the neck. She had no collar, but wore a long string of pearls which reached to her waist, a cavalier hat with white plume and a brown and gray ostrich boa and carried a jewel case in her hand. Her daughter, Muriel, who appeared to have grown since her last visit to this country, wore a black dress with white insertion.

Mrs. Astor sat on one of her trunks while her son and daughter, assisted by Secretary Dobbin, raced about the pier looking for the many pieces of baggage. Mr. Astor said that his mother would stay in New York till the Spring.

Another passenger on the Caronia was Henry Lenygon, who purchased the famous Globe Room of Banbury House, Banbury, two years ago, with its cut stone chimney piece and carved oak paneling with the idea of bringing it back with him to America. Oliver Cromwell, Dick Turpin, John Churchill, first Duke of Marlborough; King Charles II. and William the III. of Orange were among the famous people in history who are believed to have sat by the fireside in the Globe Room.

Recently when Lord Curzon heard that the room was going to be transported to New York by Mr. Lenygon he wrote such a strong letter to one of the London papers about the sin of allowing this link with the past to leave the country that a controversy was started and the result was that the Globe Room has been left over there for the present.

WIDE RANGE OF DICTOGRAPH.

Inventor Shows Its Adaptability to Everyday Business Use.

Before an audience of newspaper reporters yesterday afternoon, K. M. Turner, inventor of the dictograph, which, he says, has been misspelled dictagraph, gave a demonstration of the various ways in which the device could be practically utilized. The demonstration took place in the Grand Central Palace, where the electrical show is being held.

"The dictograph," explained the inventor, "has been known as a detective device. This is the first public demonstration of its everyday commercial importance. With our commercial device, a business man simply lifts a lever, and talks to one, two, fifteen, or a hundred people, as he chooses, at one time. Each party to the conversation is seated in his own office, which may be in the same building or several blocks away. Nobody is obliged to hold a transmitter or receiver. They talk back and forth as though seated in the same room.

"The detective value of the device consists of the fact that the transmitter only weighs six ounces, and can be concealed easily. It can be installed in four minutes by an expert, and can be wired so as to transmit spoken words for more than a mile."

The inventor sent some of the reporters to the basement, while others remained on watch on the third floor. In succession the transmitters recorded conversations audibly when imbedded in blocks of cement, in plaster, behind wood and wall paper, and through steel laths and concrete. In every instance the stenographic record taken at the other end was absolutely correct.

To THE TIMES reporter Mr. Turner confided that he had been working to perfect a device which would make a phonographic record at the further end of the dictograph and do away with the necessity of stenographic witnesses.

"Such a device would mean absolute perfection," said Mr. Turner. "It is difficult, however, to hit upon a device which will be capable of simple installation and still have sufficient electrical power to make phonographic records."

Mr. Turner showed how grand opera, orchestra, or single instruments could transmit music through the dictograph into a crowded room miles away from the place where the music was produced.

DRAPED HIMSELF IN CARPET.

Embarrassing Situation When a Man Dashed from a Bath After a Robber.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—George H. Ruggles, while in the bathtub in his apartments at a hotel here to-day, heard some one in his bedroom. He dashed out and found a man making off with his clothes. He ran at the man, who darted through the hall door. Before he could check himself Ruggles was outside his door, which swung to and latched behind him.

Ruggles abandoned the chase of the robber and made efforts to get his door open or to scale the transom, as several guests were approaching down the hall. His efforts proving unavailing, he was forced to snatch up a length of the hall carpet to drape himself. Employes of the hotel, thinking he was insane, took him thus clad to a trunk room and sent for the police before he could make them believe his explanation. He returned to his room by way of a freight elevator.

TELLS OF JEWISH PROBLEMS.

Israel Abrahams Says His People Must Have a National Life.

At a meeting held in his honor at the Hotel Astor yesterday evening, Israel Abrahams, Reader in Rabbinics at the University of Cambridge, and one of the leaders in the liberal movements in Jewish theology, discussed the "Jewish Problem," which he defined as "The eternal question of living two lives harmoniously."

From the moment he arrived in this country, Mr. Abrahams said, he seemed to fit into American life. He explained that in general the conditions were the same here as in England and other civilized countries. He said he hesitated to enter into a discussion of the Jewish problem because he said it was a strange characteristic of members of the Jewish race that they regarded the Jewish problem as it affected every one except themselves.

"No condition," said Mr. Abrahams, "will prevent the Jew from sharing the general life in which he lives. Share it he will and share it he must, I say. Anti-Semitism is on the wane in Germany, but no amount of anti-Semitism would prevent us Jews from sharing and contributing to our National life.

"Show your children the beauty of National life, and at the same time show them the beauty of the life within it. You cannot live without your American patriotism, but you will die without your Judaism. The curse falling upon us is the curse of vicariousness."

If they were to solve the Jewish problem, Mr. Abrahams said, the Jews must start by adopting honest personal attitudes toward that problem.

Dr. Henry M. Leipziger, President of the Judeans, presided at the meeting and introduced Mr. Abrahams. Among the other speakers were Rabbi Joseph Silverman of Temple Emanu-El and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue. Oscar S. Straus, Progressive candidate for Governor, who was to have delivered an address, sent a message expressing his regrets at having been unavoidably detained.

Among those present were: Judge Julian W. Mack of the Court of Commerce of Washington, D. C., Supreme Court Justice Samuel Greenbaum and Mrs. Greenbaum, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus L. Sulzberger, Prof. Solomon Schechter, Supreme Court Justice M. W. Platzek, Louis Marshal, Prof. and Mrs. A. W. Grabau, Victor D. Brenner, Dr. David Desolo Pool, Dr. and Mrs. M. H. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Mielzinier, Miss Pauline Leipziger, and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Hays.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

Several factors of distinctly favorable import in our own situation which were drawn to the attention of the financial community last week were outweighed in their influence upon the market by continued heavy selling from abroad, which very naturally induced a considerable amount of liquidation from home sources. The European selling was directly prompted by a continuance of the apprehension over the Balkan situation, which was increased by the formal declaration of war by Montenegro against Turkey and by the great probability of the armed conflict extending to the other Balkan States. The previous week had seen this situation take acute form, and last week's developments were only in keeping with the natural working out of the forces which had previously been set at work. The fears thus aroused helped to disclose a weak speculative situation in Paris, and also in Berlin, both of which markets sold very heavily in London, which in turn liquidated a very large amount of stock in this market. It was estimated in conservative banking quarters that within the past fortnight no less than 400,000 shares of American stocks have been sold by London and the Continent. The selling was heavy at the very close of last week, when our own market yielded to the continued foreign pressure to a sufficient extent to bring about a condition of greater weakness than any which had been witnessed in recent weeks. But taken as a whole our market has met this foreign selling, though it was greater than any which had occurred since the troublous days of September of last year, when a conflict involving the great powers of Europe was feared, in a way which shows very conclusively that the buying power here was even greater than had been generally estimated.

The immediate question which concerns this market is whether or not the European liquidation of American securities has about run its course. The opinion prevails in high banking circles that most of the floating supply of American securities in Europe was resold to this market during the past two weeks of almost continuous and very heavy selling. If this proves true, the influence of the Balkan war scare upon this market has probably about run its course, unless the conflict in Southeastern Europe should extend beyond the bounds to which the great powers are now believed to be thoroughly determined to restrict it. It must be recognized, however, that the position on the Continental Bourses was sufficiently disturbed to leave it uncertain just how far their own difficulties might be reflected in other markets. Count must also be taken of the fact That while the floating supply of American stocks has largely been disposed of by Europe, a good part of this is still being carried on the other side by the American buyers, and some strain may be put on our own money market to care for the actual shipment of these stocks to this market. Up to the present it is estimated that stocks to a market value of about $15,000,000 are in process of actual transfer from London to New York. Some interesting inferences are to be drawn from the fact that notwithstanding the necessity which we were under last week of paying for much stock bought abroad, the loans here in New York decreased. The lending here of out-of-town money may have contributed to this showing, but it is known that interior banks in some sections were withdrawing funds from this market, and it seems necessary to assume a considerable amount of liquidation in our own market to account for the decline in loans which the bank statement revealed. This in turn carries the assumption that general public buying in the market as prices declined was sufficient to take up a good deal of stock which had been concentrated in speculative accounts in the New York market. Partly as a result of the loan decrease, but particularly on account of the considerable increase in cash, the actual figures of the bank statement revealed an increase of over $6,000,000 in surplus reserve. The easier position in which the banks found themselves at the close of the week was reflected in a very comfortable money position on Friday, notwithstanding the fact that loans on that day carried over until the opening of this week. This market, however, cannot escape entirely the influence of the contrary movement which is underway in the European money markets, and a sign of caution is presented in last week's advance in the London discount rate to a figure 3-16 above the actual bank rate. An advance in that rate above 4 per cent. was brought all the nearer by last week's movement of rates in the open market and by the continued disturbed conditions of the general European situation because of the war in the Balkans and the fears attendant upon it.

While the European difficulties were commanding the immediate attention of the market, the information which continued to come to hand regarding our own affairs was highly favorable. The October Government crop report was extraordinarily good, and the unfilled order statement of the United States Steel Corporation, which was issued last Thursday, showed an unexpectedly large increase in the tonnage on the books of that company. The copper statement earlier in the week did, it is true, show a falling off in deliveries of copper during September, but this ought to be viewed in the light of the abnormally large shipments which occurred during August. Nothing is quite so close to the making of fundamental business conditions as the size and value of the country's crops, and the October report of the Department of Agriculture indicates that beyond doubt this year's product of the farms in quantity as well as in value will exceed all previous years. It was hardly surprising that on the day following the publication of this report the stock market should for a time have overridden the influence of foreign selling and have shown a recovery on the news of this most excellent report. In the long run the farming success of this year will mean much more to the American situation than the outbreak of a war in Southeastern Europe, and even in the face of temporary disturbance because of unsettlement abroad this year's bountiful crops are a sustaining factor of prime importance. Whatever the immediate fortunes of the stock market may prove to be, there can be no doubt that the year's farm production, which the Secretary of Agriculture estimated last week would reach an aggregate value of $9,000,000,000, establishes a very firm foundation for the continuance of active and profitable trade.

THE MARKETS OF EUROPE

BERLIN EXPECTS GENERAL WAR.

Profound Pessimism at the End of a Fortnight of Heavy Declines.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 13.—Not in many years have the Bourses in Berlin, Hamburg, and Frankfort-on-Main experienced such a succession of panicky conditions as those which prevailed during last week.

Yesterday's closing here was after one of the most tempestuous days in its history. The investing public declined to be reassured by diplomatic assertions that the war in the Near East would remain localized, and were convinced that Europe was on the brink of a general conflagration. Selling orders poured in overwhelmingly in consequence, and a general slump in prices ensued.

The big banks met during the day to consider ways and means of arresting the decline, but with little result.

The quotations at the end of the week show enormous declines in all the principal issues on the German list, as compared with prices on Oct. 1. Hansa steamship shares are lower by 48 points, Phoenix iron by 22, Hamburg-American by 19, North German Lloyd by 16, Deutsche Bank by 14, and German Imperial 3 per cents by 1 1-5.

Unless the great banks intervene energetically with buying orders operators expect the opening of the new market week to witness a resumption of the downward movement, as the public mind is gradually becoming obsessed with the idea that war will be only temporarily confined to the Balkans.

HEAVY SLUMP IN LONDON.

Big Banks on the Continent Said to Have Lent Too Much.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The Stock Exchange took the war news week calmly enough, and not till a flood of Continental sales came did prices fall. The London speculative position was sound, but nothing could withstand the pressure from the Continent.

It is suggested that the slump on the Continental Bourses was not so much due to the war panic as to the conditions created by the recklessness of some big financial institutions in their methods of lending money on too narrow margins and unsound securities.

With war in prospect it became necessary to close out such accounts, and the consequent collapse was made more pronounced than the war news would have justified had the speculative position been sounder.

RUSSIAN STOCKS HIT PARIS.

Speculators Have to Unload Other Securities in a Hurry.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—Excessive speculation in Russian industrials was the chief cause of the collapse, precipitated on the Paris Bourse last week by the Balkan situation.

When the bad news came, Paris tried to rid itself of its Russian industrials, but St. Petersburg refused to take them up, and the result was unfortunate for the speculators, who were forced to throw over their other holdings of a more easily negotiable character.

BUSINESS MEN HOSTS OF FOREIGN VISITORS

TOURS BY AUTO AND STEAMER

More than 400 prominent business men who represented the Governments and principal commercial bodies of fifty-five foreign countries at the Fifth International Congress of Chambers of Commerce and industrial associations, held three weeks ago in Boston, will be the guests of New York City during Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. A large Reception Committee has been formed of members from fourteen of the city's business organizations, and extensive preparations have been made for the entertainment of the visitors.

The foreign visitors will arrive in this city on Thursday morning on three special trains which were provided for them by the Boston Chamber of Commerce when they left Boston on Sept. 30 for a tour of the West as far as Chicago. They have been entertained in Worcester, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, Cincinnati, Dayton, and Pittsburgh, and are still to visit Washington and Philadelphia before they come to New York.

A sub-committee of the Reception Committee of the New York commercial and business organizations will go to Philadelphia to meet the three special trains conveying the delegates to that city. The committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, headed by John H. Fahey, which has conducted the tour for the foreign visitors, will then be relieved of care for the delegates and included in the various features of entertainment here on the same basis with the delegates. At Philadelphia the sub-committee of the New York Reception Committee will provide the visiting foreigners with illustrated souvenir programmes of the entertainment which has been provided for them, and at the same time will inform the visitors of their hotel assignments.

The Reception Committee will meet the foreign delegates at the Pennsylvania Station on their arrival at 11 o'clock on Thursday morning. The visitors will be escorted in waiting automobiles to the various hotels where reservations have been made for them, and during their entire stay here each national group will be in charge of a special committee whose members speak its language. The visitors will be provided with badges, and the automobiles placed at their disposal will be designated by streamers.

On Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock the foreign delegates will be taken on an automobile tour of Manhattan, from Washington Square to 156th Street, up Riverside Drive, returning through Central Park. On the same evening at 8 o'clock they will be guests at a performance of "Under Many Flags" at the Hippodrome.

On Friday at 9 o'clock they will be taken for a sightseeing trip around the harbor on the steamer Hendrick Hudson, leaving the recreation pier at the foot of East Twenty-fourth Street. On this trip they will see a fireboat drill at the Battery. Returning at 1 o'clock, the delegates and the ladies accompanying them will be guests at a luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce, 65 Liberty Street.

Leaving the Chamber of Commerce at 3:30, the visitors will be conveyed in automobiles on a second tour of the city, the route being up Broadway and Madison, Fourth, and Fifth Avenues. At 4:30 o'clock a reception in their honor will be held at the United Engineering Societies Building, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street. Addresses will be made by Mayor Gaynor and representatives of the various commercial and business organizations and responses by the delegates.

The committee in charge of the entertainment has sent formal invitations to the foreign Consuls stationed in this city, to city officials, and to 11,000 members of the various organizations taking part in the entertainment.

The countries represented by the delegates are Argentine Republic, Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, England, Arabia, Australia, the Bahamas, Bermuda, British East Africa, Canada, India, Ireland, Jamaica, New Zealand, Scotland, South Africa, Tasmania, Trinidad, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, France, Algiers, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Holland, Honduras, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Norway, Panama, Persia, Peru, Portugal, Azores, Roumania, Russia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, Hawaii, Philippine Islands, Uruguay, and Venezuela.

CANNED GOODS UNCHANGED.

Vegetable Demand Good, but Call for Fruit and Fish Light.

Advices received in the local canned goods market early last week told of the ending of the Southern tomato-packing season, and while estimates of the size of the pack varied somewhat, it was generally conceded that it would be larger than that of last year. Despite bearish estimates, however, there was little selling pressure in evidence, and as buyers showed a general inclination to hold off, there was not a great deal of business transacted in this vegetable during the week. Standard No. 3s were quoted at 85 cents, free on board, Baltimore, though in some instances brokers tried to get 90 cents and failed. No. 10s were in light supply and firmly held around $3. There was a generally good call for peas, the cheaper grades having experienced a better demand. Offerings of all kinds were light and readily taken. Corn was quiet for the most part, but firmly held at recent prices. String beans were also firm and fairly well taken.

There was little activity in the canned fruit end of the market, a condition not strange at this time of the year. Prices were generally firm despite the absence of demand. Trading in canned fish was featureless, there having been little demand for supplies for immediate use.

KNIT GOODS CALL KEEPS UP.

Demand for Merchandise Continues, and Deliveries Are Generally Behind.

Knit goods jobbers are receiving a steady call for hosiery from retailers in various parts of the country, and stocks in their hands are rapidly approaching a point where substantial replenishing will be necessary. But, judging from reports of the cleaned-up condition of stocks in the primary market, it is much easier to talk of replenishing than to get the merchandise. There is practically nothing left in this market for Fall delivery from all accounts, and the selling agents are reported unable to supply the demands made on them. Deliveries are from a week to a month behind in many cases, and this question is causing concern all the way from the mill to the retailer. Predictions are being made that Spring merchandise will be short unless manufacturing conditions improve materially.

In the underwear end of the market the question of deliveries from the mills is also a leading issue. Jobbers are getting a generally active call from the smaller retail trade, in which fleeced and heavy ribbed wear predominates, and the coming of continued cool weather is expected to bring on an unusual rush of duplicates. Stocks are light all the way around as a result of conservative buying for the last two or three years, and it is said that somebody is going to be left when the real rush starts. Some small reorders for Spring have been received from Southern points.

There is considerable talk in the market of secret showings of Fall, 1913, hosiery and underwear, but it is generally believed that nothing definite for the new season will be done until after election.

RUBBER DEMAND SPOTTED.

The consuming demand in the local crude rubber market was rather spotted last week. The low prices quoted on the most-used grades apparently attracted favorable attention from the manufacturing interests, but while in certain quarters of the market trading was active, in others there was little indication of an improved demand. The market was generally steady as to prices, though most of the Para grades were quoted from a cent to two cents below closing prices of the previous week. There was little selling pressure exerted by holders, who appeared to be firm in the belief that the market had touched bottom. As soon as this condition is realized by consumers it is believed that some very active trading will be done before prices begin to mount again. They are said to be at the lowest levels now in some time.

The feature of the week in the foreign markets was the offering of 912 tons of plantation rubber at the regular fortnightly auction that began in London on Tuesday. The sale was completed on Thursday, and while the prices obtained were below those received at the last previous sale, they were said to be higher than expected in the face of the general weakness of the market. Near the close of the week up-river fine showed a gain of ½d in London, and while this advance in itself was not a great factor, it was taken by sellers in the local market as a forerunner of better prices.

WHEAT'S MILD REPLY TO BALKAN ALARMS

COARSE GRAINS GO LIKEWISE

Cotton Picking Proceeds Swiftly as Warm Days Allay Frost Fears—Provisions Higher.

WHEAT.—A more acute situation in the Balkan States seems to have been the salient influence of the week. To this factor can the moderate gain in values be attributed, although it was evident that the market would have been less responsive to the political upheaval in Europe had not sentiment been so bearish heretofore and the short side apparently congested. The conservative element still entertains the opinion that many are becoming unduly alarmed over the war in Southeastern Europe, expressing the belief that the larger powers will not become involved and that the conflict will be localized, but the larger takings of American wheat by foreigners was not lost sight of.

Freight room engagements during the week were very heavy, with some estimates of space equivalent to as high as 200 loads having been taken. Obviously a portion of these reservations may have been for previous sales of wheat, partly for other grain, but the prevalence of a larger wheat export business was not denied. The foreign news served to effectually overshadow the domestic situation, which is not considered as warranting a higher level of quotations by a majority in the trade, even though there has been keen disappointment because of the failure of stuff to accumulate impressively to this time.

The Government report, issued during the week, had only meagre influence, not because the document was analyzed as unimportant, but rather due to the fact that the official figures were about as anticipated. The spring wheat yield was raised 30,000,000 bushels as compared with the promise a month ago, so that an outturn of 330,000,000 bushels was claimed, against a crop of 191,000,000 bushels last year. There were not any statistics issued as to the Winter wheat crop, but many have assumed that the final figures, to be given out in December, will indicate that the yield of the Winter variety of the cereal is about 400,000,000 bushels instead of 390,000,000 bushels, as was last reported. Assuming that there has been no change, a total wheat crop of about 720,000,000 bushels has been raised this season, this being approximately 100,000,000 bushels greater than that of 1911. The quality of the crop is unusually satisfactory.

The foreign crop situation has not really aided the upward movement of values recently, although there has been a revision of estimates concerning the crop of Russia. Some time ago it was stated that that country would raise about 240,000,000 bushels more than the small crop of the preceding season, and that there would be an exportable surplus of close to 200,000,000 bushels, but of late advices have come to hand suggesting that the Russian yield may be only 165,000,000 bushels over last year. Reports relative to the Argentine crop are very satisfactory, with the area in that country increased about 10 per cent., and while, of course, it is realized that the crop has yet to pass through its most critical period, it is thought that the prospects easily favor a yield of about 170,000,000 bushels, or last year's total.

It would, therefore, seem that with the United States having 100,000,000 bushels more than last season, Russia 165,000,000 bushels more, Argentina in prospect for a large crop, the yields in India and Austria-Hungary only slightly under their liberal outturns of the preceding season, that the small deficiencies in other countries will readily be made up. The world's wheat crops have been conservatively figured at about 130,000,000 bushels greater than last year, with the surpluses almost entirely in the big exporting countries. This, obviously, would seem to indicate competition in distribution, rather than a great deal of competitive buying for requirements.

There are many holes undoubtedly still to be filled, and this without question is adequate explanation of the slow accumulations at the important centres. On the other hand, with the knowledge that the crops have been raised, there is confidence expressed that, sooner or later, the supply will overtake the demand, and if the foreign crops not yet harvested equal expectations, the marketing will be made all the more difficult at a later date. Visible stocks in the meantime are not burdensome, with the total amount of wheat in the United States statement 24,000,000 bushels under last year. In and afloat for Europe visible stocks are approximately 5,000,000 less than a year ago.

The movement of the American spring wheat crop was of heavier proportions during the week, but it was evident that hedge pressure from this was well absorbed. The receipts at the principal primary points since July 1 amount to 125,000,000 bushels in round numbers, against 103,000,000 bushels last year. This is an increase of 22,000,000 bushels. On the other hand, shipments were 79,000,000 bushels, against 43,000,000, or an increase of 36,000,000 bushels. The American visible supply during that period had increased only four million bushels, against a gain of thirty millions the preceding year. It would seem, however, that with a lull in the flour inquiry a continued active wheat export demand is necessary to preclude the possibilities of rapid increases in the visible, now that the weight of the new crop is making itself felt. On the other hand, while a good export trade has already been consummated, American wheat retains an important advantage in the matter of quality.

OTHER GRAINS.

CORN.—Many view the corn market as resting on debatable ground at this time, with evidence of a very-much confused sentiment in speculative quarters, and a disposition to await the attitude of farmers toward the distribution of their new crop. The Government report, which was given out during the week, was undoubtedly bearish, and was not without influence, but other factors prevented the market from declining materially. A crop of 3,016,000,000 bushels was suggested by the official figures against the promise a month previously of 2,995,000,000 bushels, and a final outturn last season of 2,531,000,000 bushels. The surprising part of the report was that the condition of the plant was actually raised 0.1 per cent. to 82.2, whereas the common expectation was for a decline to around 80. The figures were taken as evidence that only minor frost damage had occurred, but there were many statements that the crop had been over-rated by the Government, some claiming that the showing was from 125,000,000 to 175,000,000 bushels too high. There were also claims that there was an unusual percentage of soft corn in this season's yield, so that with the wet weather which has prevailed during much of the week, there was a great deal of uncertainty as to the amount of contract corn which would be available for early Winter delivery. The movement of the old crop continues light, but cash prices have been lowered, with a gradual re-adjustment between the high prices of the remnant of the 1911 crop, and the lower levels of the big prospective outturn.

OATS.—During most of the week the tendency of values has been toward a slightly higher level, but this has been due mainly to the strength of other grain. An excellent cash trade has been reported at intervals, with home distribution active and foreign demand of goodly proportions at times, but when prices have advanced fractionally the offerings have been inclined to increase. This is not astonishing with the record crop, and because of the knowledge of large supplies the feeling in the trade is rather adverse to values. The movement during the week was interfered with to some extent by the wet weather in sections, while the free distribution has prevented heavy accumulations, but it is realized that a continued large demand will be necessary to maintain levels. The Government report during the week showed the phenomenal outturn of 1,416,000,000 bushels, against 1,290,000,000 bushels as indicated in September and the comparison with last year's crop of 922,000,000 bushels. The quality of the grain was stated to be 91, against a ten-year average of 86.7. Bearish expectations were fulfilled by the report.

PROVISIONS.

Practically uninterrupted advances were registered during the week, with the list ascending to near the high levels of the season. Hog receipts increased slightly, with no special strength in that market, but speculative demand was aroused and the cash demand in the aggregate was liberal. Reports were that stocks are being depleted rapidly, and while the leading interests were, naturally, the chief sellers as values showed enhancement, offerings were absorbed with little difficulty. It is not thought that the movement of hogs will expand materially before the early part of next year, when the full effect of the big feeding crops will be felt. The foreign situation has been quite strong with more or less nervousness over the political disturbances in Europe. Caution was noticeable at the high levels.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Those interested in the cottonseed oil market were disposed to give more recognition to the persistent advances which were recorded in provision circles. The unmistakable strength of lard reacted favorably on the consuming trade in general with a unanimity of opinion that a betterment had occurred in the consumptive demand for oil. Many were skeptical as to the duration of the high lard levels, but it was realized that with compound lard selling at a big discount it will take a drastic setback in the Western markets to more than temporarily impair the demand for the lard substitute.

Gains in the cottonseed oil market during the week were not large, but it is noteworthy that quotations are nearly ¼c per pound above their low point, despite the pessimism which has reigned, and notwithstanding the very favorable cotton crop conditions. It was not until late in the week that crude sales showed any appreciable increase, but even then the selling by the South was readily absorbed. Inasmuch as consumers have been rather loath to accept the buying side of the market recently, relying upon their surplus stocks, there were assertions that the assimilation of crude offerings will continue liberal for some time.

Premiums of the near month have been well maintained, although as prices advanced to about 6½c level the volume of oil for sale was of larger proportions. Conditions were generally looked upon as quite satisfactory for the consumption of oil as far as edible purposes are concerned not only in this country but also abroad, but the lower descriptions of cottonseed oil do not seem to be energetically sought at present. Sentiment in speculative quarters is more diversified than for some time, but there is still aversion toward following the upward tendency due to the belief that the cotton crop is maturing under more favorable conditions than had been hoped for a while ago, and that with more activity at crushing centres it will be difficult to bring about important advances. Of course, if there is a broadening in the consuming trade, accumulations may be deferred until a later date.

COTTON.

The resiliency which the cotton market displayed during the last week was almost negligible. When prices tended upward, there was heavier selling encountered, so that advances were of brief duration and lower levels were reached on each successive movement. Values are now at about the base of the movement, despite the partial correcting of a very firm technical position. Moreover, there has been heavy absorption credited to spinners, yet the quotations that now prevail are practically ⅝ cent per pound under the best of this month.

Thee dominant influence has been tne continuation of very favorable weather conditions over most sections of the cotton-producing area. Climatic changes have been such as to enable the plant to mature with very little deterioration. Temperatures have been seasonable and precipitation not incessant, so as to literally eliminate any basis for complaint. Under the circumstances, picking has made rapid progress, the movement of cotton has increased so that it is not very much smaller than last year, and in the meantime the area left susceptible to frost is diminishing with each day of suitable weather.

Nervousness as to the frost date is still a factor in sentiment, and it is undeniable that low temperatures are to be deferred to as late a date as possible to ascertain the best results. However, the apprehension of cold weather is gradually subsiding as the average frost date draws near rather than increasing, serving to create the impression that a fairly good crop has already been practically secured. The mooted question now is whether the season's yield will be materially in excess of the large crop of 1908-09 or not. Many reports have come to hand intimating that future deterioration is likely to be in the quality of the crop rather than in the quantitative yield, unless a heavy frost overtakes the belt in the next week or so.

The South entered the situation as a potent factor during the week. Selling emanating from cotton-producing regions seemed to bear testimony of the excellent advancement of the plant. Hedge selling was quite active intermittently, especially when strength was displayed. This was in the face of the many advices noting a liberal inquiry from consuming sources, and could only be interpreted as indicating that farmers were not altogether displeased with the outlook and current quotations. As prices receded, the customary statements of lighter offerings from first hands were forthcoming, but in conservative quarters such declarations were not seriously taken, it being thought that there was more of the usual "distress" cotton to be marketed, while there was little incentive to hold back supplies against almost ideal weather.

It is interesting to note the absence of disparaging advices relative to the consuming trade. The textile industry in this country is unquestionably sharing the general prosperity which is being felt, so that it is commonly predicted that the consumption by American manufacturers will surpass the record of last year, some estimates being ventured of 6,000,000 bales to be used in this country. Comparatively few complaints are received from the other side, with the generality of advices toward optimism. Manchester, specifically, is enjoying a large business, and in partial confirmation of this is the active calling of cotton by England's spinners. Some caution is noted, lest the Balkan disturbance spread and involve the larger countries, but as yet the more radical of views are not being accepted.

Apparently the absorption by spinners from week to week will have to increase, however, to convince the trade at large that last year's consumption of American cotton will be exceeded. So far this season the weekly takings have been irregular, sometimes under last year and at other times in excess, but in the aggregate not large enough to substantiate the more optimistic opinions. It is not improbable, however, that this surface inconsistency is adequately explained by the surplus stocks which spinners have and are utilizing. About the same conditions prevail in foreign quarters, but it is generally agreed that while the stocks are above last season, they are not burdensome, and, moreover, the holdings of the higher grades of cotton are not believed to be important.

Sentiment in speculative circles is inclined to the bear side, and would probably be more pessimistic, but for the unsettled crop ideas and the uncertainty as to the appearance and seriousness of the first real frost. Many in the trade are anticipating that some of the large interests will renew their aggressive tactics for a lower set of quotations in the event of little or no deterioration from present prospects. Cognizance of the bright trade outlook is being taken into consideration, and also the danger of an oversold market, but there is still aversion toward accepting the constructive side of cotton values, at least until more of this season's yield passes to consuming channels. Assertions are made of a bearish statistical position of cotton for the immediate future, based on the larger visible supply, the fairly large crop promise, the heavier stocks at home and abroad at the outset of the season, and the knowledge of larger crops in prospect for other producing countries.

ALLIS-CHALMERS COMPANY

New York, October 7, 1912.

To the Holders of Certificates of Deposit of Central Trust Company of New York for first mortgage bonds and preferred and common stock of the Allis-Chalmers Company deposited under the plan and agreement of reorganization dated March 18, 1912.

Referring to our circular dated March 28, 1912, and the copy of a letter of D. W. Call, former President of the Allis-Chalmers Company, dated March 23, annexed to such circular, this Committee reports that it has continued its investigation of the business and operations of the Allis-Chalmers Company, and now presents the following facts and figures:

Operations from January 1, 1912, to August 31, 1912, by months, (as reported by the Company January 1 to April 6; and by the Receiver from April 7 to August 31,) including Bullock Electric Manufacturing Company.

Profits or Losses—after charging all costs of operation, maintenance and depreciation, but not deducting interest on bonds:

	Profits.	Losses.
January		$29,620
February		22,258
March 1 to April 6		38,783
April 7 to May 31		1,555
June	$25,642
July	66,984
August	48,471

The average monthly sales billed during the last three months are in excess of the average of the first five months by 17%.

The average monthly orders booked for the last three months are in excess of the average of the first five months by 64%.

December 31, 1911	$3,453,085
May 31, 1912	3,689,506
August 31, 1912	5,195,069

The Receiver, Otto H. Falk, (who succeeded Mr. Call in June,) also advises that overhead, administration and selling expenses have been reduced by an average of about $40,000 per month as compared with several years last past.

FINANCIAL CONDITION:

Current Assets and Liabilities of the Receiver; the Allis-Chalmers Company and the Bullock Electric Manufacturing Company as of August 31, 1912, as reported by Receiver Otto H. Falk:

CURRENT ASSETS:

The surplus is $198,000 in excess of that reported by the Company on December 31, 1911.

The foregoing values of Receivables and Inventory are upon the basis of a revision made by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co., Chartered Accountants, in a report dated December 20, 1911, to which reference was made in the circular of the Bondholders' Committee, dated December 22, 1911.

The Receiver also reports the active and hearty co-operation of the heads of all departments in an effort to secure economies without the sacrifice of efficiency, and also to secure an increased volume of business.

With a continuance of improvement in conditions, as shown by the foregoing figures, and the additional working capital provided for under the Plan of reorganization, the reorganized company, starting with no mortgage debt or fixed interest charges, should show a steadily increasing volume of net profits.

The foreclosure suits in the various jurisdictions are all at issue and will be pressed for decrees of foreclosure and sale at as early a date as practicable.

DEPOSITS.		TOTAL ISSUE OUTSTANDING.

Five Per Cent. Secured Gold Notes

Dated January 1, 1912 — Due July 1, 1915

Interest payable January 1 and July 1
Authorized and Issued $10,000,000

THE EQUITABLE TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Trustee

The notes are coupon in form, in denomination $1,000, and may be registered as to principal or exchanged for fully registered notes. Registered and coupon notes are interchangeable.

All or any part of this issue at any time outstanding may be redeemed, upon ninety days' notice, at 102 and accrued interest.

These Notes are a first lien on all the outstanding stock (except qualifying shares) of the George's Creek and Cumberland Railroad Company and the Connellsville and State Line Railway Company, under whose charters the important Connellsville extension was built. These companies have no mortgage debt and the Indenture securing these Notes provides that no such debt may be incurred while any of the Notes are outstanding.

The Connellsville extension, together with the equipment so far provided, has cost more than $13,000,000, and comprises a low grade line about 87 miles long, extending from Cumberland, Maryland, on the main line of The Western Maryland Railway to a connection with the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad (New York Central System) at Connellsville, Pennsylvania. A 99 year traffic alliance between these two companies assures this line a heavy tonnage, and it is confidently expected that it will add materially to the earnings of The Western Maryland Railway Company.

The proceeds of these Notes have been, and are to be, applied to the acquisition of new equipment and to extensions and improvements upon the completion of which the Company should be earning twice the charges on these Notes, without taking into consideration any earnings on the new extension to Connellsville.

The Notes are followed by $10,000,000 4% Preferred Stock, on which dividends are being regularly paid, and $49,429,230 Common Stock. These stocks have a present market value of upwards of $35,000,000.

URGE LAND [illegible] FOR EVERY STATE

Taft Commissioners on Farmers' Credit Return from Studying European Systems.

CENTRAL DEBENTURE BANK

National Agricultural Body Recommended to Get Needed Laws Through Legislatures.

Edward V. Breitung and Ralph Ingalls, two members of the commission appointed by President Taft to inquire into the system of co-operative agricultural banking in Europe, returned Saturday on the White Star liner Adriatic, after having been away two months. During their stay abroad Mr. Breitung and Mr. Ingalls collected the information placed at their disposal at the various embassies through the active co-operation of Myron T. Herrick, United States Ambassador to France, and they also personally investigated the land banking systems in vogue in Germany, France, and England.

In England they received valuable assistance from Sir Frederick A. Nicholson, Commissioner of Fisheries, who was a member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council in India from 1897 to 1902 and was one of the organizers of the agricultural banks in India, which have since been of great service to the farmers in moving the crops.

It is proposed, according to Mr. Breitung, that there should be an organization in every State, with headquarters in one of the Western cities, possibly Cleveland, in compliment to Ambassador Herrick, who first started the movement.

"The committee, which consists of Edwin Chamberlain of San Antonio, Texas; Ralph Ingalls, and myself, arrived in Paris three months ago," said Mr. Breitung last night at the Hotel St. Regis. "Ambassador Herrick immediately organized the committee into a working machine. I wish to say that we all shared equally in the expense of the work. Mr. Chamberlain was delegated to make a trip through the principal nations of Europe for the purpose of interviewing Government officials and officers of the agricultural societies and land banks and to collect and forward to Paris copies of laws, charters, constitutions, articles of association, and by-laws of the various institutions. I also took part in this branch of the work. Headquarters were opened in the American Embassy.

"Mr. Ingalls took charge of this with a staff of translators and stenographers, and as soon as the material came in it was translated into English, classified under proper heads, and reduced into form for reports. At the same time the individual reports of the American Ministers and Ambassadors on farm credits in their respective countries were forwarded to the Embassy, so an enormous amount of information became available.

"Visitors from America and other countries came in daily, and some of the foremost men of the United States indicated their willingness to help the movement. Valuable assistance was rendered by Herbert Myrich of Springfield, Mass., and by Sir Frederick A. Nicholson of England, who is perhaps the best authority on land credit. The English Government allowed us to read the report it will soon publish on land and agricultural banks of Germany. This report is being compiled by J. H. Cahill. He has spent nearly two years on it.

"We tried to keep a clear and distinct line in our work between the agricultural co-operative credit societies and the land credit banks, as they are in fact entirely separate and distinct in their operations. The co-operative credit societies are organized to grant short-time loans, and require only character or personal credit. The land credit institutions, on the other hand, grant long-time loans, and, of course, require mortgages. It is of the utmost importance to keep this distinction in mind.

"A co-operative credit society is an association of farmers who borrow money on their collective guarantee to lend to their members. Herr Frederick W. Raiffeisen of Germany was the founder of the first one, and the system is now called by his name. Societies exist in every European nation, and in Germany, France, and Italy they are practically the only banks the farmers patronize for short-time loans.

"Their object is to enable farmers, or market gardeners, to obtain advances of money at a low rate of interest for application to reproductive purposes.

"They do not advance money to pay debts or for purposes which bring in no return. They only advance money which the borrower can profitably use as additional capital in his business.

"While the ordinary banks are generally willing to advance money to large farmers who can offer them substantial security, they do not consider the business of small cultivators worth attention."

In organizing an Agricultural Co-operative Credit Society there are certain principles, rules, and regulations which are of the greatest importance.

UNLIMITED LIABILITY OF MEMBERS.

This means that all the members are responsible for the repayment of money borrowed for the purposes of the society. This collective responsibility is the security whereby the necessary capital is obtained. Unlimited liability may seem to involve risk, but, as will be seen, the operations of the society are so carefully safeguarded that there is practically no risk of loss.

In order further to lesson any risk of loss, the sum to be lent to any individual member, without a special resolution of a general meeting, can be limited, and also the total amount to be loaned.

The Raiffeisen Agricultural Banks Association of Germany, which has now over 3,000 affiliated societies, reports that neither member nor creditor has lost a farthing by them since the establishment of the movement in 1849.

The Irish Agricultural Organization Society, which has over 200 affiliated credit banks, and the credit societies in England, can also claim similar exemption from losses.

It is necessary for the success of the society that no person shall be admitted as a member who has not a high character for sobriety, honesty, and integrity.

A small entrance fee is charged on joining. This is fixed by the committee.

In order that members shall be fully acquainted with one another, it is advisable to limit the area of each society to a small district. When one parish is too small, two or three can be joined together.

The society is strictly co-operative. It is managed by a committee elected by the members at the annual meeting.

COMMITTEE.

The duties of the committee are to appoint a Secretary, subject to the approval of the general meeting; admit members, grant loans, and fix the rate of interest for borrowers and depositors.

LOANS.

Loans are granted to members only and soley for reproductive purposes, such as the purchase of manure, seeds, feeding stuffs, sheep, cows, pigs, poultry, greenhouses, &c.

Ample time is allowed for borrowers to make their profits out of loans before repayment.

SURETIES.

Every applicant for a loan must offer, in addition to his own personal security, that of one or two friends who are willing to guarantee to repay the loan in full, with interest, to the society should the applicant himself fail to do so.

The committee decides what the number of sureties is to be, and must satisfy itself as to their reliability.

DEPOSITORS.

The society will receive deposits and pay at least 3 per cent. interest.

By depositing their savings in an Agricultural Co-operative Credit Society, men and women would be helping their neighbors by circulating money in their own districts.

The deposit department also affords a useful opportunity for richer people to assist in this movement for raising the tone of village life without the bestowal of monetary gifts, which it is believed will be fully taken advantage of.

The land credit banks are of two kinds. The oldest forms are the Landschaften. These are associations of landowners which lend only to members. They raise money for this purpose by bond issues. These bonds are secured by the general assets of the association, the underlying mortgages which the farmers have given for their loans, and finally by the collective and unlimited liability of all their members. They are not run for profit and they pay no dividends.

The second form of land credit bank is the joint stock company, made familiar to investors by the great mortgage bond companies of New York City. The European land banks, however, are subject to State supervision as rigorous as that exercised over our National banks, and are allowed to do business only in accordance with strict regulations. The chief provisions are these:

The amount of a loan cannot exceed a certain percentage of the value of the mortgaged premises. The highest is two-thirds and the lowest one-half. The debentures in circulation cannot exceed in amount the underlying mortgages, and a definite limit is fixed as to the amount of debentures that a company may issue. This is usually twenty times the capital and surplus.

But pehaps the most distinguishing feature of a European land bank is the fact that mortgages are not usually repayable in a lump at the end of three or five years, but run on for thirty to seventy-five years, and are reducible by small annual installments in the nature of an annuity. One-half of 1 per cent. added to the interest charge will wipe out a debt in about fifty-six years. That is about the average life of a mortgage loan in Europe, and at the end of that time the property is returned to the owner free and clear of all incumbrances.

The committee recommends that a National agricultural organization society be formed and encourage similar organizations in each State, with the object of getting laws passed by the Legislature authorizing the forming of co-operative credit societies and "landschaften" and credit banks as in Germany. There should also be a central bank for the handling of the debentures.

WHOLESALE PRICE CHANGES.

There was a sharp decline in the number of fluctuations shown in Dun's list of minimum wholesale prices quoted in the New York and near-by markets last week. Only forty-eight changes were indicated, of which thirty-four were advances and fourteen declines. This was the lowest number of declines recorded in several weeks. The fluctuations of the week were largely confined again to foodstuffs, metals, and drugs, chemicals, and oils. Metals continued to head the list from the standpoint of strength, having shown thirteen advances and only one decline. Foodstuffs followed with eight and seven respectively. Drugs, chemicals, and oils showed five and four. Five of the advances and eight declines showed levels lower than those quoted a year ago this time.

The changes for the week, with comparative prices last week and last year, follow:

Lower Duty on Yellow Oil Paper—Tobacco Importers Partly Sustained.

The Board of United States General Appraisers has sutained a protest filed by Thomas B. Downing & Co. regarding merchandise invoiced as yellow oil paper having a cotton back. The paper is waterproof, and dutiable, it was contended, at the rate of 35 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 415, Tariff act of 1909, as wrapping paper not specially provided for. The Collector exacted duty on the merchandise at the rate of 5 cents a pound and 30 per cent. ad valorem, under Paragraph 411, as a manufacture of coated paper. Judge Fischer finds that the Collector erred in his classification, and must be reversed.

Several protests were decided relating to tobacco importations. The question at issue was whether the tobacco was wrapper or filler. The following importers were sustained: A. Musica & Co., Ruy Suarez & Co., A. Sentaella & Co., and F. Lazene & Co. These claims were overruled: Berriman Brothers and F. Lozano, Son & Co.

The board overruled the following protests as not being properly supported: Alexander Murphy & Co., F. H. Shallus, P. H. Petry & Co., the Emery, Bird, Thayer Dry Goods Company, and Berriman Brothers.

SUPREME COURT TO DECIDE BIG CASES

Inter-State Commerce Law and Anti-Trust Act Involved at Coming Session.

COURT WILL CONVENE TO-DAY

State Rates Case May Lead to New Legislation to Modify the Powers of the Commission.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—With important decisions to be handed down affecting the interpretation of the inter-State commerce law and the Anti-Trust act, the Supreme Court of the United States will convene for the Fall term on Monday. Decisions in several cases may be expected before the end of the month, as they have been pending before the court since the Spring term.

The general expectation that the Supreme Court would give a new and far-reaching exposition of the status of Presidential electoral candidates as affected by the party system will probably not be realized.

The fight was made by the Taft men to exclude from the regular Republican column on the primary ballot electoral nominees who had announced their intention to support the Bull Moose candidate. After the primaries, in which Col Roosevelt was overwhelmingly successful, the controversy adjusted itself when two separate electoral tickets were put forward.

A case of international interest will be the appeal from the decision of the Federal Court at Trenton, N. J., denying a writ of habeas corpus to Porter Charlton, who has long been held under charges of killing his wife in Italy. The State Department has refused to support Italy's demand for extradition, the department holding that Italy has failed to carry out the United States Government's interpretation of the extradition treaty when the accused criminal sought for by the United States in Italy was an Italian subject.

A decision, expected at an early date, may throw new light on the Supreme Court's application of the principles it announced in dissolving the Tobacco and the Standard Oil cases. This is known as the anthracite pool suit, involving nearly all the railroads hauling anthracite out of Pennsylvania. One case to be reargued is the cotton pool case brought by the Government against James A. Patten, Eugene G. Scales, Frank B. Hayne, and William P. Brown, in the Southern District of New York.

Of equal importance in reference to the Inter-State Commerce act are forty-five cases affecting the authority of the Inter-State Commerce Commission in particular, and the Federal Government in general, over rates exclusively within a State. Thirty-six of these cases come from Missouri, with the others divided between Minnesota, Oregon, Arkansas, Kentucky, and West Virginia. The general principle is set forth in the Missouri cases, where a two-cent rate within the State has been opposed by the railroads on the ground that it jeopardized them before the Inter-State Commerce Commission for discriminating in favor of the local traffic as opposed to the through freight schedules fixed at a higher rate in accordance with the permission granted by the Inter-State Commerce Commission.

It is believed that this railroad decision will figure prominently in new legislation at this and succeeding sessions of Congress for extending or modifying the Inter-State Commerce Act. Heretofore the position of the States has scarcely been questioned, that they had exclusive and sovereign power in fixing rates within their borders. The Federal contention in this case, however, which has been sustained by the Federal Court in Minnesota, is that it is impossible to distinguish under modern conditions between local and through traffic. State control of local rates tends to upset through traffic as regulated by the Federal Government, claim the Federal attorneys, and it is the extent of this inter-relation that will be decided by the high tribunal.

The cotton pool case refers specifically to the cotton crop of 1909 and 1910, when the defendants are charged with having tried to secure such promises for future delivery in the last four months of the crop year as would enable them to run prices up indefinitely. The exact amounts of cotton to be purchased by the defendants were not alleged by the Government, the crux of the Government's charge being that the contracts were for purchase without idea of manufacture simply for reselling in a speculative way.

The Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York has already sustained demurrers to the more important counts, and the case comes before the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error. One demurrer was sustained on the ground that conspiracy was not alleged. Another on the ground that the Government had failed to show direct effect on inter-State commerce.

The anthracite pool case is complicated by cross appeals. As the case now stands the lower court adjudged the Reading Company and a number of railways operating through the Temple Iron Company were in conspiracy, and issued the injunction sought. The other charges were dismissed, but under cross-appeal the whole case will be reviewed by the Supreme Court.

BANISHING WARTS.

In many rural communities there are to be found men and women who might very properly be termed "wart chasers." These persons are usually old, and are regarded by the young with mingled feelings of awe and veneration. The usual procedure in order to "chase" or exorcise the wart is to moisten the finger with the tip of the tongue and then rub the offending excrescence, at the same time muttering an uncanny spell. There are many persons ready to testify that warts have spontaneously disappeared following such an exorcism.

The Medical Record prints an editorial note relating to the spontaneous and simultaneous disappearance of warts from the hand, other than the hand treated for the removal of these disfigurations. The writer says:

"The statement often made that removal by any material method of warts upon one hand may result in spontaneous disappearance of the warts on the opposite hand may be received in various ways. We may answer that such cures have never been subjected to rigorous analysis, or that they have resulted from mere coincidence or from mental impression. The first professional explanation to suggest itself would be bound up in a reflex mechanism, but the fact that warts are clearly due to contagion tends to invalidate such a supposition.

"At a recent session of the Aertzlicher Verein of Hamburg, Delbanco stated that he had had under treatment a young woman with numerous hard warts of both hands, especially massed about the joints, which rendered curettage inexpedient, since general narcosis would have been necessary. Despite the fact that the x-ray was not a dependable resource the author gave it a trial, limiting the first sessions to the right hand. The warts soon began to show evidence of involution not only on the right hand but on its fellow as well. Both hands became free at the same time. At least two specialists, Walsh of Prague and Galewski of Dresden, have seen this crossed result follow curettage on one side.

"Delbanco names three possibilities to explain the disappearance of the warts on the untreated hand. First, coincidental spontaneous disappearance which can almost be excluded from consideration; second, the reflex angioneurotic theory, (Kreibich,) and, third, an immunizing or lytic process occurring purely through the circulating blood."

BURGLARY [illegible] AHEAD OF THE COLD

Flat House Raiders Arrive This Season Several Weeks in Advance of the Schedule.

DR. DAVIS A VICTIM AGAIN

Madison Avenue House of Physician Who Lost $5,000 in Jewelry Last January Ransacked for Bric-a-Brac.

The annual round of burglaries which New York has come to expect started this year several months in advance of what last year's activities had led the prognosticators to set as the opening date. Last season these criminal exploits did not reach their height until February, but already when Summer was over this year the "squeal books" of the West 100th and 125th Street Stations, in the centre of the "burglary belt," were bulging with complaints of midnight visitors. The record of no arrests, moreover, which seemed to have been firmly fixed last year, is threatened already with duplication. As usual, the families that have been robbed are voicing their distrust of the ability of the police to help them find their stolen goods.

Dr. J. E. L. Davis, whose residence at 743 Madison Avenue was robbed last year at about the time that the house of J. P. Morgan, Jr., was rifled, may be said to have inaugurated the burglary season. During the first week of September, while Dr. Davis was seeking in London for some of the jewels which had been stolen from him last season, his house was entered and thoroughly ransacked again.

The burglars, however, started their operations in the house of F. E. Sousa, next door, at 745 Madison Avenue. From the appearance of the place, after the robbery was discovered, the thieves must have camped there for several days. The wine cellar was plentifully drawn from, all the sofas and beds, although not stolen, had been put to use and the silver plate was quite thoroughly removed.

After tiring of their residence at 745 Madison Avenue, the thieves broke through the roof and penetrated into the home of Dr. Davis. As most of the jewelry of Dr. and Mrs. Davis had been removed by another thief the foregoing season, this party found little to take away. They made up for the dearth of loot, however, by bursting all the locks, prying open all the drawers and removing several valuable pieces of bric-à-brac and small furniture. Dr. Davis had profited by his former experience with a polite butler named George Monroe, now doing time, and had requested a friend to go through his house every week during his absence. It is believed that the visit of this friend frightened the burglars away before they had completed their explorations.

The manner in which the burglar who stole $5,000 worth of jewelry from the residence of Dr. Davis was caught was disclosed for the first time yesterday. The robbery occurred in January, and in June neither police nor private detectives had brought in any results.

In the latter month $15,000 worth of jewelry was stolen from the Studebaker residence, and the thief was caught at Rye, N. Y. Dr. Davis thought he saw points of similarity in the two burglaries and called on Deputy Commissioner Dougherty. Shown a picture of the burglar, he immediately recognized the butler with fine references whom his wife had engaged the day before his own jewels were stolen and who had disappeared the following afternoon. But none of the property was recovered, although Monroe confessed to having disposed of much of it in London pawnshops.

The district west of Fifth Avenue, from 110th to 120th Street, is not going to be slighted this season by the gangs who operated there last year with such success that scarcely a flat in the district was without its robbery and the residents took to keeping watchdogs.

The residence of J. Blum, at 203 West 117th Street, was broken into and several hundred dollars' worth of clothing and silver stolen, and in the apartment house on the southeast corner of St. Nicholas Avenue and 114th Street two families were robbed. On the opposite corner, at 107 West 114th Street, Adolph Levine and H. Smith were visited during the night last week. No signs of these thieves have been detected.

The apartment of Isaac Eisler, 229 West Ninety-seventh Street, also was broken into last week. This house is in the same neighborhood as the co-operative dormitories of the Columbia students which were ransacked thoroughly last Spring by nimble thieves, who on some occasions took clothes from the lockers of a dozen students in a single afternoon without detection.

The fact that robberies have already begun in the districts where they grew to the dimensions of an epidemic last year is pointed to by the inhabitants as proof of the small results obtained by police work, and following practically all the recent robberies private agencies have been engaged to detect the burglars.

FARLEY IN HEALTH CRUSADE.

Cardinal Fixes "Tuberculosis Days" for Schools and Churches.

Cardinal Farley issued directions to the Catholic clergy of the New York Diocese yesterday that Oct. 27, or some date thereabouts, shall be observed in the various parishes as "Tuberculosis Day." The Cardinal also directed that some day during the current week be set apart in the parochial schools of Manhattan for proper observance of this day.

Interest in Catholic church circles in the efforts now being made to check the "white plague" was promoted by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which organization is also responsible for the observance of Tuberculosis Day in the public schools. Secretary Frank Mann of the society is in receipt of a communication from the Cardinal in which, after acknowledging the work of the organization, he says:

"I have become deeply interested in the subject of tuberculosis, and have followed with attention your various endeavors, by lecture and exhibition, to lessen the influence which this dread disease has had upon the poor and weakly of our country. It is a great consolation to learn that you have been able to decrease the number of victims by proper preventive methods; to win back many whom its fatal touch seemed to destroy in the prime of life, by restorative means; to ameliorate the suffering of so many by your sanatoria, and thus stretch out the years of human life. Your work must commend itself to every human soul, as it aims to free humanity from an evil that has blighted many a family and to destroy a source of contagion that knows no barrier.

"It did not take over twenty years to make smallpox, which had countless victims in its day, almost an unknown terror. This was accomplished through local sanitary efforts, and we may expect, if your organization can prevail upon all to use personal sanitary efforts, to see the white plague banished from our midst in the not distant future.

"The campaign of education and regulation must continue until all shall know their duty and have determination to push forward all preventive efforts against its breeding places, so that neither residence nor personal habit shall give occasion to its development."

FARLEY TO AID IMMIGRANTS.

Meeting Called to Map Out a Plan of Work.

Announcement was made to all Catholic societies yesterday of plans made by Cardinal Farley to help Catholic immigrants arriving at this port and settling in this archdiocese. A call was issued for a meeting at the Hotel Astor for next Wednesday evening, when the Cardinal himself will outline a plan of work.

The movement grows out of a preliminary conference held a fortnight ago, attended by about seventy-five officers of fraternal and parochial organizations, presided over by Mgr. Lavelle of the Cathedral. The meeting next Wednesday night will be under the auspices of the New York County Federation of Catholic Societies. The invitations given out yesterday in Catholic churches were to all parish societies of men, and also to all men in all churches, whether members of [illegible] or not.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Oct. 13.—Politics has been brought to fever heat here by the introduction of an independent candidate for Mayor in Walter Kidde, one of the representatives of the Third Ward, the "silk-stocking district," in the Town Council. Friends of Ernest C. Hinck, the present Mayor, and the regular Republican nominee, assert that the candidacy of Kidde is inspired not by a desire to elect the Third Ward Councilman, but to effect the defeat of Mayor Hinck by dividing the Republican vote and allowing the Democratic candidate, W. Locke Rockwell, a Newark lawyer, to slip in. They declare, however, that this will not be accomplished. All who would vote for Kidde, they say, would vote against Hinck and for Rockwell anyhow.

Hinck left two weeks ago for a European trip to investigate the Imhoff system of sewage disposal at Essen, Germany. Before going he said that if his record did not warrant his re-election anything he would say if he remained at home would have no effect on the result. After he had gone Kidde's candidacy was announced. It is reported now that Hinck will hurry back and engage in the contest.

SPEEDED TO SAVE LIFE.

WESTERLY, R. I., Oct. 13.—There seemed little prospect to-day of saving the ninety-one-ton New York steamboat John B. Dallas, which ran ashore during a southwesterly gale last night east of Quonochontaug life-saving station. The vessel was loaded with stove coal from New York for Block Island and the pounding she received in the choppy seas opened her seams. She was run ashore to prevent foundering.

Captain Beckman, his crew of three, and a passenger, White Peterson of New London, were taken off in the breeches buoy by the Quonochontaug life savers. Within two hours after the vessel was first sighted in the breakers by a surfman the life savers had a line across her. They had to take their apparatus two miles along the beach and cross a wide creek. It is believed that part of the cargo can be saved.

CATCH MARAUDER ON HOTEL FIRE ESCAPE

HE HAD A KEY TO A ROOM

This Keeps Judge from Holding Him for Attempted Burglary, but Indecent Postal Cards Are His Undoing.

Guests on the third floor of the Hotel Algonquin, 59 West Forty-fourth Street, were aroused from their slumbers early yesterday morning by the screams of a woman. One of them notified the office of the disturbance, and the manager of the hotel, Frank Case, was called.

The manager hastened to the elevator, where was marshaled an array of bellboys and porters. Mr. Case entered the elevator with his excited followers, was shot up to the third floor, and rushed to the room whence the screams had come. It was the room of Miss Charlotte Walker, the actress. Flinging the door wide open, Manager Case saw the frightened woman sitting up in bed, and next caught sight of the moving figure of a man on the fire-escape.

The man began to ascend the fire-escape as the manager, followed by the bell boys and porters, made a rush for the window. Pressed close by his pursuers, the man mounted to platform after platform until he reached the eleventh floor. There, where the roof is reached next by a narrow iron ladder, the fugitive decided that the game was lost. He calmly awaited his pursuers.

Sergt. McNierney of the East Fifty-first Street Station was summoned and placed the captive under arrest. The prisoner gave his name as Paul Renaud, a Frenchman, 37 years old. Unable to speak English, the prisoner made it understand that he had been in this country but eight days. Later in the morning he was arraigned before Magistrate McQuade in the Harlem Police Court charged with attempted burglary by Mr. Case.

From the story Manager Case told in court it was learned that Renaud called at the hotel on Saturday afternoon and registered. When he was informed of the rates of the hotel, he declared he was unable to pay so much, and turned away from the clerk's desk, it was thought, to leave the hotel. That was the last seen of him until he was discovered on the fire escape outside Miss Walker's window.

Mr. Case further related that he had searched the prisoner and found a key to a room on the ninth floor. He was unable to explain to the court how Renaud obtained the key, and on that account Magistrate McQuade would not entertain a charge of attempted burglary against the prisoner, who, he believed, must have been a guest of the hotel.

The manager then told Magistrate McQuade that indecent postal cards had been found in the possession of the man, and this statement was corroborated by Sergt. McNierney, so the Magistrate held him on that charge in $500 bail for examination Tuesday.

Miss Walker, who, Case said, had informed him that she was awakened by the presence of Renaud at her dresser and had seen him run to the fire escape when she gave the alarm, will appear against him.

Through an interpreter Renaud declared he was not guilty, but in default of bail he was locked up to await examination.

FLEES JAIL IN AN AUTO.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 13.—Timothy O'Toole of New York, a prisoner at the county jail on a theft charge, who escaped from jail last night in a jailer's automobile, is still missing, but the automobile was recovered in New York to-day.

O'Toole, who is a chauffeur by occupation, had been acting as driver of the car for several weeks, although a prisoner. Under the pretext of examining the mechanism of the car last night, he sped away before any one realized his object.

THE 1912 TRAVEL BOOK OF ADVENTURE
The Flowing Road
Adventuring on the Great Rivers of South America
By CASPAR WHITNEY
Mr. Whitney's expedition to reach the unknown land at the head of the Orinoco River, through the unfriendly Indians and almost impassable natural barriers, when all save one treacherous native companion had fled, is a chapter in travel adventure which has rarely been equalled. He also tells of his five separate overland and river expeditions into the wonderful heart of South America. These were largely by canoe, and on streams more or less connected; hence, the significance of the title, "The Flowing Road."

William T. Richards
A Brief Outline of His Life and Work
By HARRISON S. MORRIS
United States Commissioner to the Exhibition at Rome, 1911, etc.
Everybody knows "a Richards," with its magnificent surf and towering cliffs, but nobody knows much about the artist, William T. Richards, himself. This is remedied by a brief, sympathetic biography by Harrison S. Morris, whose many connections with American Art make him the appropriate author of a life of the great marine painter, a life full of charm and action and deeply connected with the new currents of American painting. The pictures of this master of marine painting have been carefully sifted for examples which illustrate his wonderful renderings of the sea, and these are profusely reproduced in this volume. Every American who is proud of native art will want these wonderful pictures.

THE BOOK OF THE WOMAN QUESTION
The Advance of Woman
By MRS. JANE JOHNSTONE CHRISTIE
This remarkable volume treats of the rise of the feminine from the earliest times down to the present. It is not an argument for woman's rights, but it is a most convincing picture of her proper place in the whole scheme of things. No man or woman who favorably or unfavorably regards the present agitation seriously can afford to ignore this volume.
12mo. Cloth, $1.50 net. Postpaid, $1.65.

By CHARLES EGBERT CRADDOCK
An impassioned romance of a man who conquers self, and who by his chivalrous devotion passes through an ordeal to happiness. The author touches on all the elemental human passions—there is the jealousy and hatred of strong men, a mother's love for her child, the consecrated ardor of a great nature, and finally tender human love.
Frontispiece in color. $1.20 net. Postpaid, $1.32.

A Jewel of the Seas
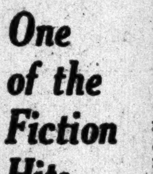
By Jessie Kaufman



This delightful novel is a perfect picture of Hawaiian social life. When Commodore and Mrs. Chandler arrive at Honolulu on their yacht, Gelda, they are entertained lavishly and arouse not a little curiosity among the natives. At one of the native fetes which is given in their honor a famous jewel disappears. Thereupon follow a number of other curious incidents. Altogether this is one of the brightest stories of modern Hawaii.

LEONARD MERRICK AND HIS BOOKS

To read Leonard Merrick's books is to find complete entertainment and mental stimulus of unusual flavor. One book whets the appetite for another and interest is as unflagging as a child's craving for fairy tales, a child whose only and most flattering comment at the end of a story is embodied in one word, "more!"
